Holze Crosse &

PREFACE.

WHILE consulting Hickes's Thesaurus, my attention was suddenly attracted by a reference to an Old English homily on the Finding of the Cross. Ascertaining that it had never been printed, and hoping that Old English students, who had read the beautiful legend of "Elene, or the Invention of the Cross," in Kemble's edition of the Vercelli Poems, might like to have a prose version of the story, I determined to edit it for the Early English Text Society. This homily is the first piece in our collection of Legends of the Holy Rood. It is printed from a MS. in the Bodleian Library, Auct. F. iv. 32.

While engaged upon this, I recollected that I had seen or heard of other Old English legends, and as soon as I could procure transcripts, I put them into print. Thus the work gradually grew larger and larger¹ while passing through the press, and a tolerably complete collection of legends, in an English form, concerning the Invention and Exposition of the Cross (celebrated by two festivals of the Christian Church) will be found in the present volume.

A few Cross-poems have been added, one of which deserves special mention, namely, the "Dispute between Mary and the Cross" (p. 131).

¹ This fact will account for the strange arrangement of some of the pieces.

After the version from the Vernon MS. was printed, another and rather longer copy turned up in Royal MS. 18 A x, with some additional verses on the "Festivals of the Church," in the same metre as the Cross-poem. These I have added in an Appendix.

Of the second poem, on the "Finding of the Cross" (p. 19), I have printed two versions—one from the Ashmolean MS. 43, Bodleian Library, of the latter part of the thirteenth century, which has been collated with an imperfect copy in Harl. MS. 2277, of the same date, which contains lives of the saints, &c.; the other from the Vernon MS., fourteenth century.

As the history of Cyriacus, the brother of Stephen the martyr, is included in the legends relating to the "Finding of the Cross," I have also added two versions of the saint's life.

The third legend (p. 62) contains the history of the material out of which the Rood was made, from the time it was a pippin until it was wrought into a cross¹. It also relates the story "De Fabrice Clavorum," which I have not met with elsewhere in an English form.

This legend, as well as No. IV. (p. 87) and No. VII. (p. 122) are printed from Harleian MS. 4196, a bulky volume, containing metrical homilies and lives of saints in the Northumbrian dialect.

"The Uplifting of the Holy Rood," No. V. (p. 98), is taken from Ælfrie's minster homilies in Cotton MS., Julius E vii. Ælfrie's discourse on the "Finding of the Cross" will be found in Thorpe's edition of Ælfrie's Homilies.

The sixth legend, "How the Holy Cross was found by St. Elene," is from the West-Midland version of the Cursor Mundi, Fairfax MS. 14, Bodleian Library².

The same story is found in the Northumbrian copy of the Cursor Mundi, in the British Museum, Cotton MS., Vespasian A iii, and in a MS. belonging to the University Library of Göttingen.

¹ A similar version of a portion of this story, but of an earlier date, is printed in my Specimens of Early English (p. 140).

² For the transcript of the pieces from the MSS. in the Bodleian Library, I am indebted to Mr. G. Parker.

This legend on the "Finding of the Cross" is very different from the others already noticed; and instead of the story of Judas or Cyriacus occupying a prominent place, it only comes in at the fag-end as an illustration of the diverse stories that are told of the Rood (p. 120). Instead of the ordinary legend, we get the story, so well known to us all in the Merchant of Venice, of the merchant and the pound of flesh¹.

All the pieces from I. to X. inclusive, are now for the first time printed.

The next two pieces (XI. and XII. p. 154-169) are from Caxton's Golden Legend, and these again supply a few particulars not found in the other legends.

The "Symbols of the Passion" are now for the first time edited from Royal MS. 17 A 27, and Addit. MS. 22,029, collated with another copy without the illustrations in Addit. MS. 11,748.

The curious illustrations are furnished by Professor de la Motte, who has kindly made the Society a present of those from the Addit. MS. 22,029.

¹ Kemble seemed to think that this legend was only contained in the Göttingen MS. He has rightly noticed its absence from the Midland version of the Cursor in Trinity College Library.

INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. The Finding of the Cross.

“THE Inuencion of the holy crosse is sayd by cause that this daye the holy crosse was founden for tofore it was founden of seth in paradyse terrestre / Lyke as it shall be sayde hereafter: and also it was founden of salamon in the monte of lybane and of the quene of saba / in the temple of salamon And of the Iewes in the water of pyseyne And on this daye it was founden of Helayne in the mounte of caluarye /”

These prefatory remarks to the “Invention of the Cross” in the Golden Legend (see p. 154) suggest the order in which a summary of the legends contained in the following pages should be written.

§ 2. The Finding of the Cross by Seth in Paradise.

When Adam and Eve were driven out of Paradise for eating of the “apple tree,” God promised to send them the oil of mercy (pp. 18, 19), wherewith they should be anointed and be healed of their sin-wounds which covered their bodies from “head to heel” to the number of “sixty and ten” (p. 64).

In the vale of Hebron Adam and Eve had passed more than nine hundred years in sorrow and woe. They had lost during this interval their two sons, and as a kind of penance for their sins, they remained apart for more than two hundred years¹. At our Lord's bidding Adam and Eve came together again, and after a time Seth was born. When Adam was nine hundred and thirty-two years old, he found himself enfeebled by toil, sickness, and old age, and he longed to die. But before his death he wished to be anointed with the oil of mercy. He calls Seth unto him and tells him of his ills (pp. 20, 21).

Seth has no idea what pain and sorrow mean, and thinks that his father's sickness arises from a longing for the fruits of Paradise (p. 62). But Adam tells Seth of God's promise to him on leaving Paradise, and bids him go to Paradise, and entreat the angel at the gate of Eden to send him the oil of mercy (p. 22)—the oil of life, "that medicine is to man and wife" (p. 65).

Seth being ignorant of the way thither, Adam gives him full instructions for his journey; and so Seth, starting from the head of the valley of Hebron, finds a green path which leads to the gate of Paradise (p. 22); then, turning eastward (p. 66²), he comes upon the way by which Adam and Eve had left Paradise, upon which, ever since the Fall, no grass had grown. Following this track, he reaches the gate of Paradise (made known to him by a great light, like that of a burning fire³), and with prayer and supplication he beseeches God to send his father the oil of mercy (pp. 22, 66, 154). While praying, St. Michael appears to Seth, and tells him that it is useless to pray for the oil of mercy, for it will not be sent upon earth until five thousand two hundred and twenty years shall have elapsed, when Christ shall come to die for man's sin⁴ (p. 67).

The angel then commands Seth to put his head within the gate of Eden, and to note well whatever he sees therein. He did as he was bidden, and saw more marvels than tongue could tell. The ¹ Adam determined upon this penance because woman was the root of all his misfortunes (pp. 20, 21).

³ See Specimens of Early English, p. 141.

⁴ The Golden Legend says 5550 years.

meads were decked with gay herbs and trees, diffusing all around most delightful perfumes; the trees were loaded with delicious fruits, and the birds sang joyously. In this land of delight and of joy Seth would fain dwell for ever.

In the middle of Paradise he saw a bright, shining well, out of which flowed four streams that watered all the world ¹.

Above the well there stood a large tree with many branches, but without bark or leaves, like an aged tree (pp. 24, 68). Seth supposed that the tree stood thus bare on account of his parents' sin (p. 68; Specimens, p. 142).

A serpent, "all naked, without skin," was embracing the tree. This was the tree and the serpent that caused Adam first to commit sin (p. 24; Specimens, p. 142).

A second time Seth looked in, and to his amazement the tree was covered with bark and leaves, and appeared to reach unto heaven; and in the top of the tree he beheld a new-born bairn lapped in "small" (or swaddling) clothes ².

The root of the tree went down into the uttermost ends of hell, and there he saw the soul of his brother Abel. Then the angel drove Seth from the gate, and he saw no more. These sights were afterwards explained to him. The babe in the top of the tree was God's Son, who in the fulness of time should bring mankind the oil of mercy (pp. 24, 69, 70).

When Seth took leave of the angel, he received three pippins or kernels of an apple, which he was bidden to put under Adam's tongue as soon as he was dead. Out of these three kernels three trees—cedar, cypress, and pine—would spring. These "wands" or rods betoken the Trinity: the cedar, "a tree of height," denotes the Father; the cypress, a tree of sweet savour, represents the Son; and the pine³, a fruit-bearing tree, is a type of the Holy Ghost and His gifts (pp. 26, 70; Specimens, p. 144).

Seth returns home, and tells Adam of the oil of mercy that should come through the birth of a blissful Child, near the end of the world, and of his death which should take place within three days. Great was Adam's joy when he heard of his approaching death, and for once in his life he laughed. He had endured so much sorrow and care, that he had rather dwell in hell than live any longer upon earth (pp. 26, 71; Specimens, pp. 144, 145).

² The Cursor adds that the child lay squealing for Adam's sin (Specimens, p. 143).

³ The olive seems to be the tree that is really meant.

When Adam died, his weeping wife and children tried to restore him to life, whereupon the archangel Michael appeared to them, and showed them what to do with the corpse. Under his direction, accompanied by angels "singing all full solemnly and making noble melody," they carried the dead body to the vale of Hebron, where it was laid in the earth; and they were told that for the future the dead must be buried "in earth or stone" (p. 72).

The pippins which had been placed under the root of Adam's tongue after a time began to grow, and three small wands or trees grew up, and stood in Adam's mouth until the time of Moses. Each grew separately by itself out of the same root, and was of an ell in length and no more.

§ 3. The Finding of the Rods by Moses.

After the Israelites crossed the Red Sea, they came unto the vale of Hebron; and one evening, as Moses was walking along, he came upon the place where the three trees were growing. Moses greeted these signs of the Trinity, and drew them out of the earth, from which issued "so noble a smell," that all the Israelites believed that they had at last reached the land of promise (pp. 26, 73).

By means of these wands Moses healed the sick, and performed numerous other miracles. When he knew that his end was near, he planted the wands beside a stream under Mount Tabor, in the land of Arabia (pp. 29, 75).

§ 4. The Finding of the Rods by David.

For a thousand years the wands continued in the same state, until King David, instructed by God, found them, and brought them to Jerusalem (pp. 28, 75)¹.

As it was eventide when he reached home, he planted the wands in a "dike," and set trusty men to see that no harm happened to them. On the morning, he found the wands grown into one tree with three branches springing from the top, so he did not attempt to remove it, but built around it a strong wall, and to mark its yearly growth he put around it a silver ring. For thirty years the tree stood in the same spot, and after that grew no more (pp. 28, 76, 77)¹.

Under the holy tree David did penance for his sins, and composed the whole of the Psalter (pp. 30, 78).

§ 5. The Rood-tree cut down by command of Solomon.

For fourteen years David was engaged in building the Temple, which after two and thirty years was completed by Solomon. When the work was almost finished, the carpenters found themselves in want of a large beam, but they could not find any tree of sufficient size to furnish it, except that which David had planted; whereupon Solomon ordered it to be cut down and taken into the Temple. The carpenters measure off thirty-one cubits, and after working it up, they find it one cubit too long. They take off the excess, and on measuring it again find it one cubit too short (pp. 30, 79, 80). Thrice they alter it to no purpose, so they inform the king of their extraordinary failure, and he commands them to make a bridge with it across an old ditch².

contains the following account of two miracles performed by David on his way to Jerusalem :—

XII.

"King David, here, as Scriptures say,
A great lord meets upon the way,
All leper-like, with sores and blains,
Till David cured him of his pains.

XIII.

And as he journeys with the trees,
Three black men coming soon he sees,
Who, touched with those three rods of might,
Became, in good sooth, pure and white."

¹ "To the west of Jerusa'em is a fair church, where the tree of the Cross grew." Maundeville, in Early Travels in Palestine, ed. T. Wright, Bohn's series, p. 175.

² The brook over which the tree was placed is called Kedron in Norris's Cornish

§ 6. The Rood-tree discovered by the Queen of Sheba.

Here it remained until the Queen of Sheba, on her visit to Solomon, discovered it, and paid great honour to it. She advised Solomon not to allow the beam to remain, for a man should die thereon who should destroy the Mosaic Law; so he caused it to be removed, and buried deep and hidden from all men (pp. 32, 83)¹.

§ 7. The Rood-tree found in the Piscine.

Here, after some time, there sprang up a deep well, which, owing to the beam of the sacred tree, was endowed with miraculous powers of healing; so it was visited by the sick, who bathed therein and were healed (pp. 32, 82).

When Jesus came upon earth, the tree began to float; and when the Jews were in want of a "tree" on which to hang our Lord, they thought of the floating beam, and took it up and made thereof a cross (pp. 32, 84, 155).

§ 8. Of the Number of Pieces in the Cross.

The Cross was made out of two-thirds of the beam; and the part above ground was eight cubits long, the pieces on each side were of three cubits (p. 85).

In the Golden Legend (p. 155) the four pieces of the Cross are mentioned as consisting of four different kinds of wood:—

(1) The upright beam; (2) the over-thwart or cross-bar, upon which the arms were nailed; (3) the piece upon which was fixed the Drama, i. 425. Maundeville speaks of the Rood-tree as having once been used as a bridge over the brook Cedron (Early Travels in Palestine, Bohn's edition, p. 176; Notes and Queries, vol. vii. p. 334, 1853).

¹ The old Dutch legend in Berjeau's Holy Cross says that after Solomon was rebuked by Queen Sheba for letting the tree serve for a bridge, he gave orders "To place it o'er the temple's door, Where men should bless it evermore."

Abias (Abijah) afterwards took the gold and silver from off it, that Solomon had placed around it, and the Jews removed it from the Temple.

table containing the superscription; (4) the socket, or mortise, in which the main beam stood.

The four kinds of wood were palm, cypress¹, cedar, and olive.

“Quatuor ex lignis domini crux dicitur esse;—
 Pes crucis est cedrus; corpus tenet alta cupressus; Palma manus retinet; titula lætatur oliva.”

§ 9. The Legend of Maximilla, the first Christian Martyr.

The Northumbrian version of the history of the Cross-beam (pp. 62–85) has a few variations from the Southern versions, and introduces a legend, probably of later origin, that I have not met with elsewhere in an English form². Instead of the beam being turned into a bridge, Solomon is said to have caused it to be placed between two pillars of the Temple, and to have commanded that once a year every one should visit the “holy tree,” and honour it “in their best manner.” So it befell upon a year that all the country far and near went to Jerusalem to honour the sacred beam; and among the worshippers was an unbelieving woman (p. 80)—

“She sought thither the sight to see,
 And trowed no virtue in the tree.”

The woman, whose name was Maximilla, in unbelief sat upon the “tree,” and forthwith her clothes took fire and burnt like tow. Then she began to prophesy,

“And said, ‘My Lord, mighty Jesu,
 Have mercy, and on me thou rue.’”

When the Jews heard her call upon Jesus, they were exceedingly angry, because she had slandered their God by the mention of a new one, so they turned her out of the town and stoned her to death—

¹ Some say the stem was made of cypress, because it was a wood that did not easily decay.

² This legend is found in Arundel MS. 507: “Entre eux vient une femme Maximilla;” and in the Cornish play of “The Beginning of the World” (The Cornish Drama, ed. Norris).

“SHE WAS THE FIRST THAT SUFFERED SHAME, FOR THE MENTIONING OF JESU’S NAME.”

Many who had witnessed this sight honoured the “tree” more than any earthly thing (p. 82), whereat the Jews were grieved, and therefore secretly removed it, and cast it into a “dike,” for they were afraid to burn or break it up. But God would not suffer the tree to be hid, but sent his angels between “undern and prime” to move the water in the dike; and all the sick and sore that got into the ditch when the water was moved, were healed “through virtue of the holy tree.” Then the Jews took the beam out of the water, and turned it into a bridge “over a beck” (p. 82), hoping that it would soon be destroyed by the great wear and tear that it would be subjected to. Thus the tree lay until the sage queen “Dame Sibell” came to Jerusalem, when she laid her clothes upon the bridge, and went over it barefooted, and “prophesied” that the “tree” was a true token of a “doomsman” who should judge all men. Here the tree was allowed to remain until Christ was about to suffer death (p. 83).

§ 10. The Making of the Nails of the Rood².

The Northern version of the history of the Rood contains also a legend on the making of the nails, which is as follows:—

The Cross is made, but three nails are wanting. The Jews go to a smith in the town, and bid him quickly “Make three nails, stiff and good,

To nail the prophet on the rood.”

¹ The Queen of Sheba is here confounded with Sibyl, as in the Arundel MS. 507 : “La sage reyne Sibille vient a Jerusalem pour esprouuer le sauoir de Salomon.” The old Dutch legend of the Cross does not make this confusion, but the story of the piscine goes before the story of the Queen of Sheba’s visit; and as Sibilla is put to death, she is evidently confounded with the Maximilla of our English legend. The subject of chap. 49, bk. i. vol. i. of Gretser, is—“Crucem Domini apud Ethnicos per Sibyllas fuisse prenunciata.”

² This story is found in Norris’s Cornish Drama, pp. 433-439.

When the "smith" heard that Jesus, whom he believed to be a prophet "true and good," was to be crucified, he was greatly grieved, and determined that he would not make any nails for this purpose (p. 84).

With boldness he answered the Jews, and said, "Ye shall get no nails from me. God has set his mark upon me, so that I cannot work." In his bosom he laid his hand, and said he had hurt it on a "brand," and had such pain in it that he expected to lose his hand.

The Jews would not believe him, but demanded to see his hand, which, when they saw it, appeared as though it were sore, but in reality was not so.

The Jews, being satisfied, were going about their business, when

"Forth came then the smith's wife,
A fell woman, and full of strife."

By the Jews she stood, and did not say much for her husband's good. "Sir," said she, "since when hast thou had such a malady? Yesterday evening your hands were uninjured. But since sickness is sent to thee, these men shall not be unserved, but shall have the nails ere they go, as soon, at least, as I myself can make them." So she set to work, blew fast the bellows, and at last made the iron hot. Then the Jews helped her to strike the iron, so that the three nails were soon made. Though they were very large, and roughly made, the Jews would not refuse them, but took them immediately, and with glad hearts hastily went their way until they came to "Sir Pilate."

§ 11. On the Number of the Nails.

The number of nails employed in the Crucifixion is a contested point. A writer in Notes and Queries, Series III. vol. iii. p. 315, in showing that three nails are depicted in the Crucifixion as early as the twelfth century, quotes the following from Labarte's Handbook of the Arts of the Middle Ages:—

"Fig. 14. Copper crucifix, twelfth century, Coll. Soltykoff. (No. 332, Debruge Labarte Coll.) Copper, enamelled and gilt. The Saviour is not clothed in the long Byzantine robe of the eleventh century, but in a tunic descending to the knees, in which he is represented until the fourteenth century. His feet are not crossed or nailed, but rest on a tablet (suppeditanum), which a third nail fixes to the Cross. Before the thirteenth century, Jesus was attached to the Cross by four nails, one to each hand and foot. In consequence of some anterior discussions, the feet from this period were placed over each other, and attached by a single nail, it having been settled that three nails only were used at the Crucifixion. Cimabue is said to have been the first painter who adopted this arrangement. This crucifix (fig. 14) was made at the end of the twelfth century, when the four nails had been rejected, but the feet had not been superposed; so, to get rid of the difficulty, the third nail is here attached to the tablet which supports the feet."

"St. Gregory Nazianzen says of the taking down from the Cross, Γυμνὸν τρισήλω κείμενον ξύλω λαβών, clearly intimating that our Saviour was fixed to the Cross with three nails only.

"Nonnus, the Greek poet, in the fifth century describes the sacred feet of our Lord as placed one over the other, and fastened down with a single large nail.

"On the other hand, St. Cyprian, St. Augustine, St. Gregory of Tours, and Pope Innocent III, as also Rufinus and Theodoret, reckon four nails." (F. C. H. in Notes and Queries, Series III. vol. iii. p. 392.)

Ælfric speaks of four nails: "The Jews fixed him [Jesus] on a Cross with four nails." (The Homilies of Ælfric, ed. Thorpe, vol. i. p. 217.)

The author of the Ancren Riwle notices the tradition of three nails: "His dear body, that was extended on the Cross, broad as a shield above, in his outstretched arms, and narrow beneath, because, as men suppose, the one foot was placed upon the other foot." (Ancren Riwle, p. 391.)

Curtius, in his treatise De Clavis Dominicis (seventeenth century), is in favour of four nails. See Gretser, vol. i. bk. i. cap. 93; Lipsius, lib. ii. cap. 9.

§ 12. The Finding of the Cross by St. Helena.

After the crucifixion the Jews tried to hide the Cross from Christians, so they buried it along with the two crosses whereon the thieves were hung, and for two hundred years they lay "under earth" (pp. 35, 108).

Adrian knew where the Cross was, but to prevent Christians from finding it out, he built a heathen temple on the spot; and so the place was forsaken, and finally neither pagan nor Christian knew where the Rood lay (p. 35).

After a time Constantine became emperor¹, pious and honourable, and a friend to Christians, although as yet he was unbaptized.

In the sixteenth year of his reign, a foreign but mighty nation assembled on the banks of the Danube to make war upon the Roman people². Constantine, praying for divine assistance, marched against his foes; but, when he saw the hostile hosts, he was sad unto death, expecting that all his army would perish in the conflict. The night before the battle the emperor had a vision, in which he saw an angel, who bade him to be of good cheer, and to look up to heaven. On looking up he saw in the sky the sacred token of Christ's Cross, and above the Cross was written these words: "By this conquer" (p. 3).

On the morrow he commanded a cross to be made, after the pattern of that which he had seen in his vision, and caused it to be borne before him in battle, instead of a banner.

As soon as the enemy saw the sign of the holy Rood, they were seized with a panic, and fled; so Constantine won the victory through the power of the Cross (pp. 4, 36, 37, 88, 109).

When the emperor returned home, he made enquiry concerning the Cross, and whose token it was. Christians came and told him of the Trinity, and of the advent and death of Christ; so the emperor became a Christian, and was baptized by Pope Silvester (pp. 4, 36).

¹ The dates given in these legends are very incorrect. No. I. places Constantine's reign in the year 133 after the Passion; in the Vercelli poem (No. XI. Golden Legend) it is "an C yere and more."

² Eusebius, in his Life of Constantine, &c., speaks only of the war between the emperor and Maxentius.

Constantine, through reading holy books, learnt that the Cross was somewhere in Jerusalem; so he sent Helena his mother (who is said to have been seventy years old at this time) there to find, if possible, where it was hidden.

When Helena came to Jerusalem, she called together all the Jewish citizens, and bade them choose the wisest of their kin, who should come before her and tell her what she was desirous of knowing.

A thousand of the wisest of the Jewish people appeared before her, and she commanded them to select the wisest from among them to answer a question that she was about to propose to them (pp. 6, 38, 91).

After leaving the queen's presence in great fear, they discussed among themselves what the question might be. Then one Judas, the son of Simon, and brother of Stephen the martyr, said unto them: "I know what the question will be; for the queen will ask us where the Cross of Christ was laid. But beware that none of you tell her; for I know well that thereupon shall all the ordinances of our law be destroyed. For Zacheus my grandfather said to Simon my father, and my father at his death said to me, 'Inquiry shall be made concerning the Cross on which our elders hanged Jesus Christ; but beware, tell not¹, for any torment that thou shalt suffer, where the Cross of Jesus was laid; for after that it shall be found, the Jews shall reign no more, but Christian men shall have the sovereignty; and truly this Jesus was the Son of God'" (p. 8).

The Jews, having listened attentively to the discourse of Judas, unanimously declare that they will not reveal where the Cross is hid, and cautioned Judas to keep silent respecting it (p. 9).

Helena again summoned the Jews before her, and threatened them with fire unless they quickly made known where the Cross was to be found. Alarmed at the queen's threats, they presented Judas to her, saying, "Lady, this man is skilful and learned, and able to make known to you all the things that thou art desirous of knowing." Then the queen let all the others go, but retained Judas, who, however, refused to give any information. Then the queen commanded Judas to be cast into a deep pit, where he was kept without meat or drink for seven days, at the end of which time he expressed his willingness to tell the truth concerning the Cross. When he was taken out of the pit, he brought Helena to the place of the crucifixion, and there offered up a prayer, beseeching God to disclose the place where the crosses were hidden (p. 10); whereupon the earth quaked, and there arose "the sweetest smell of all the most precious perfumes." Then Judas rejoiced and said, "Verily Jesus is the Saviour of the world." Having said these words, he began to dig, and at the depth of twenty feet he found three crosses, which were removed to Jerusalem. He could not say, however, which was the Cross of our Lord, so he awaited the manifestation of divine power. About noon the Jews brought in the dead body of a young man that was about to be buried. Judas retained the bier, and laid one of the crosses upon the dead body, and then the second; and when the third touched the corpse, it came to life, and blessed the name of the Lord. Then the devil was greatly enraged, and was heard crying in the air and saying, "Judas, what is this that thou hast done? Thou hast done the opposite what the other Judas did. Through him I won many souls, and through thee I shall lose many; through him I reigned over the people, through thee I have lost my realm" (p. 11).

Judas, being filled with the Holy Ghost, cursed the devil, and said, "May Christ sink thee into the deep abyss of hell;" whereupon the devil was no longer to be seen or heard. After this, Judas was baptized by the name of Cyriacus, and in time became bishop of Jerusalem (p. 12).

Helena longed to possess the nails of the Cross, and commanded Cyriacus to make search for them. He did so, and discovered them glistening in the earth like the purest gold. The queen, by a voice from heaven, was bidden to take the nails to set them in the bridle of her son Constantine¹ (p. 13). For three years he carried them about with him, and afterwards placed them beside the Cross. At St. Denis are the nails and the king's crown (p. 120). She gave also a part of the Cross to her son, and the other part she left enshrined in gold, silver, and precious stones, in a church which she caused to be built upon Mount Calvary (p. 96). Thus was the holy Rood found on the third of May, which we call Holy Rood Day.

Constantine, being desirous of finding the holy Cross upon which Jesus had suffered, sent two messengers, Benciras and Ansiers, to his mother Helena, bidding her without delay to make search for the holy Rood. The queen had with her at this time a skilful goldsmith, who owed a large sum of money to a Jew, under a bond to yield an equivalent in weight of his own flesh if the debt should not be paid when due. The day of payment came, and the goldsmith was unable to satisfy the Jew's claims. The case came before the queen's court, and was tried by Benciras and Ansiers, who ask the Jew how he proposes to take the penalty. He replies that he intends to put out the debtor's eyes, then to smite off his hands, and lastly to cut off his tongue and nose.

The judges bid him take the flesh, but beware to take no blood with it, for that was not included in the contract. The Jew says, "Methinks the worst part of the bargain is mine—

To take the flesh if I assay,
Then the blood will run away.

Ye have ruined me by your decision; a curse light upon you for it."

Then the judges declare the Christian man to be quit, and condemn the Jew to forfeit his goods to the queen, and to lose his tongue.

that one nail was thrown into the Adriatic Sea to quiet a whirlpool there, two nails were placed in the bridle of Constantine's horse, and one in Constantine's crown.

The Jew, aghast at this decision, offers to disclose where the Lord's holy Cross is to be found; whereupon Helena declares that if he can do so he shall receive a full pardon, but shall lose his eyes in case he does not perform his promise.

Then the Jew leads Helena to Calvary, and digs up three crosses, &c.

§ 14. How to make the Sign of the Cross.

Ælfrie, in his instructions for making the sign of the Cross (p. 104), gives the Western mode as follows:—With three fingers must one make the sign of the cross, and bless himself, on account of the Holy Trinity. He seems to condemn the use of the open hand in making the sign of the Cross¹ (p. 104).

“The gesture of benediction is . . . either Greek or Latin; it is always given with the right hand, the hand of power. In the Greek Church it is performed with the forefinger entirely open, the middle finger slightly bent, the thumb crossed upon the third finger, and the little finger bent. This movement and position of the five fingers form, more or less perfectly, the monogram of the Son of God.” (Didron's Christ. Iconog. p. 407.)

“The Latin benediction is given with the thumb and two first fingers open, the third and little finger remaining closed.” (Ib. p. 408.)

§ 15. The Exposition of the Cross².

There was, in the year of our Lord six hundred and fifteen, an impious king of Persia, named Chosroës, who commanded all his subjects to call him the King of kings and Lord of lords. With a great army he invaded Jerusalem, and destroyed the churches of the Christians. He went to the holy sepulchre with the intention of destroying it, but a great fear withheld him. Nevertheless, he took possession of the holy Rood left there by Helena, and carried it away into his own country. Forthwith he raised a high tower of silver, ornamented with all kinds of precious stones; and therein he set a throne wrought of "red gold," in which was represented the sun, moon, and stars, so that it looked like heaven. By means of pipes perforated with small holes, he caused water to descend as rain; and causing horses to tramp constantly through hidden trenches, he imitated the noise of thunder. He even imitated the song of angels by means of "secret whistles." Here on his throne he sat, endeavouring to represent God himself; and beside him on his right side he placed one of his sons¹, feigning him to be God the Son; and a third person on his left hand represented the Holy Ghost. To his eldest son the impious king resigned his throne, and for many a day practised his cursed "maumetry." In those days there was an emperor named Heraclius, who was renowned far and wide as a brave, pious, and God-fearing sovereign. Chosroës' son was envious of the Christian king's renown, and determined to win from him his kingdom. The two armies met near the banks of the Danube, and the son of Chosroës proposed to the emperor to decide the contest by a single combat on the bridge of the river. Heraclius consented, and through the divine assistance won the victory, and slew his opponent. Then Heraclius came to Persia, and found the impious Chosroës, like a God, sitting on his throne. Because he had honoured the Cross, the emperor offered to spare his life, if he would forsake his "maumetry" and be baptized. On his refusal, Heraclius commanded his head to be struck off, and gave the kingdom to the son of the heathen king. The holy Rood he removed, intending to carry it back to Jerusalem. After he had descended from the Mount of Olives, he essayed to enter the gate of the city (by which the Saviour went to his Passion) on horseback, in royal array; but the stones lying round the place suddenly closed about, and formed an impenetrable wall.

At the same time an angel appeared standing on the wall, with the sign of the cross in his hand, and reminded the emperor that Christ had entered by this gate in humble clothing, riding upon an ass. Heraclius, thus rebuked for his pride, dismounted, and stripped himself of his royal robes, and barefooted bore the Cross into the city, the obstacles to his entrance having suddenly disappeared. When the Cross entered the city, it gave forth a most delightful savour, and filled all places with its sweetness, and all assembled began to praise the Cross thus, saying, "O thou marvellous Cross, more luminous than the stars, greatly art thou to be honoured and loved by all the world; for thou alone wast worthy to bear the ransom of the world. Sweet tree, save thou this assembly that are here this day gathered together for thy honour and praise."

Thus was the precious tree re-established, and the ancient miracles were revived.

This took place on the fifteenth day of the month of September, and is still commemorated by the festival called The Exposition of the Holy Cross¹.

§ 16. Traces of the Cross before the Crucifixion.

The Cross is mentioned in the Old Law. It was planted in Paradise; Adam took shelter thereunder when he had sinned; the blood of Abel cried from under it.

It was the fact of Isaac's carrying the wood for his sacrifice in ¹ Many miracles are related in some of these legends as being connected with the Rood after its exposition (see pp. 103, 104, 130, 166-169). A few are mentioned in connection with the Invention (see pp. 115, 159, 160). Gretser has something on the oil of the Cross, vol. i. lib. i. cap. 91. See p. 115 of this volume.

In Harl. 2252 ff. 50 bk., mention is made of a great miracle of a knight called Sir Roger Wallysborow; how he in the Holy Land wanted to bring off a piece of the Cross; how his thigh opened marvellously, and received it; how he was carried to Cornwall, when his thigh opened and let the fragment of the Cross out. A piece of this he gave to his parish church, "Cross-parish," and the rest to St. Buryan's College.

the form of a cross upon his shoulders, that prompted God the Father to send an angel to arrest the arm of Abraham¹.

The four corners of Noah's ark were made of it² (p. 116).

Gretser (vol. i. lib. i. cap. 43-46), as figures of the Cross, mentions Jacob's ladder, Jacob's staff, the transposition of Jacob's hands in blessing the sons of Joseph, the scarlet cord in the window of Rahab, the nail with which Jael slew Sisera, the oak and rod of Gideon, &c.

Moses' wand came from this tree; and in Egypt the Israelites were saved by the sign of the cross. Moses raised a cross in the wilderness, by which those who were stung by serpents were healed. When he held up his own hands, it was in the form of a cross. The dispute concerning the priesthood was settled by Aaron's rod having a cross upon it (p. 117). (See Gretser, vol. i. lib. i. cap. 44.) When David went to fight with Goliath, he was armed with a staff like a cross (p. 118).

² For the following interesting note I am indebted to the kindness of the Rev. Dr. Barry:—

"The Scripture saith, 'Abraham circumcised 318 men of his household.*' Hear the meaning first of the 18, then of the 300. The ten and eight are represented, the ten by I, and the eight by H. There thou hast the beginning of the name ΙΗΣΟΥΣ. But because the Cross, in the form of the letter T, was to carry the grace (of salvation), therefore he adds the 300 (which is represented by T in Greek). So he shows forth Jesus in the first two letters, and the Cross in the third." (Letter of Barnabas, so called, c. ix.)

In c. xii. of the same Epistle, the Cross is spoken of as symbolized by the outstretching of the hands of Moses during the battle with Amalek (Exod. xvii. 8, &c.), which is assumed to have been a stretching out of both hands as on the Cross, though the mention of the "rod of God in my hand" (Exod. xvii. 9) suggests a different posture.

Then, "All day long I have stretched forth my hands," &c. So in Rom. x. 21, but Isa. lxxv. 2 is 'I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people,' is explained as foreshadowing the Cross.

Next, the "pole" of the brazen serpent is explained as foreshadowing a cross. In fact, some old translators render ἐν δοκῷ by "in cruce."

On these passages Hefele refers to Justin. Dial. c. Tryph. n. 111, p. 204; Tertullian. adv. Jud. c. 10; adv. Marc. iii. 18; Justin. Apol. I. n. 35; Dial. c. Tryph. n. 97.

* This is not expressly in Holy Scripture, but in Gen. xiv. 14, 318 is given as the number of Abram's servants in the war against the kings; and in xvii. 26, 27, all the men of his house are circumcised.

When Elijah met the widow of Zarephath, that woman picked up two pieces of wood, which she held up in the form of a cross; and God, for that action, increased the quantity of meal and oil in her house, and afterwards permitted the prophet to restore her son to life¹.

The sign of Thau in the Old Law is a token of the cross² (p. 118).

“The Cross, made with beams put together, had the shape of the Samaritan Tau, says St. Jerome³, whose words are these: ‘In the oldest Hebrew letters, which the Samaritans now make use of, the last, which is Tau, had the form of a cross.’ This Tau, like a cross, was like the T of the Greeks, according to Paulinus, who says that the shape of the Cross is expressed by the Greek letter Tau, which stands for three hundred. The Cross of our Lord was something different from the letter Tau; the beam that was fixed in the earth crossing that which was athwart it above, and made as it were a head by rising above it. . . . This is the form of the Cross which St. Jerome means, when he compares it to birds flying, to a man swimming, and to a man praying to God with his arms extended.” (Humphrey’s Montfaucon, vol. x. pt. ii. bk. iii. cap. 1, p. 158, quoted in Notes and Queries, 1853, vol. vii. p. 461.)

The paschal lamb seems to have been roasted in the form of a cross.

“This lamb, which was to be roasted whole, was a symbol of the punishment of the Cross, which was inflicted on Christ, Το γὰρ οπτωμενον προβατον, κ.τ.λ. For the lamb which was roasted was so placed as to resemble the figure of a cross; with one spit it was pierced longitudinally, from the tail to the head; with another it was transfixed through the shoulders, so that the forelegs became extended." (Vide Justini Martyri Opera, edit. Oberthür, vol. ii. p. 106, quoted in Notes and Queries, 1853, vol. viii. p. 545.) See also Gretser, vol. i. lib. i. cap. 44; Lipsius, bk. i. ch. 8.

¹ Didron’s Christ. Iconog., Bohn’s Illustrated Library, p. 37. “‘Lord,’ saith she [the woman of Zarephath] to Elijah the holy prophet, ‘behold I am gathering two sticks.’ These two sticks betoken that one stick which stood upright, and that other also of the precious Cross, which went athwart it.” (Ancren Riwle, p. 403.)

² In Ezek. ix. 4, 6, the mark spoken of is the letter Thau.

§ 17. The Analogy of the Cross in Nature¹.

The first man and woman were made in the form of a cross (p. 118). The Cross is the head of Holy Writ, the foundation of clergy, and the rule of holy life.

It is made up of four notches and three woods, by which is understood the seven arts. Multiply three and four together, and it gives us the sum of the Old and of the New Laws—ten of the Old, and two of the New.

Man's form is like a cross, and he is composed of seven elements—the body of four, and the soul of three.

The Cross was made of wood, and not of stone, for very good reasons—through a tree man was lost, through a tree man was saved (p. 119).

The world is in the form of a cross; for the east shines above our heads, the north is on the right, the south at the left, and the west stretches out beneath our feet. Birds, that they may rise in the air, extend their wings in the form of a cross; men, when praying, or when beating aside the water while swimming, assume the form of a cross. Man differs from the inferior animals in his power of standing erect and extending his arms.

A vessel, flying upon the seas, displays her yard-arms in the form of a cross, and cannot cut the main unless her mast stands, cross-like, erect in the air; finally, the ground cannot be tilled without the secret sign, and the Tau, the crucifixion letter, is the letter of salvation. (Didron, p. 372.) See the curious plate to p. 42, bk. i. ch. 9 of Lipsius's De Cruce, Amsterdam, 1670. 12mo.

Thus we see that old writers found traces of the Cross throughout all nature, and in the words of one of our seventeenth century authors, poet and divine, are ever exclaiming—

¹ "The sign of the Cross is impressed upon the whole of nature." (Apol. i. § 72.)

² Rabanus Maurus (De Laudibus Sanctæ Crucis) detects the Cross everywhere. (Didron, p. 372.)

“Who can blot out the Cross, which th’ instrument
 Of God dewed on me in the sacrament?
 Who can deny me power and liberty
 To stretch mine arms, and mine own cross to be?
 Swim, and at every stroke thou art thy cross!
 The mast and yard make one when seas do toss.
 Look down, thou spy’st ever crosses in small things;
 Look up, thou seest birds raised on crossed wings.
 All the globe’s frame and sphere is nothing else
 But the meridian’s crossing parallels.”

§ 18. The Story of Longinus.

There are two kindred subjects taken up in the present pages :
 (1) The story of Longinus, who, as usual, is confounded with the centurion that pierced the Saviour’s side (see p. 106); (2) The uplifting of the Cross at the Crucifixion (p. 142).

On this subject, see Gretser, vol. i. lib. i. cap. 21: “Num Christus humi, an in sublimi sit suffixus cruci.”

It is generally agreed that the Saviour was nailed to the Cross before it was fixed in the ground in an upright position.

LEGENDS OF THE HOLY ROOD.

I.

DISCOVERY OF THE SACRED CROSS.

Hear ye now what I shall say to you concerning the holy rood (cross) upon which Christ suffered, how it was found on this day. When that one hundred and thirty-three years had elapsed after Christ's passion and ascension to heaven, then reigned Constantine the great, Kaiser in the city of Rome. He was pious in morals and honourable in actions, a supporter of Christian men, and, nevertheless, was not yet baptized. In the sixth year of Constantine's reign there was assembled a great foreign folk at the river which is called Danube, and they were ready to fight against the Kaiser and the Roman people. Then was it soon made known to the great Kaiser Constantine, and he immediately gathered together a great army, and marched against his foes with a sorrowful mood, and oft looked up heaven-wards, earnestly praying for divine assistance. When they came to the river then saw he the great and innumerable host of his enemies; then was he exceedingly sorrowful and sad even unto death, because he thought that they would all perish. Then on that same night, that Constantine slept and rested himself, there came to him an exceedingly beautiful (fair) angel in white shining garments, and he awoke him and said, "Constantine, be thou not sad, but look up now unto this heaven." And he immediately looked up unto heaven and there saw the sacred token of Christ's cross standing opposite him, and distinguished by the brightness of a great light, and these words were written above the cross: "Constantine, with this sign thou shalt overcome and subdue all thy enemies." He then awoke blithely (joyfully) because of the fair sight (vision) and for the great promised victory;

and he marked on his head and on his banner the sign of the holy rood in honour to God. Then immediately on the morrow the Kaiser commanded to be made a golden rood of the same form that he had seen so gloriously shining in the heavens, and he commanded it to be borne before him against the heathen. As soon as they looked upon the sign of the holy rood they immediately became terrified and turned to flight; and Constantine the great Kaiser had the victory, and his army slew the heathen, and some moreover were drowned in the river. On this day the Almighty God gave great victory to the noble King Constantine, through the great might of the illustrious cross of Christ. After that the great Kaiser again returned home to his own city. Then he commanded to be summoned before him all the elders and scribes of the Jewish folk, and asked them whose token that might be which he had seen shining so gloriously in the heavens. They then replied, "It is the great and the glorious heavenly token upon which the Son of the living God has suffered." When those that were Christians heard of this, then came they forthwith to the noble Kaiser Constantine, and with very joyful mood preached to him concerning the Holy Trinity, and the holy advent of the begotten Son of God, in what wise he was born of the human body of the holy woman Saint Mary; and they told him of the sufferings which our Saviour suffered on the cross, for the salvation and redemption of mankind, and how our Lord was buried in the tomb, and on the third day rose immortal from the dead; and harrowed hell, and bound the old devil; and afterwards ascended to heaven and prepared a way of return for those who shall merit it. When this was told to the noble Kaiser Constantine, then became he very joyful in mood, and sent his mother Helena with a great army to the city of Rome to the bishop, and bade them earnestly beseech him that he would come and baptize him. Then immediately the bishop thanked God for this, and baptized the King in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and firmly strengthened him in the true faith. And he then brake in pieces and destroyed all the idols, and consecrated churches there, and appointed all ecclesiastical orders according to the ordinances (of the Church). After that the great Kaiser Constantine was confirmed in the true faith, then began he to learn the divine lore and to read the holy books of Christ. When he had learned in the holy books in which place our Lord was anhangd on the cross, then sent he his mother the holy woman Helena with a large army to the great city Jerusalem, that she might enquire there concerning the holy cross; and he bade her that she should build churches in that same place where she, through God's assistance, might find the holy cross. The blessed queen Helena then put her trust firmly in God Almighty and departed. When she entered into the great city of Jerusalem, then bade she to be assembled before her all the Jewish folk. When they came before her then spake she unto them, thus saying: "I know, having learnt in your propheticall books, that you were from the first chosen by Christ himself; and ye know how our Lord wrought divine miracles—many blind he caused to see, and to the deaf he gave hearing, and drove out devils from demoniacs, and cleansed the lepers, and raised the dead to life, and healed many and divers diseases; and your elders through the devil's lore doomed the Redeemer, the Almighty Lord, deliverer of the earth, to death, and hangd him on the cross; and he on the third day arose from the dead. And your hearts are yet hardened so that ye may not understand nor acknowledge the true Creator of the earth, the Saviour and Redeemer; but the curse still abideth over you, which your elders themselves asked for in the passion of our Lord, when they said, 'His blood and the vengeance of his blood be upon us and upon our children.' But choose ye now the wisest men of your kin so that they may rightly answer that which I shall ask them." And they then in great fear went out, and earnestly considered what the question should be. And then they chose a thousand of the best of the learned Jewish men and brought them before the holy queen. Then spake the holy queen Helena: "Take heed now to my words. Behold! have ye not learned in your propheticall books concerning the advent of the begotten Son of God, and how our Saviour was hangd on the cross as his own will was. So ye yourselves have learnt all these things and know them, and yet will not now understand what I wish to enquire of you." They answered and said, "Tell us, lady, wherefore thou spakest so sternly to us?" And she answered and said, "Go out and choose you of these the men who are best learned that they may show me this day all the things which I shall ask of them." Then they with great dread went out from the queen, and discussed among themselves and anxiously considered what the question might be. Then spake there one called Judas, "I know indeed what the question will be: it is about the holy cross on which our elders hanged the Nazarene Saviour. If this queen will ask about this, then consider whether ye will declare it unto her, for we know assuredly that afterwards all the ordinances of our elders shall be destroyed." He said then again, "Zaccheus, my old-father (grandfather), said to my father, and my father to me, thus saying, 'My dearest child, when there shall be an enquiry concerning the holy cross, on which our elders hanged the Saviour Christ, then take heed that thou reveal it ere thou be quelled to death, for never any longer shall the Jewish folk have sovereignty, but the kingdom shall belong to those who believe in the Almighty God, because that he is truly the Son of the living God.' Then answered I my father and said, 'My father, if our elders knew that he was the Son of the living God, wherefore did they hang him on the rood?' Then said my father to me, 'Juda, my dearest son, I was never of their mind, nor aided them in their counsels, but I ever spake most strongly against their speech (counsel), because I always believed on the holy and marvellous name of the Son of the living God, whom our elders hanged for envy, and for wrath doomed him to death, and hanged him on the cross; and he was laid in the tomb, and on the third day, of a truth, arose from the dead; and after his miraculous resurrection he appeared to his beloved apostles; and thy brother Stephen firmly believed in him, and therefore the Pharisees and Sadducees then doomed him to death and with stones beat him (to death). Then said he, "My Lord, impute thou not these sins unto them, which they work upon me." Then said my father again unto me, 'I advise thee, my dear son, that thou continually and firmly believe on Christ, the Son of the living God. Then shalt thou have life with him ever in eternity.' These things my father Simon said to me, as I have now said them unto you. Take thought now whether ye will declare it unto her if she will ask you about it." They answered and said, "We never before heard these words nor these things which thou now sayest unto us. If this queen shall ask about these things then take heed to thyself that thou never disclose it unto her. We know it not nor are able (to know)." When they were thus speaking among themselves, then called them thither the queen's soldiers and commanded that they should quickly come before the great queen. When they stood before her, then said she unto them, "Of a truth I say that I will burn you all with fire except ye reveal to me truly the holy cross of Christ." Then became they immediately much terrified, and presented to her then the one who was called Judas, and said to her, "Lady, this (man) is true, and he is the most skilful and learned of us, and he is able to show thee all the things which thou askest of us." The queen let them all go, and took Judas alone and said to him, "Now is thy life or death in thine own power; choose now whichsoever thou wilt." Judas then answered and said, "If any man be hard pressed with hunger, and one lay before him stones and loaves, will he ever be so foolish as to eat the stones and to leave the bread?" Then answered him the great queen Helena, "If thou wilt live in heaven or on earth, then show me where the holy cross of Christ is preserved." Judas answered her and said, "I know not nor can, because it was done more than a hundred years ago, and I am young, and do not remember it." The great queen Helena answered him, "I have read in the holy books of Christ that the place is called Calvary—in which our Lord's cross is preserved. But make known to me where the place is, or I will command thee to be put to death by hunger." Then Judas again answered her and said, "I know not the place (nor can I), for I was not born then." Then commanded the queen Helena that they should take him and put him in a deep pit without meat or drink, and then dwelt he there seven days and seven nights; and then on the seventh day Judas called up from the pit and thus said, "I entreat and conjure you to take me out of this pit, and I will show you the holy cross of Christ." When he was out of the pit then went he to the place in which our Lord was hanged. When he came thither then he stretched out his arms and prayed to Christ, and thus said, "My Lord and Saviour Christ, thou who createdst heaven and earth and sea and all creatures which are therein, I entreat thee for thy great mercy that thou reveal to us thy holy cross, upon which thou sufferedst

(death) and redeemed mankind, cause to ascend from that place the sweetest smell of all precious perfumes, that I may firmly believe on thee, thou that art King of all kings, thou that livest and reignest ever in eternity." When Judas had finished this divine prayer, then immediately all the place quaked, and there arose from that place the sweetest smell of all the most precious perfumes. Then forthwith Judas marvelled greatly and thus said, "I say of a truth that the Son of the living God is the Saviour and Redeemer of all mankind that will believe in him. I now entreat and conjure thee, my Lord Jesus Christ, that thou blot out my sin, that I may be in the number (of the elect) with my brother Stephen, of whom many good deeds are written (in the book) among the miracles of the apostles." When he had said these words then he took a spade and delved the earth. When he had delved twenty feet in the earth then found he three roods; and forthwith then he was very joyful. He took the three roods and bore them to the great city of Jerusalem before the great queen Helena. She then said to Judas, "Tell me on which of these roods our Lord was ananged. I know that two of them are those of the two malefactors who were hanging on each side of him." Then Judas knew not what to say unto her, but took the three roods and set them in the midst of the great city of Jerusalem, and there awaited the glory (manifestation) of the Lord. Then it came to pass this day at noon that they brought in a young man that was dead. Then was Judas very glad of this, and said to the great queen Helena, "Lady, now may ye perceive the might of our Lord Jesus Christ." Thereupon Judas bade them set down the corpse, and he then took one of the roods and laid it upon the dead body, and then prayed very earnestly to God Almighty for his name and for his great mercy (and he also bad all the people to pray) that God Almighty would show, through his great might, which cross it was that he himself was hanged upon for the salvation of mankind. The body lay still as dead as it was before. He then took the second rood, but it was all the same. So he took the third, and then forthwith the man arose alive and whole, and blessed the name of the Lord. And all those who were there blessed, praised, and magnified the name of the Lord. Then was the malicious devil of hell stirred up with anger and with hot-heartedness, and he therewith loudly roared and thus said, "Lo ! what man is this that hath now betrayed me ? O thou Nazarene Jesus ! through thy passion thou hast regained to thyself all the souls that I formerly by myself had betrayed. O thou Judas ! what is this that thou hast now done to me ? Erewhile I, through one Judas, the betrayer of Christ, was honoured, and I drew much people to hell, but through this Judas I am degraded." Then Judas became filled with the Holy Ghost and thus spake, "May the Saviour who liveth and reigneth sink thee into the deep abyss of hell !" Forthwith was the devil no longer anywhere to be seen or heard. When the blessed queen Helena heard this, she marvelled much at the great faith which Judas had in God, and she commanded that the cross should be worked up with gold and with silver and with precious stones (gems), and that churches should be built in that same place in which the holy rood was found, as her son Constantine had previously ordered. And Judas was then baptized by the city bishop (metropolitan), and the bishop changed Judas' name and after he was baptized called him Quiriacus. And he afterwards flourished so greatly that, after the death of the bishop, he was elected and consecrated a bishop. Then began Helena to enquire very earnestly concerning the nails which had been driven through the hands and feet of our Saviour. She commanded them to bring to her the holy bishop Quiriacus, who was formerly called Judas, and said to him, "I bid and conjure thee that thou make a search for the nails with which our Saviour was fastened to the cross." And forthwith the holy bishop, with his mass-priests and with his deacons and with the believing folk, departed thither to the place called Calvary, and bore with him the holy rood. When they came to the place, then he raised his eyes up to heaven and secretly beat on his breast and thus said, "My Lord Jesus Christ, I pray and beseech thee for thy great and exalted mercy that thou show me the nails with which thy holy body was fastened to the cross." When he had spoken these words, all the people said "Amen." And there came up a great light from the place in which the holy rood was discovered, and there appeared the nails shining and glistening in the earth like the purest gold. All those who were there spake and thus said, "Now may we know and understand of a truth that the (only) begotten Son of God is the Saviour and Redeemer of all mankind that believe in him. And then the holy bishop St. Cyriacus, with great joy and gladness, took the nails and brought them to the worshipful queen Helena ; and forthwith she bowed her knees and inclined her head to the earth, and inwardly she prayed to the nails, and earnestly began to consider to what purpose she might best employ the nails. Then came there a voice from heaven and said, "Take the nails, Helena, and command them to be forged on thy son the Emperor Constantine's bridle, then shall he obtain victory and peace in every battle." And then she did as was bidden her through the Holy Ghost, and she then gave many gifts to the bishop Quiriacus. And the holy bishop had so many gifts from God that he through his divine prayers healed many divers diseases. And the blessed queen Helena again returned to the city of Rome, and made known all these things to the great Kaiser Constantine, and she bade all her folk that they should ever keep this day, on which Christ's holy rood was found, in great honour. The Jews had taken Christ's holy rood, through the devil's lore, and had hidden it under the earth one hundred and thirty-three years, but the merciful Lord would not permit that the cross on which he himself had willingly suffered and redeemed all mankind should be any longer concealed, but that it should be gloriously manifested, as we have before told you, on this day, for his praise and honour, and for our heal and preservation from all the devil's temptations. It is meet that we ever honour this day with church-going and with alms-deeds and with holy prayers, so that we may so sanctify ourselves through the holy rood of Christ that we may escape all assaults of devils in this life and their fellowship in the future life. And may our Lord, who suffered on the holy rood, so help us that we may observe what our Lord's will is, and what is needful for ourselves ; and ever let there be thanks to him because he suffered for us, and to him ever be praise and honour for all his goodness which he hath shown to mankind, for ever and ever to all eternity. Amen.

preached God's law.

He was put to death by the Emperor Julian, because he would not worship idols.
His right hand was first smitten off.

He rejoiced at this, because with that hand he had written against Jesus Christ.

Julian caused him to drink boiling lead, but it injured him not.

Then they laid him on a gridiron.

They roasted him, and salted his wounds.

But they could not alter his determination to remain a Christian.

effaced,

he had Eve call all his sons before him to receive his dying blessing.

[fol. 76 b,
col. 2.]

His sons ask their father what ails him.

He replies that he is ill-bestead and has his fill of pain and sorrow.

They ask him to tell them what pain and sorrow are like.

Seth tells his father that his sickness arises from a longing for the fruits of Paradise,

When adam oure form fader dere
Was of elde nyghen hundreth 3ere,
And parto [thritt]y*, þan he kend
Pat his life drogh nere þe end;
þan said he vntill eue, "þou sall
All my suns bifor me call,
Pat I may blis þam or I dy."
And als he bad scho did in hy; Scho cald [þam] vnto him þat tide,
þai come and stode all him biside, Als he in his sekenes lay,
And vnto him þus gan þai say:—
"Fader, what harm es þe on hand,
Pat þou es in þi bed ligand,
And wharto hastou cald vs heder?"
þan said he to þam al to-geder:—
"Suns," he said, "I far ful ill,
Of pine and sorow I find my fill."
And þai answerd and said ogaine:—
"Fader tell vs what es payne,
And how it es sorow to haue,
Say vs þe suth, so god þe saue;
For whils we in þis werld haue bene,
Of sekenes haue we seldom sene."
þan said seth, "for suth I trow, Fader, pat þou 3ernes now
Of paradis fruit forto ett mare,
Of þe whilk þou has etin are;

 32 And I sall grete þare in þe gate;
 I sall mak site and sorows sere,
 And so I hope god sall me here,
 And send sum angell me to gete 36 Sum of þat fruit þat þou wald ett."
 Adam vnto seth þan telles:—
 "I ȝerne no fruit, ne no thing els, Bot I haue dole with-owten dout, 40 And euil in al my lims about."
 þan said seth and þai all bidene,
 "We wate neuer what euil es to mene;
 Tell vs what thing þe greue þus, 44 Wharto suld þou laine fra vs?"
 Als he lay þan þus said he:—
 "Al my suns herkins to me!
 When god had made me with his will

 In paradis sone he vs sett,
 And gaf vs leue al fruit to ett;
 He outtoke no thing bot a tre 52 þat he forbed bath hir and me;
 In middes of paradis it stode,
 And was knawing of ill and gude;
 þe est he put in my powsté 56 And þe north at my will to be,
 And till ȝowre moder he toke þat tide

 Till on a tyme, sons, suth to say,
 Oure angels went fra vs oway,
 Bifor god paire wirschip to ma;
 64 þan [com] þe fende þat es oure fa, and declares his readiness to go there, if he can find the way, and procure, by means of sorrowful suppl'cation, some of the fruit.

Adam says he wants no fruit.

Seth desires to know what it is Adam wants.

Adam tells his sons of their parents' disobedience.

How they ate of the forbidden tree in the middle of the garden.

The East and North were under Adam's control, [fol. 77.]

while Eve held sway over the West and South sides of the garden.

On a day Adam and Eve's good angels went away to do honour to God.

The devil, taking advantage of their absence, caused our first parents to eat of the forbidden fruit,

wherefore God was displeased,

and threatened Adam and Eve with divers penalties.

Upon Adam's body sixty and ten wounds
were to come, from head to foot.

But as the remedy for this God promised them the oil
of mercy.

Adam's sorrow is so great that he bewails the lack of medicine.

Eve thereupon weeps and prays God for forgiveness,

And in þowre moder fand he stede,
And did hir do efter his rede ;
Sone scho ette, als he hir red,
Of þe fruit god vs bath for-bed ; 68
Scho bed it me and I ette sum,
And þus bigan oure care to cum ;
Þe gerrard þus gan hir bigile,
And me also, alas þat while ! 72
Þan of oure werk was god il paid,
And als sone vnto me he said :—
' Adam, for þou has left my lare
And broken þe bode þat I bad are, 76
And mare wrought efter þi wife,
Þan efter me þat lent þe life, Vnto þi bodi sal I send Sixty wowndes and ten to lend, 80
Right fra þi heuid vnto þi hele, Eghen and eres and ilka dele ;
And all þi lims on ilka side
Witht sorows sall be ocupide.' 84
He said, "suns, god has sent þis thing
Vntill vs and all oure of-spring ;
Bot oure lord god almighty
Said we suld haue oile of mercy, 88
In þe werldes end, if we wald craue,
Of all þis site vs forto saue ;"
All on þis wise when he had talde,
He feled sorows ful many-falde ; 92
He cried and said him self vnto,
"Allas ! caytif what sall I do ;
Þat slike sorows er to me send,
And has no medsin me to mend !" 96
When eue herd þat he said swa, Scho wepid and had ful mekell wa,
And vnto god fast gan scho call,
"Lord forgif me þir angers all ! 100

- I wroght þe werk, þat wate I wele, Wharfore we haue þis dole ilkdele.”
 Scho praied adam on þis manere, 104 “Lord lat me haue þi sorow sere,
 For sertes I did all þe syn Wharfore þou es þir angers in.”
 Þan adam answerd hir vntill, 108 “It may noght be wroght at oure will,
 Oure lord of heuyn þat has it send Thurgh his might he may it mend.”
- Adam þan vnto seth gan say:
 112 A “Sun of a thing I sal þe pray, Forto wend als I sall þe wys Vnto þe ȝates of paradis,
 And at þe ȝates, when þou cumes right, 116 Þou sal mak sorow in goddes sight;
 Fall to erth and powder þe,
 And pray god haue mercy on me,
 For þan par auenture send sall he 120 Sum of his angels to þat tre,
 Of whi[l]k springes þe oile of life,
 Þat medcyn es to man and wife,
 Þar forto send me sum dele,
 124 Þan hope I þat my care sal kele.”
 Þan answerd seth and said in hy,
 “To do þi will I am redy, Bot þe bus teche to me þe way,
 128 And what I sall to þe angell say.” Adam said, “sun tell him till How þat I haue angers ill,
 And tell him also of þis thing 132 How þat my life es nere ending;
 And pray him me to certify
 Of þe oile of mercy weterly, Þe whilk god hight me of his grace, 136 When he me put out of þat place;

and desires to bear Adam's punishment.
 [fol.77,col.2.]

Adam
 beseeches Seth to go to the gates of Paradise,

and to pray to God to send him
 some of the oil of mercy,
 a medicine for “man and wife.”

Seth says he is quite ready, if his father will teach him the way and what to say to the Angel.
 Adam directs him to tell the Angel that he is near his death,

and wishes to have the oil of mercy which was long ago promised him.

The way, Adam says, is easy.
A green path reaches even unto the gates of Paradise.

Turning eastward many footsteps will be seen,

which were made by Adam and Eve when they were driven out of Eden.

[fol. 77 b.]
For wherever their feet touched, there the grass withered and dried up.

Seth departs
for Paradise.

He finds the withered steps, which bring him to Eden.

He falls down on his face, casts dust on his head, and cries to God for the oil of mercy

If he now þat sand to me will send,
Of all my sorow it sall me mend :”
“And sun,” he said, “I sall þe say Wharby þou sall ken þe way : 140
Þou sall sone find a grene gate
Euyn vnto paradis ȝate ; Wend estward and for no thing let,
Vntill þou in þat way be set ; 144
Þan many fotesteps saltou se,
Bath of þi moder and of me ;
For by þat ilk way went we twa,
Þi moder and I with-uten ma, 148
When we war put out of þat blis
To won in midelerth for oure mis ;
And þe sin of vs twa allane,
Was so grete and god with-gane, 152
Þat in what stedes oure fete gan fall,
Þare groued neuer gres, ne neuer sall,
Bot euermore be ded and dri,
And falow, and fade, for oure foly ; 156
Þus saltou find, with-uten mis,
Right to þe ȝates of paradis.”
Seth es went, with sorows sad, Furth right, als his fader bad, 160
And hastily he fand þe way,
Als adam vntill him gan say,
With welkit steppes, many ane,
Als his fader bifore had gane ; 164
And euen he held þat ilk gate
Vntill he come to paradis ȝate :
On his face þan fell he downe
And kest pouder opon his croune 168
Ful mekill murni[n]g gan he make,
And sorowed for his fader sake ;
And vnto god fast gan he cri
Of adam forto haue mercy, 172

- And oile of mercy him to send,
 So pat he might in liking lend:
 So als he made his praiers fast, 176 God sent saint michael at þe last;
 He bad pat seth he suld vp rise
 And said vnto him on þis wise:—
 “Seth,” he said, “what sekcs þou here?”
 180 I am michael goddes messangere,
 My lord of heuyn has ordand me Ouer all his men keper to be;
 And sertainly to þe I say, 184 Pat þe thar nowþer grete ne pray
 Efter þe oile of mercy here,
 For þou gettes it on no manere,
 Vntill a tyme if þou tak tent 188 When fíue thousand ȝere er went,
 Twa hundret and twenty þar-till,
 And also aȝt als es goddes will;
 Þan sal god send down his sun 192 Crist in-to þe werld at won;
 For mannes sins þan sal he dy,
 And so fra bale he sall þam by;
 Grauen he sall be in a stede 196 And rise þe thrid day right fra þe ded,
 And lif ogayne, in lim and lith;
 And adam þan sall rise him with;
 Adam and all his of-spring, 200 Pat god vntill his blis will bring;
 With crist þan sall þai right vp ryght
 And wende to won in lastand light;
 Þan sal þi fader right vp rise 204 And wend to welth in paradis;
 And pat same crist als I tell þe
 In þe flum sal baptist be;
 To saue man saules he sall be send 208 And all fals trowth he sall defende; that should restore his father to health.

 While Seth is fast praying, St. Michael appears and bids him to rise.

“I am,” he says, “God’s ‘messenger,’ and ‘keeper’ of all God’s men.

It is useless to weep or pray
 here for the oil of mercy, for you will never get it until 5228 years
 have elapsed.

Then shall God send Christ to die for man’s sin.

On the third day he shall rise from the grave, and Adam shall rise with him,

 2.]
 and ascend to heaven.

Christ shall be baptized in the Jordan.

He shall give the oil of mercy to the repentant sinners.

He shall give them endless bliss.

Tell thy father his days draw to an end.

But first do what I am about to tell you.
Go to the gate of Paradise, put in thy head, letting thy body stand without;
if thou seest
any marvels come again and tell them to me."

Seth did as he was bidden.

He heard there noise and noble smell.

He saw gay herbs and trees, and heard plenty of birds' songs.
In the midst of Paradise he saw a well out of which flowed four streams, that watered all the world.

Above the well he perceived there stood a fair tree, having many branches, but barkless and leafless.

þe oyle of mercy sal he gif
Till all þat in his law will lif;
And till all þat will sese of sin
Sal he gif blis þat neuer sal blin; 212
þan sall þi fader cum fra paine
And dwell in paradis ogayne;
þarfore if þou þi fader se Say him als I haue said to þe, 216
'His daies er dreuen vnto þe end, Langer in þis life may he noght lend.'
Bot first now, or þou wend oway, Sall þou do als I þe say; 220
Wende vnto paradis ȝate
And put in bot þi heuid þarate,
And lat þi body stand þaroute,
And luke what þou sese þe about; 224
And if þou any selkuth se Cum ogayne and tell to me."
Seth went and did on þis manere,
And saw ful many selkuthes sere; 228
He herd þare noyse and nobill smell, Swetter þan any tong might tell;
Gay herbes and trese þare gan he se,
And fowles sang ful grete plenté; 232
In middes of paradis saw he right
A well þat was schinand ful bright,
Of þe whilk foure flodes ran out,
And went ouer al þe werld about; 236
He saw of þa foure flodes clere
Come al þe water in þis werld here; Obouen þe well persayued he Whare þare stode a ful faire tre, 240
With branches þaron maniane, Bot bark ne lefe ne had it nane;
þan had seth meruail in his mode Whi þat tre so naked stode; 244

- And wele he hopid, his hert with-in,
 Pat it was for his fader sin,
 Als þe steppes war þat he had sene;
 248 Pat neuer bare none herbes grene,
 And all for þe sin of þam twa,
 Þarfor he trowed þe tre was swa;
 Al þis thoght when he had left,
 252 In ogaine þan luked he eft,
 And hastily þan gan he se
 A meruaile of þe mekill tre;
 Him thoght þat it stode vp ful euyn
 256 And rechid on heght right to þe heuyn,
 And bark inogh þar-on was sene
 With leues þat was gay and grene;
 And in þe crop of þat tre on hight 260 A litill childe he saw full right, Lapped all in clathes clene,
 Als it right þan born had bene,
 So till his sight it semed ȝing,
 264 He had grete meruaile of þis thing; Vnto þe erth þan luked he
 And saw þe rotes of þat same tre, Weterly him thoght þai fell 268 In-to þe vtterest end of hell,
 And þare him thoght he had a sight
 Of his broþer saul ful right,
 Abell þat was sakles slaine.
 272 Þan to þe angell he went ogayne
 And tald vnto him albidene,
 Als he þare had herd and sene;
 He pried þe angell tell him mare
 276 Of þe childe þat he saw þare;
 Þe angell answerd him in hy,
 And said what it suld signify;
 "Þe childe þat þou saw in þe tre, 280 Þe sun of god for suth es he,

He believed that the tree stood thus bare on account of his parents' sin.

[fol. 78.]

Looking about a second time,

the tree appeared to reach to heaven,
 and was covered with bark and leaves.

In the top of the tree he saw a little child wrapped in swaddling clothes.

He looked down on the ground, and the roots of the tree
 seemed to reach to the uttermost
 ends of hell, and he seemed to see the soul of his brother Abel.

Then went he to the Angel again, and told him all that he had seen, and asked the meaning of it all.

The Angel
 tells Seth that the child is the Son of God,

who shall be sent from heaven to earth, and also restore his father to bliss.
That he is the oil of mercy promised to Adam,

and he shall bring Adam

of spring.*

and all his offspring from bale to endless
bliss.

Then the Angel takes three kernels of the tree that caused our bale and gives them to Seth and speaks as [fol. 78, col.

2.]

follows :

" Within three days after thy return Adam shall die and be buried.
When he is laid in earth put these three kernels
into his mouth, for of them shall three ' wands '
spring ;
the first shall be a cedar tree, the second a cypress, and the third a pine tree.
These wands betoken the Trinity.

The cedar is the Father, the cypress
the Son, and the pine the Holy Ghost."
Seth departs
with the kernels and reaches home.

His schewing here noght els it ment
Bot þat he sall till þe erth be sent ;
He sall fordo þi fader syn,
And vnto welth ogayne him win ; 284
He es þe oile of mercy right,
þe whilk was to þi fader hight,
When he fra paradis gan wende,
Thurght formast fanding of þe fende ; 288
Fra bale to blis þis barn sal bring þi fader and all his of-spring¹, þat ordaind er in þe werldes ende, Fra wa till endles welth to wende." 292
þe angell þan toke kirkels thre þat war tane of þat same tre,
Of þe whilk oure bale bigan,
And vnto seth þus said he þan :— 296
" With-in thre daies when þou cumes hame Sall þi fader dy Adam,
And in a graue he sall be graid,
And, when he es in erth so laid, 300 þir kirkels þat I gif þe to þan in his mowth þou sall þam do,
For of þam sall thre wandes spring,
And ilkone sall be of sere thing : 304
þe first of cyder suthly es, þe secund sal be of cypres,
And þe thrid of pine sal be ;
And þai bitaken þe trenité, 308
In þe cyder þe fader alweldand,
And in cypres þe sun we vnderstand,
In þe pyne þe hali gaste bi skill."
þus tald þe angell seth vntill, 312
And when he was þus kyndely kend,
Hastily hamward gan he wend,
And hame also with him he had þe kirkels als þe angell bad. 316

D^e obitu primi parentis ade.

- When seth had wrought all on þis wise
 And cumen hame fra paradise,
 Vntill his fader fast gan he fare,
 320 Als he lay in sekenes sare,
 And tald vnto him albidene
 How he had done whare he had bene,
 And how þe angell gan him hete 324 þat he suld haue his bale to beten, Oile of mercy fra god send
 To saue him in þe werldes end.
 When adam herd him sogat say, 328 þa wordes ful gretely gan him pay,
 And in his life þan anes he logh,
 For he hopid forto win fra wogh,
 And forto be saued certainly;
 332 þarfore to god þus gan he cry,
 "Lord me list no langer lif,
 Mi gaste in-to þi hend I gif Forto wis it at þi will, 336 In whilk stede so it sall go till."
 þus he died with-in þe thrid day Als þe angell vnto seth gan say;
 þan had he lifed in þis werld here 340 Nien hundreth and threty þere;
 For mans kinde was þan so strang, þat þai moght wele lif so lang.
 When he was ded þus als I tell,
 344 Both wife and barnes upon him fell
 And lay upon þe cors eriand, Heuid to heuid and hand to hand,
 þai trowed to turn life him vntill, 348 For þai kowth þan none oper skill;
 And als þai murned with dreri mode,
 Michaell come and by þam stode,
 And oper angels gudely graid,

He tells his father of his journey,

and how that the oil of mercy should be sent to saue him at the world's end.

These words pleased Adam, and for once in his life he laughed.

He thanked God for his grace and gave up the ghost.

 When Adam died he was 930 years old.

Man's nature was then vigorous, and he might live to such an age.

[fol. 78 b.]

When Adam
 died, his wife and bairns fell upon him
 and lay crying
 upon the corpse, head to head and hand to hand, for they thought to restore him to life.
 But Michael
 appeared to them and thus spake to Seth,

"Weep no more, for it is God's will.

Take up the corpse and I will shew you what to do with it."
They took up the body, and followed the Angels, all singing "full solemnly" to the Vale of Hebron, where they graved Adam.

Adam's bairns were greatly astonished at all this,
but the Angel
tells them that the dead must be buried in earth or stone, for all that are born shall die.

Seth then thinks of the kernels and puts them under his father's tongue.

Of those three kernels sprang three trees from which great marvels arose.

In Adam's mouth these wands stood until Noah's time, after the flood, 1072
years.

And vnto seth al þus he said : 352
 "Wepes namore, bot bese still,
 For þus it es my lordes will,
 þat I sal teche here ȝow vnto
 How ȝe with þis cors sall do ; 356
 Takes him vp and wendes with me,
 For in erth sall he berced be."
 þai toke þe cors vp þam omang,
 And þe angels bifore gan gang 360
 Singand all ful solempnely,
 And makand nobill melody ;
 To þe vale of ebron þai him broght
 And groue him þare, als þam gude thocht. 364 þan al his barnes awonderd ware
 Of þe sight þat þai saw þare ;
 þe angel said þan to þam in hy,
 "Of þis thing haues no ferly, 368
 For als we now do him vnto
 So sal ȝe with ȝowre ded men do ;
 Gers beri þam in erth or stane,
 For all sall di þat life¹ has tane." 372
 Seth þan opon þa kirkels thocht, þat he fra paradis had broght ;
 In his fader mowth he þam did Als þe angell gan him bid ; 376
 Of þa kirkels thurgh goddes grace
 Wex thre wandes in litill space,
 And of þa wandes grete ferlis fell,
 Als men may here me efter tell ; 380
 Ful mekill sele was to þam sent,
 Als men may here wha takes entent ;
De tribus uirgis in ore ade crescentibus
 In adams mouth þir wandes stode, Till tyme of noie efter þe flode, 384
 þat was to wit with-uten were,
 A thowsand sixty and twelue ȝere ;

- And furth 3it groued þai in adam 388 Fra noie till tyme of abraham,
 Fra abraham 3it stode þai þen Vntill þe eumyng of moysen ;
 And nowþer flitted fer no nere,
 392 And ilkone groued by þam self sere ;
 Ane elne of lenkith þa wandes ware
 And all þis time wex þai nomare, Bot in astate ay war þai sene,
 396 And euer grouand in like grene ;
 Lang efter þat tyme þus bifell
 þat þe childer of israel
 Went with moyses thurght þe se, 400 Fra pharao and his men3é, þat mekill wa had to þam wroght,
 And in grete bondage had þam broght ;
 þai past þe se bath hale and sound, 404 And pharao and his men war dround ;
 And when þaire fase war þus for-done
 To þe vale of ebron come þai sone,
 And als þai in þat dale gan dwell
 408 Forther-mar þan þus bifell ;
 Opon ane euyn als moyses 3ode
 He saw whare þir thre wandes stode, þat are in adams mowth was sett, 412 And with grete honore he þam grett ;
 "For suth," he said, "þir wandes mene
 þe trinité þam thre bitwene, þat on þis wise er samyn sett, 416 For in þe rote all war þai mett." þa wandes þan thoght he forto take Wirschip to þam forto make ;
 And fra þe erth when he drogh þam out 420 So nobil smell was þam about,
 And so gude sauore gan þai fele,
 þat his men wend wonder wele

They went on growing until the time of Moses, and removed not from their place.

[fol. 78b, col. 2.]

Each increased an ell in length and no more. In this state they continued until the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt.

The Israelites crossed the Red Sea in safety, but their foes were drowned. Then the folk came to the Vale of Hebron, wherein they did dwell. One evening as Moses was walking along he saw the place where the three wands were. He greeted them with great honour, knowing that they were the sign of the Trinity.

He drew them out of the earth, and so noble a smell arose that all the folk weened that they had at last reached the Land of Promise, for which they thanked God with might and main.

Moses took the three wands and wrapped them in a clean cloth.

They were thus kept together for forty-four years, and all that were worm-snitten
or torn by wild beasts were cured by touching the wands.

[fol. 79.]

It came to pass that the Israelites lacked water, and displayed a want of trust in God.

Moses tells them to have faith, and water shall be given them.

God had commanded Moses to smite
the flint twice,

which when he had done, abundance of water came forth.

But Moses took all the merit of this miracle,

Pat pai had bene cumen right,
 To þe land of hest pat þam was hight; 424
 Al his folk þai war ful fayne
 And loued god with might and mayne :
 Moyses toke þa wandes schene ;
 And lapped þam in clathes clene, 428
 And als a relik about þam bare,
 With wirschip, als þai worthy ware :
 Ay whils þai dwelled so in fere,
 And þat was foure and fourty ȝere, 432
 And all þat war with wormes smeten,
 Or els with wilde bestes beten,
 And þai might neght þa wandes nere
 Þai suld als fast be hale and fere, 436
 So þat default suld þai find nane, Thurgh towcheing of þe wandes allane :
 So it bifell þe folk had care
 For þat þam wanted water þare, 440
 And in paire hertes þai bigan
 To be mis-trowand ilka man,
 To god þai groched al bidene ;
 And moyses said to þam in tene, 444
 "Mistrowand men herkins to me,
 If ȝe in trowth will stedefast be,
 We sall gett water grete wane
 Here out of þis hard stane." 448
 For god had bidden him on þis wise
 Pat he suld strike on þe flint twice,
 And largely þan suld it gif
 Water þat þai with might lif; 452 Þan with his wand þe stane strake he
 And water went out grete plenté,
 Pat men and bestes had paire fill
 Of water at paire awin will; 456
 And for moyses toke all þe mede
 And loued noght god for his gude dede,

- Ne gert þe folk na louing make 460 To him þat sent it for paire sake, þarfore oure lord god all-mighty,
 Said vnto moyses opiny,
 þat he suld noght þa childer bring 464 Vnto þe land of his heteing, þat was þe land of promisiowne,
 þat he had made vnto þam boune.
 þan moyses wist and wele he kend 468 þat his life drogh nere þe ende ;
 To þe hill of thabor þan went he
 And þare he sett þir wandes thre,
 By-side a water vnder þat hill, 472 For he hopid it was goddes will þat gude werk suld with þam be done ;
 þan efter þis he died sune.
Quomodo dauid tulit virgas in ierusalem.
 Still þan stode þa wandes þare 476 S A thowsand þere and wex nomare, Bot in astate ay gan þai stand
 Till dauid was king of iews land ;
 And þat was a lang tyme bitwene, 480 And euer þai groued ilyke grene ;
 þan dauid was thurgh þe haly gaste Warned þat he suld wende in haste,
 In-to þe land of araby 484 Till þe hill of thabor hastily, þe thre wandes þare forto fett, þat moyses þe profett had sett ;
 To ierusalem þat þai war broght 488 For thurgh þam suld be wonders wroght,
 And diuers dedis done bidene,
 And efterward so was it sene ;
 þus when dauid warned was 492 Till araby sone gan he pas,
 To þe hill of thabor fast he ȝode, therefore God said that he should not bring the children of Israel unto the Land of Promise.

When Moses knew that his end was near,
 then went he
 to the Mount Tabor and there he planted these three wands beside a stream under the hill,

and soon after this he died.

After this the wands
 remained in the same state for 1000 years until David became king of the Jews.

Through the Holy Ghost
 David went into the land of Arabia, to the hill of Tabor, where he found the three wands.

 2.]

Whare þir ilk thre wandes stode ;
 Vnto þe stede he went full euyñ,
 Als he was warnēd with god of heuyñ ; 496
 And when he of þe wandes had sight
 He honord þam with all his might,
 And toke þam vp out of grounde ;
 And swilk a smell þare was þat stounde, 500
 And noise and nobill melodi
 Of diuers maners of minstralsy, Þat dauid and his menzē wend
 Þe haly gaste had þare descend, 504
 So mekill mirth gan with þam mete
 Of nobill noyse and sauore swete ;
 Þan dauid laid þa wandes in fere
 In a kase al of siluer clere ; 508
 He sang ful fast so was he faine
 And on þis wise he went ogayne ;
 And als þai went so by þe strete,
 Seke men many gan þai mete, 512
 All war þai helid in gude degré, Thurgh vertu of þa wandes thre.
 Dauid was ful glad and blith,
 Vnto his cuntré come he swith ; 516
 Þe nyend day efter hame come he
 To ierusalem þe riche ceté, Bot night it was thurgh goddes will
 When þai come þe ceté vntill, 520
 On þe wandes had dauid thoght
 With wirschip whare he sett þam moght,
 And in a dike he did þam right
 Biside his castell all þat night, 524
 And seker men he sett to wake,
 So þat þai suld no harmes take ;
 On þe morn he thoght to seke a space
 To plant þa wandes in honest place, 528
 Forto be keped honestly,

He took them
 out of the ground and there arose a sweet smell
 and noble melody.

David laid the wands together in a case of bright silver.

As he went along, sick men were healed through virtue of the wands.

Glad and blithe David came unto his country, and on the ninth day he reached Jerusalem.

He then planted the "wands" in a
 "dike," and set trusty men to watch them, and he intended on the morrow to find a better place for them.

- And wirschipd als þai war worthy.
 To rest he went es noght at laine,
 532 And sone at morn he come ogaine;
 He fand his wandes hale and sownde
 Ful fast grouand on þe grounde,
 And þar-of grete wonder him thoght,
 536 Bot remu þam þan wald he noght,
 For in his hert he trowed right
 Þat þai war sett thurgh godis might;
 Þar-fore he lete þam stand þare still,
 540 And bad þat none suld negh þam till;
 And forto dwell with-uten dout
 He made a stif wall þam about,
 Stalwurthly of lime and stane,
 544 So þat negh to þam suld nane.
 Þe same lenkith ȝit war þai þare,
 Als moyses in desert þam bare;
 Bot þus when dauid sett þam has,
 548 Þan wex þai so þat wonder was,
 Þe body wex in a hale tre
 And þe crop was branches thre;
 And for it wex so dauid made 552 A serkell al of siluer brade,
 And bad þat it suld sawded be
 All about þe haly thre, Þat he might wit, with-uten were,
 556 How mekill it wex ilka ȝere;
 For it wex grete thurgh goddes grace
 And also lang in litill space;
 In þat stede þan stode it þare 560 Threty ȝere and sumdele mare,
 And wex ful fast, I vnder-stand,
 For þe tyme was nere cumand;
 Þan dauid wex dreri in mode,
 564 For in his hert he vnderstode
 Þat [he] a sinful man had bene

When he came to look at them in the morning, he

[fol. 79 b.]
 found them growing fast in the ground, but he did not attempt to remove them.

For a safeguard he built a stiff wall of lime and stone around them.

The wands were then of the same length as in Moses' time.
 But now in a short time they grew and became one great tree with three branches springing from the top.
 David made a silver circle (ring) to mark the growth of the trunk year by year.

For thirty years the tree stood in this spot and increased yearly.
 David,
 knowing that he had been a sinful man,

made his mean to God, and, sitting under this holy tree, to make amends

for his sins, he composed the whole of the "psalterbook;"
and in remission of his sins he began to make a kirk.
For twenty-four years he went on building day and night.
But God bids him to build no more, on account of his sinful life.

2.]

David desires to know who is to build God's house.

He is told that his son Solomon shall complete the work.

David then calls all the elders of the city to him,

and bids them crown Solomon his son as king.
Thus he gave him his crown away

And vnt[o] god he gan him mene;
Sitand vnder pat haly tre,
Grete sorow in his hert had he, 568
And in his sorowing said he þus, Miserere mei deus et c'.
And so he made his mis to mende
Þe sawter buke right to þe ende; 572
And in remission of his syn
To mak a kirk he gan bigin,
And þare-about he begged fast,
Till foure and thwenty ȝeres war past; 576
And bisid him both day and night
With werkmen þat war wise and wight;
And for he was a synfull man
Of god þus was he warned þan:— 580
"A hows to me saltou neuer make,
And þat es for þi sinnes sake."
Dauid answerd and said in hy,
"Lord, wha sall make þi hows bot I, 584
Wha sall vnto þi werk tak tent, Sen vnto me no sele es sent."
"Salomon þi sun," said he,
"Sall mak a temple vnto me, 588
Þat euer-mare sal be in minde,
And in meneing omang man-kinde."
Þan dauid wist righ[t] wele inogh,
Þat his life fast till ende drogh, 592
Of þat ceté gert he call Þe eldest men and maisters all;
And hastily þai come him till Forto wit what was his will; 596 Þan vnto þam al þus said he,
"Takes salomon my sun for me,
For, sirs, als sune I sal be ded,
And god has chosen him in my stede; 600
His corown so he gaf oway

- And so he died þat ilk day;
 þan in a grafe þai gan him graue,
 604 Whare kinges suld þaire beriing haue,
 With sang and grete solempnité, Als fell to swilk a lord at be.
Quomodo salomon perfecit templum.
 Salomon was corond king, 608 And led þe land at his liking;
 Moste sutile werkmen has he soght
 And on þe temple fast þai wroght,
 And endid it of masonry
 612 In þe space of 3eres twa and thretty;
 Forto tell all his fader tyme
 And efter þe wirking of him;
 And when it suld till end be brogh[t],
 616 þe wrightes þat þe timber wroght
 A mekill balk þam bud haue ane,
 In þat cuntré þai kouth find nane,
 þai soght in toun and in ceté, 620 And nowre-whare might þai find a tre, þat wald acorde vnto þaire met,
 Bot þat þat dauid king had sett;
 It forto take þe king cumand 624 And bad it suld no langer stand;
 þan doun þai hewit þat haly tre
 So þat þaire werk might endid be;
 þai caried it vnto þe kirk 628 And ordand werkmen it to wirk; þe maisters has þaire mesure tane,
 þe lenkith threty cubites and ane;
 þai polist it and made it plaine, 632 Bot all þaire wirking was in vayne;
 When it was made efter þaire merk,
 þai wand it vp vnto þe werk
 And langer þan þai fand þe tre, 636 By a cubet þan it suld be;

and died that same day, and was buried with regal solemnity.

Solomon was crowned king,

and in thirty-two years he completed the Temple.

When the Temple was almost finished, the carpenters wanted a large beam, and sought far and wide for a suitable one.

At last they found the tree planted by David.
 Solomon bad
 them hew it down.
 When this was done, they took the measure of it, and found it to be 31 cubits in length, [fol. 80.]

After polishing it they found that it was one cubit too long.

They took the beam and shortened it,
and on measuring it again they found it to be shorter than the right size.
Thrice they altered it, but they could not get the right measure.

Then they sent for Solomon,

who ordered the tree to be placed in the Temple,

where it lay many a year between two pillars of the kirk.
Solomon bad that once a year every man should visit the Temple and honour this holy tree.

So it befell upon a year that all the country far and near went to honour this tree.
Among this company was a woman that had no faith

Of þat fare þai war vnfaine,
And sune þai gat it doun ogayne
Eft þai toke þaire mesures þan,
And kuttēs it als wele als þai can; 640
“Do wind it vp” biliue þai bid, Bot al was in waste þat þai did;
Þan was it schorter þan þe assise
Thrise wroght þai with it on þis wise; 644
Acorde to þat werk wald it noght,
Par-of þam all grete wonder thoght;
Þai cald þe king for he suld se
How þai had wroght with þat tre, 648
For mekill tene was þam bitid, Sen þai war al so crafty kid;
When salomon saw it was swa,
In-to þe temple he gert it ta, 652
And bad þat it suld honowrd be,
For sum might trowed he in þat tre;
Anoper balk þan haue þai soght,
And al þe werk till end þai wroght. 656
Þe haly tre, on þis manere,
Lay in þe temple many a 3ere,
Twa pilers of þe kirk bitwene,
Þe king gert kepe it pare ful elene, 660
And made þe custom in þat cuntré,
And bad þat ilka man suld be In þat stede anes in ilka 3ere,
And ilkone on þaire best manere 664
Þat haly tre forto honowre Þat seþin bare oure sauoure.
So it bifell opon a 3ere
Al þe cuntré, fer and nere, 668
Vnto ierusalem þai went
To honore þat tre with gude entent;
A woman was þare þam omang
Þat in hir hert ay hopid wrang; 672

- Scho soght peder þe sight to se
 And trowed no vertu in þe tre ;
 Hir thoght it was scorne in hir wit 676 Þat oper men so honord it ;
 Maximilla was hir name,
 Scho sat þaron hir self to schame,
 And for scho trowed no might þarin ;
 680 Hir clathes biliue bigan to brin
 Als herdes þat had bene right dry,
 Þan cried scho loud, thurgh prophecy,
 And said, "my lord mighty ihesu 684 Haue mercy and on me þou rew."
 When þe iews herd hir on ihesu call,
 Grete tene in hert þan had þai all ;
 Þai said "scho sklanders oure goddes euyn 688 For a new god we here hir neuyn" ;
 Þai bad þat bald men suld be boune
 To haue hir tite out of þe tounne,
 And sune, with-outen oper rede,
 692 Þai staned hir vnto þe ded ;
 Scho was þe first þat suferd schame
 For þe neueni[n]g of ihesu name.
 It was þaire custum, als men knew,
 696 Þat who so neuind þat name ihesu,
 He suld be staned to ded als sone
 And so was with þat woman done.
De probatica piscina.
 Ful many when þai saw þis sight 700 Honord þe tre with all þaire might,
 And þarto made þai more loueing
 Þan vntill any oper thing ; Þarfore þe iews thoght grete despite,
 704 And to þat tre þai went ful tyte ;
 Out of þe toun þai did it draw,
 For men þar-in no might suld know,
 For þai saw grete worde of it went,

[fol. 80, col. 2.]

Maximilla
 was her name;
 but, as she was sitting by herself her clothes took fire and burnt like tow.

"Lord Jesu," she said, "have mercy and pity upon me."
 The Jews were angry that the woman had slandered their God by the mention of a new one,
 and bade bold
 men turn her out of the town, and stone her to death.

So she was the first Christian martyr,
 and all who mentioned the name of Jesus were commanded to be stoned.

Many who saw this sight honoured the tree with all their might.

The Jews took offence at this and drew the tree out of town,

but were afraid to break or burn it.
So they cast
it into a ditch.

But every day, between
"underon"
and "prime," God's angel came to this

[fol. 80 b.]

tree, and moved the water in the ditch,

and all that were sick and sore, if they might only get into the water when it moved, were cured of their sickness.

Then the Jews took the tree
out of the water,

and turned it into a bridge over a "beck" (brook), so

And men parto toke mekill entent	708
And many men honord it mare, þan goddes þat in þe iewri ware;
þarfore þai ordand þam omang
þat na more worde of it suld gang,	712
Bot for vertu þat was þar-in þai durst it nowþer breke ne brin;
In to a dike þai gan it kast,
So to be wasted at þe last,	716
þarfore in þat dike þai it did;
Bot god wald noght þe might war hid,
Sen þat so grete word of it went,
þarfore his sande parto he sent;	720
Euer-ilka day a sertaine tyme, Bitwix þe vnderon and þe prime,
His angels to þat haly tre
Ful oft-sipes men might þam se,	724
þai moued þe water in þat tide
And wesche þe tre on ilka side;
And all men þat war seke and sare
If þai in þat tyme might be þare,	728
When þe water was moued swa;
Wha so might first in-to it ga,
If he had neuer so mekill bale,
Hastily he suld be hale	732
Thurgh vertu of þat haly tre;
þis was knawin in ilk cuntré,
For mani þat blind and eroked ware
Hastily war þai helid þare;	736
So when þe iews persayued right, þat thurgh þe tre was schewid slike might,
þai said it suld noght lang be swa;
Out of þe water þai gan it ta,	740
And ordand it to be a brig,
Ouer a-noþer bek to lig,
For so þai trowed þat mens fete,

- 744 And bestes þat went by þe strete,
 Suld cum and ga all ouer þat tre
 So þat it suld wasted be;
 For grete despite in hert þam thoght
- 748 Þat wonders thurgh it war wroght.
 Þus lay þis tre þare, als I tell,
 Vntill þe sage quene, dame sibell,
 Come to ierusalem on a ȝere,
- 752 Wisdom of salomon to here;
 And by þat side hir gate was graid
 Whare þis haly tre was laid,
 And sone when scho þar-of had sight
- 756 Scho honord it with all hir might,
 Kneland doune on aiþer kne,
 Swilk vertu trowed scho in þe tre;
 Hir clathes gert scho þar-on lig,
- 760 And bare fete went scho ouer þe brig;
 Thurgh prophecy þan þus scho said—“Þis ilk tre þat here es laid
 A verray signe wele may it seme
- 764 Of a domesman þat all sal deme,
 Als lord and maister moste mighty,
 Þus may þis signe wele signify.”
 Scho lended þare ay whils hir list,
- 768 Grete wit of salomon scho wist;
 And seþin ogayne gan scho ga
 To hir cuntré þat scho come fra,
 And þat tre euer scho gan honowre
- 772 Þat seþin bare oure sauiewre;
 Þis haly tre lay in þat stede,
 Vntill þat crist suld suffe[r] dede,
 When dome was gifen ordand was he
- 776 Forto be hanged opon a tre, Þat als a cros þan suld be wroght;
 On swilk a tre þan had þai thoght, Sone a iew stode vp in hy,

that it might be worn out by the feet of men and beast.

Thus this tree lay until Dame Sheba came to Jerusalem to hear of Solomon's wisdom.

Passing over this bridge she honoured it with all her might.

She laid her clothes thereon and barefooted went over the bridge.
 She said the tree was a true sign of a doomsman who should judge all men as lord and master.

[fol. 80 b,
 col. 2.]

This tree lay in that place until Christ should suffer death.
 He was condemned to be hanged on a tree fashioned like a cross.

The Jews
think of the tree "laid ouer the lake,"

And þus he said thurgh prophecy :— 780

"Þe kinges tre, I rede, ȝe take,
Þe whilk ȝe laid ouer þe lake
To make a cros both large and lang
Þe kyng of iews þar-on to hang." 784

To þis þai all assented þan,
And rathly out of þe toune þai ran;
Þai toke þe tre þan þare it lay,
Þe thrid part þai hewed oway, 788

and from it they make a cross eight cubits long.

And of þe rembnand haue þai made
A large cros, bath lang and brade;
Viij cubites þai made it lang
With-outen þat in þe erth suld gang, 792

When it was finished they took it to Pilate, who was well pleased with their work.

And aþer side of cubites thre Þat abouen þe heuid suld be;
When it [was] made þus at þaire will,
Þe ceté sone þai broght it till, 796

To pilate went þai ful gude spede,
He held him wele paid of þaire dede.

De fabrice clauorum.

The cross is made but the nails are wanting.
The Jews run to a smith out of the town,
and bid him make three nails.

E cros es made, als it sall be,
Bot þan þam nedes nayles thre; 800

Þe iews war ful redy boune
And ran for na[i]les in-to þe toune;
Vnto a smith þai come ful sone
And bad, "belamy, biliue haue done, 804

Make thre nayles stif and gude
At naile þe prophet on þe rode";
When þe smith herd þaire entent,
How þat ihesu suld be schent, 808

The smith, believing Christ to be a true prophet,

In hert he had ful mekyll wa
Obout þe nayles forto ga,
For of ihesu he vnder-stode Þat [he] was prophet trew and gude; 812

does not intend to make the nails.

Þarfore wele in his hert he thought
Þat for him suld no nayles be wroght;

- He answerd þam with wordes fre 816 And said "ȝe gett none nailes for me, God has sent on me his merke
 So þat I may wirk no werk;"
 In his bosum he hid his hand 820 And said he hurt it on a brand,
 "Par-on," he said, "I haue slike pine þat I hope my hand to tyne."
 þan answerd þe iews kene 824 And said vnto him all in tene:
 "All for noght þou feynes þe,
 All þi sare-nes will we se,
 And bot we find þi tales trew 828 Ful sare it sall þi seluen rew."
 þus thai thret him in þaire saw,
 And gert him þare his hand out draw,
 þan was þare schewed in þat place 832 Grete gudeness, thurgh goddes grace;
 His hand semed als it war sare
 And hurting had it neuer þe mare;
 þe iews saw þat it was so, 836 And namore said þai him vnto;
 Furth come þan þe smithes whife,
 A fell woman and full of strife,
 By þe iews þare þai stode, 840 Scho spac hir husband litill gude;
 "Sir," scho said, and loud gan cry,
 "Sen when had þou slike malady;
 Ȝistereuen, when þe day was gane, 844 Euill on þi handes had þou nane,
 And sen sekenes es sent to þe þir men sall noght vnserued be,
 þai sall haue nayles or þai ga, 848 Als sone my self sall þam ma."
 Scho blew þe belise ferly fast,
 And made þe yren hate at þe last.

But he answers the Jews with bold words:
 "No nails you get from me, for I have burnt my hand on a [fol. 81.]
 brand,

and I expect I shall lose my hand."

The Jews did not believeth smith, but bade him shew them
 his hand,

which they saw hurt as he had said (though in reality it was not).
 So they made no more ado about the matter.
 But out came the smith's wife, a cross-grained scolding woman.
 By the Jews
 she stood, and said little good of her husband.
 "Since thou art sick," she said, "these men shall not go away unserved."

So she set to work and made the nails herself,

the Jews all the while lending her a helping hand.

They were very roughly made, but the Jews gladly took them,

and brought them to

IV.

FINDING OF THE CROSS.

De Inuencione sancte crucis.

- MEn aw to honure euer omang Þe cros þat al our hele on hang;
 And how þat haly tre was fun,
 4 Was þis feste ordand and bigun;
 Þat tre vs aw forto do honoure
 Þat bare oure lord and oure sauoure.
 Whils Constantyne þe nobil king
 8 Lifd here in erth in grete liking, Trew he was, in dede and saw,
 And lely lifed he in his law;
 In Rome he regnid als Emperoure, 12 And gouerned it with grete honoure;
 So in his tyme, trewly to tell,
 All on þis maner it bifell:—
 Þe grekis and þe folk of barbary 16 Gederd ful grete cumpany, Forto gif batail ogaynes rome,
 And so by strenkit it to ouereum;
 And when king Constantine herd tell 20 Off al þis fare, how it byfell,
 In his hert he had grete drede,
 For ful grete power gun þai lede;
 He ordand him grete cumpany
 24 Of men of armes and archery
 His land with fighting to defend,
 And to hald it fro his enmis hend;
 And als he lay opon a night,
 28 Bifore þat day þat þai suld fight,
 Him thoght he lukid to heuyn on high,

[Harleian

The Cross
ought always to be held in honour.

Constantine was true in word and deed.

In Rome he reigned as Emperor.

The Greeks and folk of Barbary gathered together to fight against Rome.

When Constantine heard of this he was sore
afraid,

but prepared to defend his land,

But as he lay upon a night, before the day that they should fight, it seemed to him that he looked toward heaven,

and saw the Cross on which Christ died, and a voice spake thus to him :

“ Arrange thine arms in this same manner, then shalt thou overcome thy enemies.
In this sign put fully thy trust, then shalt thou have no cause for fear, for by this thou shalt have

[leaf 150.]
victory.”

On awaking
he was very joyful.
Up he rose with a light
heart, and went to Helena the noble Queen, and told her
of his dream.
Full glad was she of the tidings,
and she caused a cross to be made to be carried before the Emperor.

So he went forth to the war, and through the Cross overcame his enemies.

St. Helena was very joyful that her son had returned safe, and with might and main honoured the Cross.
But of the Cross they knew nothing, nor indeed
of Jesus.

And in þe aire him thoght he sigh
þe same cros þat crist was on done,
And a voice sayd þus to him sone : 32

“ Ordayne þine armes on þis kin wise, þan sal þou ouercum þine enmise ;
And in þis figure fully þou trayst, þan thar þe no thing be abaist ; 36
Mak þis in þine armes forþi, þan sall þou haue þe victori.”

In hoc vince.

He wakkend þan and was ful glad,
For he so gude herting þan had ; 40
Vp he rase with hert ful light

And to his moder he went ful right, þat was saynt Elyne þe noble quene,
And tolde vnto hir ilkdele bidene ; 44

Of þis tithing scho was ful fayne
And gert ordan, with al hir mayne, þat he suld haue swilk armes dight,
Als he had sene by gastly sight ; 48

His awin armes sone doun war laid
And þe cros in his scheld purtraid, Byfore him in batayle to bere,
And so he went furth to þe were ; 52

And thurgh þe vertu of þe croyce, Als he was warned by gastly voyce,
Al his enmis he ouer-come
And broght þe victori to Rome. 56

Saint Elyne þan was wunder fayne þat hir sun was cumen safe ogayne,
And þat ilk figure of þe rode Honurde þai with mayn and mode ; 60

Bot of þe cros no thing þai knew,
Ne no thing wist þai of Ihesu, Ne no thing wist þai what it ment
þat þai honurd with gude entent. 64

- þan king Constantine gert call
 Of Iewry þe maisters all,
 Forto enquire by þaire clergy
 68 What thing þat signe suld signify :
 Þai said, "sir, lclý we ʒow hete,
 Byfor þis tyme was a prophete
 Hight ihesuc, and [in] þis same Ceté 72 Was he hanged on swilk a tre ;
 Ful many men þarbi was mend,
 And grete vertu þarof was kend,
 Bot sone efter þe iews it hid,
 76 For no might suld of it be kid,
 And how it was hid sal ʒe here.
 Sir, it bifell in þis manere—
 When ihesuc vnto ded was done, 80 Þe iews þan tok þaire counsail sone,
 Forto hide þat ilke haly tre,
 So þat it suld noght honurd be ;
 Vnder þe grete hill of caluary
 84 Þore groue þai it ful priuely,
 With two crosses þat theues on hang,
 And also þe nayles þat war strang ;
 Al kest þai priuely in a pyt, 88 So þat no man suld of þam wit ;
 Þore haue þai liggen, on þis maner,
 Sethin more þan two hundreth ʒere, Sethin Tytus and vaspasian come 92 And destroyd mony iews of Rome ;
 For right als þai boght ihesu fre
 For thritty penis of þaire moné,
 So war þai sold to þaire enmy 96 Euer thritty iews for a peny ;
 On þis wise war þai al broght down,
 Vnder þe Emperoure subieccione,
 So þat no man wun þore sald 100 Of þe Emperure bot þai wald hald,

Then Constantine cal'ed together the masters of Jewry, and asked what the sign signified.
 They said that before this time there was a prophet, named Jesus, who was hanged on such a tree in this same city.
 Many were healed thereby, and recognised its great virtue.
 Soon after the Jews
 hid it, so that it should not be honoured.

They graved
 it under the hill of Calvary,
 along with the crosses of the two thieves.
 [leaf 150,
 col. 2.]

Here they have lain more than 200 years.
 After this Titus and Vespasian came and destroyed
 many Jews, for just as they bought Jesus for thirty pence,
 so were they sold to their enemies every thirty Jews for a penny.

Far and wide
are they sown.
No Jew has a house of his own.

When Sir Adrian was Emperor of Rome, the Christians were persecuted.

He well knew where the Cross was hid,

for Christian men came to honour the holy place, the Mount of Calvary,

so he built a heathen temple upon the mount.

No Christians ever after came there to pray, so the Cross passed out of mind.

Long after this temple was destroyed and the place was overgrown with thorns and briars.

[leaf 150,

And sethin als wide als pai er saun
Has no iew hous of his awyn ;
Swilk maystris war made þam omell,
And efter þat tyme þus bifell:— 104
In Rome ane Emperoure was þan þat named was sir adrian, Cristen law wald he none ken,
Bot euer distryed al cristenmen ; 108
þis Emperoure wele vnderstode Whore his elders had hid þe rode,
And herby persayued he it right,
For cristen men both day and night 112
Come to honure þat haly stede,
And bousomly pore made þaire bede ;
þai honurd þe mount of caluary,
In wirschip of þe cros namely. 116
And þis Emperoure of Rome Wist cristen men so þeder come, þe cros he wold noght þethin take,
Bot þus he ordand for þaire sake 120
In þat same place to edify
A temple for þaire maumetry,
For cristen men suld þan forbere
In þat stede to mak prayere ; 124
þan cristen men þat place refused, None of þam efter þeder vsed,
And so it wurthed at þe last þe cros al out of minde was past, 128
And þat was for no mau herd say þarof ne in what stede it lay.
Lang efter þe temple of maumetry
Was all distroyd fro Caluary, 132
þan groued þe stede with thornes and breris,
And of þe cros no thing men heris ;
For two hundreth ȝeres war omell, Bitwix þe tymes þat I of tell. 136

- Pan Constantine was Emperoure
 And rewld rome with grete honoure ;
 Vnto him was tolde in þat tyde,
 140 How þat þe iews þe cros gun hide.
 Vnto his moder he said in hi,
 "Moder, sen we haue þe victori
 And myne enmise þus er slone, 144 Thurgh vertu of þe cros allone,
 And clerkis has told to 3ow and me
 þat criste was ded on swilk a tre, Ful fayn I wold þat tre war soght
 148 And sone vnto more honure broght."
 Pan said his moder, saynt Elyne,
 "Sun, for suth I sal noght fyne þat haly tre or I haue fun." 152 And sone hir way scho has bigun, Furth scho went with faire menz3é,
 To ierusalem, þat riche ceté.
 And when þe iews herd hereof tell 156 þat þe quene come þam omell, Grete wunder had þai albidene,
 What thing hir cuming suld bimene.
 And al þe iews sone did scho call 160 To cum into paire comun hall, þe sertayn suth hir forto lere
 Of thinges þat scho wold enquire ;
 Here-fore þe iews had mekil dout, 164 þai gedird togeder in grete rout,
 And priuely þai ask þis thing,
 What was þe caus of þe quenes cuming.
 And sum, als þai had herd of hir,
 168 Said scho come for þe cros to spir,
 Waron crist vnto dede was broght,
 And ilkone said þai knew it noght ;
 So was pore ane þat hiyght Iudas, 172 þat grete mayster omang þam was ;

Unto Constantine it was told how the Jews had hidden
 the Cross.

Constantine tells his mother Helena that he would like to find the Cross upon which Christ
 had suffered.

Helena determines to discover it,

and goes to Jerusalem.

When the Jews heard of her coming they were in great fear and dread.

Helena calls them into their common hall, and says there are certain things which she wishes to know.
 The Jews
 take counsel together as to what the questions might be.

Some said that she had come to enquire about the Cross of Christ, but they said they knew nothing of it.

Judas tells
the Jews
what Simeon his father had told him on his death-bed.

"If any one enquires after the Cross, do not disclose
where it is to be found,
unless it be

[leaf 150,
back, col. 2.]
to save thy life.'

He told me
where the Cross was commonly reported to be hid."

Hereupon
the Jews
came before Helena,

who threatened to put them to death unless they made known to her where the Cross was hid.

To show them that she was in earnest she caused a fire to be made.

Saint simyon sun for suth was he,
And Simyon was sun of zaché.
Pis Iudas said, "sumdele I mene
Of thinges þat here bifore has bene; 176
Simyon, my fader, als 3e sall here,
Told vnto me on þis manere :—
When he wist wele sune forto dy
'Sun,' he said, 'herkin me in hy, 180
A counsail sall I tel to þe, Þe whilk I will you hald priué;
If it bifall, sun, in þi liue
Þat any spir, opir man or wiue, 184
Or efter þe cros will þe ass, Þat ihesu crist on hanged was,
Or þai þarfore do þe to dede,
Tell þam vnto swilk a stede, 188
Þat now es waste and al vnkid,
For þore I wote wele was it hid;
And if þou may þi ded escheu,
Þan wald I þat no man it kneu.' 192
Þus tald he to me in what stede
Þai groue þe rode bi comun rede, Bot if we any oper wise mai do,
I rede we tel noman parto." 196
Þan had þai meruail in þaire mode
For þai herd neuer are of þe rode;
Þan come þai furth, ilkone bidene,
In comun hall bifor þe quene. 200 Sone on þis wise scho said þam to—"Dose swith and chese one of þir two,
Whethir 3ow es leuir to suffer dede,
Or els to tel me in þis stede 204
Whore cristes cros in erth es hid,
And bot 3e do, als I 3ow bid, Ilkone 3e sall be brint pis day."
And sone a fire scho did puruay, 208

- And when þai saw þe fyr on brede,
 In paire hertis þan had þai drede :
 Vnto þe quene al gun þai cry,
- 122 "Lady, of vs here haue mercy,
 For we wote no thing how it was ;
 If any wote þan wote Iudas,
 For he was anc old prophet sun,
- 126 Þe laws wele better mai he cun ;
 His elders war of þe alde state,
 And of paire werkes sumdel he wate."
 Þan lete scho al þo oþer go,
- 220 And Iudas toke hir vnto ;
 And for he wald tell no resoun,
 He was done in depe dungeoun,
 And þore he lay in mirknes grete,
- 224 Seuyñ dayes, with-outen drink or mete.
 For hunger he cried on þe seuynd day,
 "Saue me and I sall yow say Whore 3e sall fynd þe rude tre,
- 228 Als my fader tolde vnto me ;
 Vnto me es þis mater dym,
 Bot sum knawing I haue by him."
 Fro prisun þan was Iudas tone,
- 232 And furth went with þam ilkone Vnto þe mount of Caluary ;
 þam folowd ful grete cumpany.
 And when þai come whore þai wald be,
- 236 þan Iudas knelid down on his kne,
 He said, "lord, pat all has in waldē,
 If tales be trew pat men has talde,
 If þou be he þis werld bigan,
- 240 And verrayli es both god and man,
 And of a maiden in erth was born,
 Als sere prophetis haue said biforn,
 Send us sum taking of þi grace,
- 244 To find þe rude tre in þis place,

This frightens
the Jews, who declare they know nothing of the Cross,

but that one Judas knows all about it.

Helena takes Judas and lets the others go.
Because Judas was obstinate she cast him into a mirk dungeon, where he remained seven days without food.
On the seventh day he declares his willingness to disclose
where the Cross is hid.

[leaf 151,
col. 1.]

Forth Judas goes to Calvary, followed by a great company.
When he came where he wished to be, he knelt down and prayed God to send some token of the Cross.

As soon as Judas had done praying
the hill above began to quake, a great smoke arose, and gave forth a sweet smell.

Then Judas
cried aloud,
"Of a truth,
Lord Christ,
thou art the Saviour of the world,
who was born of the chaste maiden ;
unto Thy law I will betake me,
and for ever forsake the Jew's law."

Then they made Judas
a Christian, and changed his name to Quiriac. He afterwards became a bishop.
They noted
where the smell came from, and grubbed
about the place until they found three crosses.

Then Quiriac prayed God to send them
the nails,

[leaf 151,
col. 2.]

Wharon þi self wald suffer dede,
If it be hid here in þis stede."
Als Judas þus gun his prayers make, 248
Þe hill obouen bigan to quake,
And þarof rase a ful grete reke,
Bot þat was ful wele smelland smeke ;
Ful mekil mirth was þam omell,
Fo[r] neuer man feld swetter smell ;
252
Þan Judas fast bigan to cry,
And he said ful stedfastly,
In veritate, christe, tu es redemptor mundi, 256
"In suthfastnes, lord criste, I trow, 258
Þe sauoure of þis werld es þow, Þat born was of þe mayden chaste,
And sall be euer of mightes maste ;
260 Vnto þi law I wil me take,
262
And þe Ieus law euer I forsake."
Þan cristen man þai gan him mak
And turned his name to Quiriak, 264
Sethin was he Bissehop in hali kirk,
And hali werkis oft gun he wirk.
Þai biheld whore þe smel come out,
And fast grubbed þai þore about ;
268
So depe þai grubbed and so fast, 270 Thre crosses fand þai at þe last ;
Ane of crist both large and lang,
And oper two þat theues on hang,
272
Bot þore was noman þat knew 274
Whilk was þe cros of ihesu.
Þan Quiriak prayd, with hert and hend, Þat god suld þam þe nailes send 276 Þat nayled crist þe rude vnto ;
278
And sune when he had prayed so Thre nayles aperd vnto þare sight,
In þe erth schineand ful bright ;
280 Þai toke thre nayles and crosses thre

- And bare þam to þe riche ceté ;
 Ful mikel folk come þam ogayne
 And of þare fare þai war ful fayne ;
 284 And on a bere þore gun men bring
 A ded bodi vnto þe beryiing.
 Quiriak bad þam þat it bare Set doune þe bere omang þam þare, 288 So forto proue þare, or þai pas, Whilk of þa crosses cristes was ;
 Quiriak fast vnto god prayd
 And ane cros to þe cors he layd, 292 And sethin ane oper he laid partill,
 Bot 3it euer lay þe bodi styll ;
 ¶ Þe thrid cros þan he toke forþi
 And layd it vnto þe ded body,
 296 And als sune als it neghed nere
 ¶ Þe cors rase up, both hale and fere ;
 And al þe folk þat saw þat sight Loued god, with al paire might ;
 300 And so þai past into þe toun,
 With a flul fayre processioune ;
 Al loued þai god, with ioyful mode,
 And saynt elyn scho bare þe rode ;
 304 þan sone omang þam herd þai 3ell
 A ful grete dyn of deuils of hell ;
 þai cried, "allas and wayloway,
 For dole what sal we do þis day ;
 308 Þe tre es funden whilk we suppose Sall ger vs all oure pouwer lose,
 For we haue power in no place,
 Whore men on þam þat takin mase ;
 312 Now mun oure power fro us pas, Wo wurth þe while it funden was !
 For fro þat figure bihoues vs fle
 So with man-kind ouereumen er we ;
 316 It puttes oway all oure powere, and forthwith there appeared three nails shining in the earth.

 Joyfully they return to the city.
 They meet men bringing a corpse upon a bier.
 Quiriak bids them set the bier down.

Then he laid each cross
 upon the dead body.

When the third cross touched the corpse it rose up whole and sound.

Forthwith
 they passed into the town with great procession,
 and St.
 Helena bore
 the Cross.

But a great yell and din of devils was heard among them crying
 "Allas and welladay, what shall we do this day, since the Cross is found and deprives us of all power in this place ?

Woe worth the time it was found !

But we care not for all the crosses men can make,
provided we can make them commit deadly sin."

[Leaf 151,
back, col. 1.]
"Thou wicked devil," said Quiriak,
"wend thy way into the deepest hole
of hell, evermore in doletodwell."

Then the fiends vanished with a hideous cry.

Queen Helena
made a silver case, adorned with gold and gems, and enclosed therein the Holy Cross.

She built a church on the Mount of Calvary, and put the Cross therein.
Men came from all quarters to honour the Cross, and many marvels were wrought
by it.

So þat we mai noght negh it nere,
Bot-if we may with any gyn
Mak þam to do dedly syn ;
Pan with þam wil I wun and wake, 320
For all þe crosses þat þai can make,
Bot I may neuer no man spill
With syn, bot-if þam seluin will ;
Asay I sall, with sere sutelté, 324
To ger men syn and serue me."
Quiriak said þan to þe fende
"Þou wikked deuil þi way þou wende, Vnto þe deppest hole of hell, 328
Euermore in dole to dwell ;
For funden es now þe haly tre þat fellis þi pride and þi pousté."
Þe fendes þan with hidose cry 332
Vanist fro þam ful sudanly ;
Pan went þai furth with meri mode
Vnto paire temple þai bare þe rude.
Pan þe nobil quene Eline 336
Gert mak a case of syluer fyne,
With gold and precius stones plenté,
And closid þarin þat haly tre ;
And on þe mount of caluary 340
Gert scho mak a kirk in hy,
And pore scho set þe haly tre
Of all men honord forto be ;
And sone when it was þeder broght, 344
Fro sere sides men þeder soght,
And ful grete grace was þore schewd,
And grete releue to lerd and leude ;
Thurgh cristen land so es it kend, 348
þat fro þe fendes it mai us fend,
So þat þai may do us none ill,
Bot-if oure self assent partill ;
For in world has he no powere, 352

Night ne day to negh us nere,
 If we his werkis will forsake,
 And cristes cros opou vs make.
 356 God grante us grace so to honoure
 Þe cros þat bare oure sauoure, Þat we may to þat blis be broght,
 Whilk crist with his blode to us boght.

The Cross
 may defend us from the devil, if we keepourselves
 free from sin.

Let us ever honour the Cross, so that we may be brought to that bliss which Christ purchased with his blood.

V.

THE UPLIFTING OF THE HOLY ROOD.

For the confirming of our faith, and to the glory of our Lord, we honour with songs of praise two days in the year on account of the Holy Rood, (ever) since it was discovered.

The Jewish folk hid it (the cross) with evil intention. They would not that this treasure (the cross) should become a comfort to men. But the blessed Helena afterwards discovered it there, through the revelation of Christ, as He marvellously had manifested it; and she divided the rood as the Lord had instructed her, and left one portion in that same city in which Christ had suffered, as the writings inform us, enclosed in silver; and she went home afterwards with the other portion of the precious tree to her dear son, in order to strengthen his faith.

Now we celebrate the day on which it (the cross) was found in honor of our Saviour, who would suffer on it. It is after Easter in the year's course; and we observe in harvest time with holy ministrations a second festival—that on which it (the cross) was brought again to Jerusalem, as we shall hereafter relate. It happened, unfortunately, as very often it still does, that the heathen nations invaded the land, and an impious king called Cosdrue came with a great army to the Holy Rood where Helena had placed it, in the aforesaid Jerusalem. Impiously bold, he harrowed then the land, and took the Holy Rood home to his own country. He was so uplifted and so wicked a ruler, that he would be God; and wrought then of silver a high steeple in the form of stone-work, and with shining gems surrounded all the house, and in the upper-story he wrought his throne all of red gold; and wonderfully drew out water by means of pipes, for he would cause rains, as if he himself were God. But he was nevertheless very foolish, for the rain might not be of service to any one. He laboured then still more to manifest his power, and bade the earth to be delved secretly with craft, so that horses ran constantly about the house through the secret trenches, dinning with their feet, for he would work thunder. Nevertheless was he witless.

He sat then in the house as High God, and placed the Holy Rood beside his throne, as it were for a companion in his impiety. He then sat there from that time forth, and to his son he assigned all his kingdom. But Christ destroyed him. An emperor there was in those days, named Eraclius, a Christian, of mature age, and undaunted in war; and he adorned his belief with good works, and honoured God's servants with benevolent mind.

Then came Cosdrue's son against the emperor Eraclius, for he desired to win his kingdom in battle. Then it was settled between them both, that they two should boldly go to single combat on the bridge of the river, and he who should get the victory should wield the kingdom, without the loss of the men who had come with them. Then they all said that if any man would assist either of them, forthwith he should be seized and with crippled limbs should be cast into the river.

They then went both on the bridge together, and the believing (faithful) emperor killed the enemy of God, Cosdrue's son, and he afterwards wielded all his kingdom, and rode to Cosdrue. Then all the army joyfully submitted to Eraclius, and he received them and brought them to baptism. And no one would make known to Cosdrue the battle (which had lately taken place), because he was hateful to all his people.

Then Eraclius went up to the steep upper-floor, and quickly said to the impious Cosdrue these words: "Life I will grant thee if thou wilt forthwith believe now on the Saviour Christ, and wilt promise that thou wilt be baptized, and I will be thy friend, and I will let thee have this land in thy possession; if thou then dost otherwise thou shalt be put to death."

Then would not Cosdrue believe on Christ, and Eraclius forthwith drew out his sword and beheaded him, and commanded him to be buried. He took his younger son, a boy of ten years old, and baptized him, and gave up to him the kingdom, and then delivered to his (own) army the high steeple, with all the silver; but he himself took the gold and gems into God's church. Then he carried the rood, with a procession of the people, again to Jerusalem, eagerly and joyfully.

Riding quickly, they came at last to the aforesaid city; and the emperor sat on a royal horse, as was most pleasing to him. But when he would enter (the city) then was the gate closed, so that the stones fell suddenly together, and so it was wrought into a wall.

Then were they terrified on account of that wonderful token, and forthwith looked sorrowfully to heaven, and saw our Lord's precious cross shining there; and God's angel bore it above the gate and thus said:

"When that the heavenly king, Christ Himself, entered in through this same gate to His own passion, He was not clothed with purple, nor adorned with royal crown, nor rode He through this stone gate on a steed, but on the back of an ass He meekly rode as an example to men, that they should shun pride." And after these words the angel went up. Lo! then the emperor quickly alighted, thanking God for the lesson; and he took off his purple and his girdle of pall. Then he went with naked feet and took the rood, praising God with shedding of tears.

Then befell a divine miracle to the stone-work. When the emperor came with meekness to them, then the stones parted and the gate opened itself. There was also another marvel, so that a winsome (delightful) odor steamed on the holy cross, when it was on its way home, through the land and filled the air; and the people rejoiced on account of this, being filled with the odor.

No perfume could give out so delightful a smell. And then the emperor exclaimed with joy: "O thou marvellous rood on which Christ would suffer and quench our sins with His precious blood! O thou rood shining more than the bright stars of middle earth! Greatly art thou to be loved, O holy and winsome tree; thou wert worthy to bear the prize of all middle earth! Be mindful of this assembly which is here gathered together for the honour of God!"

Then the emperor exalted the Holy Rood in that same place in which it stood at first, before the impious king, Cosdrue, took it therefrom. On that day the true Saviour marvellously manifested His power through the illustrious cross, so that a dead man arose on that day, and four bedridden ones were there wonderfully healed, and ten lepers from their lingering disease, and many maniacs regained their senses. And many sick ones were healed of various diseases at the Holy Rood for the honour of Christ. And the emperor afterwards performed many good deeds there, and endowed God's churches with lands and sustenance, and restored God's praise. He went then to his royal seat to Constantinople, with great faith meditating upon God's greatness. Now is the day called in Christian books Exaltatio Sanctæ Crucis, that is in English speech, Uplifting of the Holy Rood, because that it was exalted with great honour on the foresaid day to the honour of the Lord.

It is nevertheless to be noticed that it (the cross) is widely distributed, by means of frequent sections, to every land. But the spiritual token (signification) is with God ever incorruptible, though the tree be cut in pieces. The heavenly sign of the Holy Rood is our banner against the fierce devil, when we bless ourselves boldly through God with the sign of the cross and with right belief.

Though a man waver wonderfully with his hand, nevertheless it is not a blessing except he make the sign of the holy cross, and forthwith the fierce fiend will be terrified on account of the victorious token. With three fingers must a man make the sign and bless himself for the Holy Trinity, which is a glory-ruling God. Sometimes priests say that Christ's betrayer (traitor), the impious Judas, shall not hereafter be condemned in the great day (of doom) to the deep hell, and they say that he may excuse himself to Christ, as if he of necessity committed that treachery against Him. But against that we say that Christ's word is not false. He said concerning Judas, that it were better for him that he were not born, than that he should be His betrayer. Neither the Jews nor that secret traitor were compelled by God to that horrible intention, but when that Christ, who seeth all things, saw their evil will, He then turned it to good, so that their wickedness became to us for salvation. Each man who does evil with evil intention is guilty before God, though he may benefit some, and each man who does good with good will, hath his reward of God, though he may do harm to some by it, because the righteous judge giveth to each the reward according as he himself might determine (will) and his will might dictate to him. Now are the Jews and the shameless traitor (Judas), who plotted against Him, guilty of Christ's death (though that it became to us for everlasting redemption), and none of them shall ever come to Christ's kingdom unless they repent them of their sin and turn to Christ. The Saviour is so merciful, that He would have mercy upon His own murderers if they would turn and pray for His mercy, as many of them did, as for instance the centurion who wickedly pierced Him (Christ) in His holy side, and afterwards turned to Him. The centurion was named Longinus. He saw then how suddenly the sun became dark from midday until noon, and all middle earth trembled, and rocks burst asunder; then he turned to Christ, smiting his breast, saying loudly, Vere Filius Dei est hic—Truly this (man) is the Son of God. He then renounced his employment, and proceeded to the apostles, and was by them instructed in the faith, and with baptism was washed from his former deeds.

Judas and the Jews will be punished for their treatment of Christ.

Then he distributed all his goods in alms, and lived in purity as Christ's own servant (thain) in great abstinence, and preached to the heathen the true faith and forgiveness of sins, and put down idolatry, and performed miracles in God's name, until a cruel judge put him to death with great torments.

But he wrought many marvels before the judge, amid the torments, and blinded the judge through the power of God, that men might know how merciful the Saviour is who had magnified him so. Then was he beheaded for the sake of the Saviour, whom he had before cruelly wounded on the cross, and he (now) dwells eternally in glory with Him. The heathen judge who put him to death was named Octavius. But he came afterwards to the place where he was slain, and sought his body, praying for forgiveness, with weeping and lamentation. Then forthwith he saw with sound eyes, being enlightened by the same who had before made him blind. Then the judge sumptuously buried the body of Longinus, and believed on Christ, ever glorifying God until he departed this life. Glory and praise be to the benevolent God, who reigneth ever eternally. Amen.

The Jew says that he shall first put out his debtor's eyes, then cut off his hands, next his tongue and nose.

The judges
 tell him to take the flesh, but no drop of blood.

The Jew says that he is getting the worst of the bargain, for the blood
 must run away if he cuts the flesh.
 "A curse on you for your decision against me."

The judges answer that they are determined to do what is right.

[fol. 89 b.]

They condemn the Jew, and declare his goods to be forfeited to the queen.

The Jew then offers to show them where the Cross is,
if they release him from this penalty.

He asks time to make the necessary inquiries.

Helen a tells him that he shall lose his eyes if he does not find the place of the Cross.

On the day appointed he came before
the queen, and bids her follow him without delay.

He brought the queen
and other folk to Calvary.

The Jew, with spade in hand,
set to work,
and after digging twenty feet or more, he found three crosses.

They carried the crosses to the town
with great joy.

About midday they tested the crosses by a dead body.

As soon as the corpse touched the Cross of Christ, it rose to life, and addressed the Cross.

The Cross is carried to the Temple.

God bids the queen divide the Rood into four parts.
One part was to be left in the Temple, another part was to go to Rome, the third to Alexandria, and the fourth to Rome.

The queen divided the Rood as she was bidden.

She took a portion of it to Rome, and placed it in the "Kirke of St. Sophie."

The ceremony connected with the finding of the Cross occupied four days.

warde.*

A liquor ran from the Cross, and healed many sick folk.

Some of the liquor was caught in a vessel, and sent into divers countries.

Many men only believe what they have seen.

But since the world has been made, miracles of the Cross have appeared,
right and left,
in diverse places.

The Cross is mentioned in the Old Law.

This tree (of the Cross) was planted in Paradise.

Adam took shelter under it when he had sinned.

The cry of Abel's blood came from it, when slain by his brother.

The four corners of Noah's ark were made of the wood of this tree.

 wilderness, by which those who were stung by adders
 were healed.

The Cross is the head of Holy Writ, the foundation of our clergy,
and the rule of Holy Life.

It is made up of four (nails) and three (woods), by which we may understand the seven arts.

Multiply
four by three,
and it gives us the sum of the Old and the New Law (ten commandments of the Old Testament, two of the New).

Man is composed of seven elements, the body of four and the soul of three.

There is a good reason why the Cross was made of wood and not of stone.

The world is full of the name and the smell of the [fol. 91 b.]

Cross.

St. Helen found the nails,

and worked them up into the bridle of Constantine,

and many were converted by it.

Constantine bore them about for three years.

The nails are now at St. Denis.

EXPOSITION OF THE HOLY ROOD*.

* [Harl. 4196,
leaf. 177,
col. 2.]

In festo exaltacionis sancte crucis.

There was a king of Persia named " Chodroas," who had a son and heir
and many servants.

Every city and town were under his hand.
He set up a throne, and commanded his subjects to call him the King of kings, God, and Lord of lords.

He was not satisfied with this only, but went to Jerusalem, and threatened the Christians, and destroyed their churches.

He took his journey towards the Holy Sepulchre with the intention of destroying it, but turned back for fear.

A king sum tyme in cuntré was,
Pat had to name king chodroas,
A sun he had pat was his ayre,
And oþer menzé many and faire. 4
Of þe cuntré of pers was he king,
And all þe land at his dedeing.
He gert ilk ceté and ilk toune
Vnto his biding be so boune, 8
Pat in a trone up he him sett,
And cumand þam with-owten lett
Pat king of kinges þai suld him call,
And also god grettest of all, 12
And lord of lordes both loud and still,
And none on melde¹ mete him untill.
Zit was noght þis in pat sesowne
Inogh till his confusione ; 16
Bot to ierusalem he went,
And said all suld be schamely schent
Pat trowed on crist or on his lay.
Par-to he dose all pat he may, 20
In ierusalem paire kirkes he stroyde,
And cristen men ful gretly noyed.
He toke his wai þan to þe graue
Whare crist was layd pat vs sall saue, 24
It to destroy with all his mayn ;
Bot for ferdnes he turned ogayne,
And durst do no thing at þe kyrk,

The Cross that the noble
 queen Helena had found, she brought to Jerusalem,

and adorned it with silver and gold.

For the preservation of the same she made a church, where men might go and honour
 the holy tree.

² MS. chosdroass.

This impious king, when he knew where
 the Cross was,
 took possession of it, and carried it away with him to his own country.

³ MS. þant.
 He raised a fair tower of silver adorned with precious stones.

Therein he set a throne of gold, ornamented with precious stones.

By representations of the heavenly bodies, he made the tower look

[col. 2.]
 like heaven, and caused rain to descend therefrom.
 He even imitated the song of angels by means of secret whistles.

In this tower
he raised a seat for himself, and set the Holy Cross
beside him.
There he sat
like a god, and hade all his subjects call him such.
He assigned the kingdom
to his son.

For many a day he practised his cursed "manmetry," leading the folk in the devil's law.
Thus with the devil we will let him dwell, and of his son we will now talk.
Eraclius
lived at this time, a noble and Christian king.

He had a wife and children,
and led his life
in Christ's law.
The son of
"Chosdroas"
was envious of the Christian king's renown,

and made preparations to fight against him, and to destroy him, if possible.

Eraclius,
hearing of this, gathered together a large Christian company to defend his kingdom.

The two armies met at a certain place near a river.

A sege untill him self he wroght, 64
And þare he gert with mekill pride
Set þe haly cros him biside.
Par als a god he sat in stall,
And so he bad men suld him call. 68
His kingdom and all his riallté, Vntill his sun haly gaf he ;
And on þis wise þat curst caytiue
In maumetry wald lede his liue. 72
And so he did full many a day
Ledeand þe folk in fendes lay.
Þus with þe deuil we lat him dwell,
And of his son I sall now tell. 76
A nobill king of cristendum, Þat namen was heraclium,
Was gouernowre of grete [empire]
Souerainly als lord and syre ; 80
Childer he had and worthy wife,
In cristes law he led his life.
Þan þis son of chosdroas
In his hert euill angerd was 84
Þat þis cristen king had name
More þan he or his sire at hame.
Þarfore he ordand him in hy,
And gaderd a grete cumpani 88
Of sarzins by his assent ;
And with ful grete ost es he went,
With þis cristen king to fight,
And to destroy him if he might. 92
Bot sone eraclius herd tell,
Of þis falshed how it bi-fell.
He ordand him full hastily
Of cristen men grete cumpany. 96 Bot als it was oure lordes will,
When aither come oþer vntill,
In place whare þai swld batayl take,

- 100 On pis wisse gan þai couenant make.
 A water was þam twa by-twene,
 And a brig all ouer it elene.
 Þe sarzyn was mekill of brede and lenth,
 104 And traisted mikill in his awin strenkth.
 Þarfore pis forward gan he ma
 To do þe batail bitwix þam twa.
 And þat þe cristend man suld mete him
 108 In middes þe brig was ouer þe brim,
 And wheþer so might maistri win
 On his side suld þe bataill blin;
 And he suld haue in his pousté 112 All þat þai bath had, land and fe.
 To pis couenant assented þai bath,
 And parto band þai þam with ath,
 Þat if þaire men on owþir side 116 Come forto help þam in þat tide,
 Þai suld be cut for þaire iornay,
 Þaire armes and þaire legges oway,
 And so be kasten in þe flode,
 120 And saue þam suld none erthly gude.
 When bath þe sides war sworn þar-till,
 Pis couenand lely to fulfill,
 Þe twa lordes¹ on þe brig² met,
 124 And aþer hard on oþer set.
 Ful fast þare faght þai tow in fere,
 And none oþer durst negh þam nere.
 Þan cristen men, with hertes fre, 128 Prayed to ihesu crist, þat he Suld send þaire prince þe victory,
 Als he for þam on rode wald day,
 And all þai praied þan with a voice :—
 132 “Thurgh vertu of þi haly croyce, Whar-thurgh þou wan þe victori
 Of þe fende, oure fals enmy,
 Þou grante þis day oure prince to wyn

The son of “Chosdroas” proposed to Eraclius to decide the contest by a battle between the two on the bridge of the river.
 The Sarasin was great in breadth and length, and

[leaf 178,
 col. 1.]

trusted much in his own strength.
 He who came off conqueror was to have the other's possessions.

To this plan both consented, and bound themselves with an oath to cripple and throw into the stream any one who should come to their assistance.

lordes.

The two lords met on the bridge of the river, and set hard on each other.

The Christians with one voice prayed that their lord might have the victory over the false Sarasin.

Christ heard them and gave His faithful servant the victory.

When the heathens saw that their master was killed, they were so terrified that they swore new oaths to stand with Eraclius in evil and good,
and with heart and hand.
Willingly they promised to become followers of Christ.

[col. 2.]

Eraclius
received them with joyful
heart, and had them all baptized that very day.

² So in MS.

Then Eraclius
set out for Persia, and on his way he induced the people to become Christians.
Those that refused were put to death.

þe maistri ouere zon fals sarzyn." 136
On þis manere all prayed þai fast ;
And ihesuc herd þam at þe last,
And ordand to his trew serwand
Of þe sarzin to hawe ouer¹ hand, 140
And to destroy him in þat place.
Blisced be he þat gaf slike grace.
Sone when þe sarzins saw þis sight,
How þaire maister to ded was dight, 144
Swilk drede in hert had þai ilkane, þat þai oblist þam noght allane,
To hald þe couenand made byforne,
Bot new athes all haue þai sworn, 148
With eraclius forto stand,
In ill and gude, with hert and hand,
And wilfully all hale hete þai,
Forto leue on cristes lay, 152
And forto bycum cristen men,
And crist for þaire god euer to ken.
Sone when eraclius saw þat sight,
He resayued þam with hert ful light, 156
And cownsaild þam with wordes fre, þat þai suld all baptist be,
And trow in crist with gude entent,
And to his saw all þai assent. 160
So war þai baptist all þat day,
And lifed euer in cristes lay.
Veraclius² when þis was done,
In-to pers puruaid him ful sone, 164
And with him all þat cumpany þat bifore lifed in maumetry.
And als he went thurgh-out þat land,
All þe folk þat he þare fand 168
Ouper war þai baptist sone
Or els þai war vnto ded done.
þus conquest he all þat cuntré,

- 172 Till he come tyll þat same ceté, Whare Cosdroas so sitand es
 Als a god in grete reches.
 Into þe toure he went full sone
- 176 And fand him sitand in his trone,
 Dubbed obut with pricius stanes,
 And dight ful nobilly for þe nanes.
 Biside him stode þat haly tre
- 180 Þat þai had soght so forto se;
 And souerainly for þat tre sake, Wirschip to him gan þai make.
 Þan cosdroas was full affraid,
- 184 And þus Eraclius to him said:— “If þo will haue þi life in land,
 Als I say sall þou vnder-stand,
 For þou has done þis tre honore,
- 188 Þat bare ihesu oure sauoyore;
 All if þou did it noght for him
 Vnto þe grante I life and lym.
 At þe reuerence of þis haly tre,
- 192 If þo will trow in ihesu fre,
 And forsake all þi mawmetry,
 Þat þou and þi folk yn affy,
 And turn þe unto ihesu crist,
- 196 And in his name will be baptist,
 þi life in land þan haue þou sall
 And all þi kingdom still withall.
 And if þou will noght do þis rede
- 200 With my swerd þou sal be dede.”
 þis sarzin wald noght turn his mode,
 To leue his fals goddes for no gude.
 þarfore Eraclius ful sone
- 204 Strake of his heuyd with-uten hone,
 And bad þat he sul[d] haue beriing,
 By-caus þat he had bene a king.
 þan þai toke þat haly tre,

He came to the city of “Cosdroas,” where he found the emperor sitting like a god on his throne.

Beside him was the Holy Cross.
 When Eraclius's men
 saw that sight, they did honour to “Cosdroas” for the sake of the Cross.
 Eraclius thus spake to the heathen king: “Forasmuch as thou hast done honour to the Cross of Christ, I will spare thy life if thou wilt forsake all thy ‘mawmetry,’ and turn to Jesus Christ and be baptized.

If thou wilt not follow my advice, with my sword shalt thou be slain.”
 The heathen king refused to become a [leaf 178 b,
 col. 1.] Christian,
 therefore Eraclius struck off his head without more ado.

With hymns
and noble

songs they took the Cross, and carried it away with them.

As they drew near Mount Olivet, which is on the way to Jerusalem, they came close to the gate of the city where Jesus entered when he came thither to suffer pain.

Much folk of the town had assembled to see the procession of the Cross.

Eraclius rode with much pride along with his nobles.

But when they attempted to enter the city, the gates closed like a wall of stone, and they saw no signs of any mode of entrance.

Sore afraid were they when they saw this miracle.

chius*.

With ful grete solempnité, 208
And bare it¹ furth so þam omang,
With himpnes and with nobil sang.
And all þe folk þan war ful glad,
Þat þai þis haly tre þus had. 212
Hamward þai toke þe way in hy,
With mekill mirth and melody ;
And als þai come in þe strete,
Doun ouer þe mownt of olyuete, 216
Als it fell in þare iornay,
To ierusalem þe redy way,
Graithly furth þai held þe gate,
Vnto þai come till þat ilk zate, 220
Whare ihesuc crist went in ful playn,
When he come peder at suffer payn ;
And mekill folk of þat same toune,
Þat war cumen with processiwne, 224
For wirschip of þe haly tre,
And sum þat reall sight to se,
Eraclius him self gan ride
Bifor þe prese with mekill pride, 228

 248 þat þai might win to þat ceté.
 þus praied þai all with drery steuyn, Heueand up þaire heuides till heuyn ;
 And als þai loked so up on hight, 252 þai saw ane angell schineand bright,
 Euyn opon þe wall standand,
 And þe signe of þe cros in his hand ;
 He stode obouen whare þe zate suld be, 256 And þir wordes on þis wise sayd he.
 He said, "when crist of heuyn king,
 þat lord es of all erthly thing,
 þis same wai to þis ceté went,
 260 þare forto suffer¹ grefe turment,
 In at þis zate he toke þe way,
 Bot he come all on oper array.
 Grete hors for him none ordand was,
 264 Bot sitand on a simple ass ;
 He was noght cled in kinges clething,
 Bot pouerly went he in all thing ;
 He went noght with grete minstralsy,
 268 Bot in his prayers ful preuely :
 Ensaumple suthly forto gif
 To þam þat in his law wald lif,
 In him to trow with trew entent, 272 And mekely to wende als he went."
 When þis was said, he went up euyn,
 With grete light, till oure lord in heuyn.
 þe Emperoure þan Eraclius 276 Ful hertly thanked dere ihesuc ;
 And all þe folk þat with him ware
 War ful faine of þis ferly fare.
 Sone of his stede down es he light,

Eraclius and his company then prayed to God for help to enter the city.

[col. 2.]

As they looked up to heaven, they saw an angel shining bright standing on the wall with the sign of the Cross in his hand, and thus he spake to them :
 ' When Christ,
 heaven's king, entered this city by this gate, he had no great horse, but rode on a simple ass ;

He was not clad in king's clothing, but went in poorly—not with great minstrelsy,
 but with secret prayer."

Having thus spoken, the angel ascended to heaven.
 The emperor thanked God for the instruction he had received.

He then got off his horse,

cast off all his gay clothing,
his crown and ornaments,

and barefooted bore the Cross on its way,

Then the gates opened wide, and they entered with solemn song.

The Cross was restored to its former place.
That day many miracles were wrought
by virtue of
the Cross.
Blind men got their sight, crooked men were made [leaf 179,

straight, the dumb and deaf were healed, and devils were chased out of many.

Unto Christ
be honour for ever and ever!

And kest of all his clething bright,	280
His corown and his kinges array
And his dubbing he did oway,
And barefot went he on his fete,
Bercand þe cros ¹ by þe strete.	284
And on þis maner did þai all.
And when þe king come nere þe wall,
It opind and wex zates wide,
Als it had bene bifor þat tyde.	288
Þai entred þan with solempne sang,
Ful mekill mirth was þam oma[n]g;
And þe cros bare þai þam bitwene,
Till þe stede whare it bifore had bene,	292
And up þai set it really,
And honord it als was worthi.
Þat day pare, thurgh þe cors allane,
War miracles wroght ful maniane,	296
Of sere blind men þat had þaire sight,
And crokid men war made ful right;
Of parlesy war helid grete wane,
And dum and defe ful maniane;	300

DISPUTE BETWEEN MARY AND THE CROSS*.

* [Vernon MS. fol. 315 b,
col. 3.]

Disputacio inter Mariam et Crucem, secundum Apocrafum.

I.

- O ure ladi freo',
on Rode treo',
made hire mon :
4 Heo seide on þe' þe fruit of me'
is wo bigon :
Mi fruit I· seo'
8 in blodi bleo'
Among his fon, Serwe I· seo',
þe veines fleo'
12 from blodi bon :
Cros· ! þou dost no troupe ;
On a pillori· my fruit to pinne,
He hap no spot· of Adam sinne ;
16 Flesch· and veines· nou fleo a-twinne, Wherfore I· rede of routhe· :

Our gracious lady made the following complaints against the Rood-tree;— On thee my fruit is woebegone.

My offspring is fastened to a tree, spotless as he is.
Alas ! flesh and veins are come in twain,
and therefore am I sorrowful.

II.

- Cros· þi bondes schul ben blamed,
Mi fayre fruit· þou hast bi-gyled ;
20 þe fruites Mooder· was neuere a-famed,
Mi wombe is feir·, founden vn-fuyled :
Chyld· whi artou not a-schamed

I, the mother of my child, was never defamed ; my body is fair and spotless.

Great Jews
sinned, and thou didst die for their wild works.
I melt in mourning, for my offspring
is defiled.

By great Jews
is he crucified,
and dies for man's guilt.

On a pillori· to ben I·-piled ?
Grete Iewes· þus weore gramed, 24
And dyede· for heore werkes wyled ;
In mournyng· I· may melte :
Mi fruit· þat is so holi halwed,
In a feeld· is fouled· and falwed ; 28
Wiþ grete Iewes· he is galwed,
And dyep· for Monnes gelte :

III.

On account of the great Jews, gallows was upreared.

A deadly drink, O Cross, thou gavest to the Lord of life.
His veins did burst through the torture.

Defiled is my son, that never trespassed, with thieves that ever loved riot.
Why shall my son be nailed ?

For grete Iewes· galwes were greipēd, þat euer to Robbyng· Ronne ryf ; 32 Whi schal my sone· on þe beo leid, þat neuer nuyzed· mon nor wyf ?
A drinke of deþ· sopliche seid,
Cros þou ȝeuest· þe lord of lyf : 36
His veynes to bursten· wiþ þi breid, Mi fruit stont nou· in a strong stryf ;
Blod from hed· is hayled, Fouled· is my fayre fruit, 40
þat neuer dude· tripet ne truit Wiþ þeues þat loueden· ryot and ruit ;
Whi schal my sone· be nayled ?

IV.

Thou, O
Cross, art made to bear fools full of sin.
My son should be excused,
and never ought his blood to run on thee.
With thieves must he hang far in fen,

Men may know me as a sorrowful
mother.

þorwȝ Iugement· þou art en-Ioynet 44
To bere fooles·, ful of sinne :
Mi sone from þe· schulde beon ensoynet,
And neuere his blod· vppon þe rinne ;
But nou is truþe· wiþ tresun teynet, 48
Wiþ þeoues to honge·, fer in fenne ;
Wiþ feole nayles· his limes ben feynet,
A careful Moder· men mai me kenne,
In Bales· I· am bounde : 52

- þat fruit was of a Mayden born,
 On a þeoues tre is al to torn ;
 A Broche þorw-out his brest bo[r]n 56 His holi herte haþ wounde :

The Virgin's child is torn [fol. 316.]
 asunder on a thief's tree.

V.

- Tre þou art loket bi þe lawe þeoues traitours on þe to d[e]ye,
 But now is troupe wiþ tresun drawe, 60 And vertu falleþ in vices weye ;
 But loue and treupe, in soþfast sawe,
 On a treo traytours hem teye,
 Vertu is wiþ vices slawe :
 64 Of alle vertues my sone is keye,
 Vertu swettore þen spices :
 In fot and hond bereþ blodi prikke,
 His hed is ful of þornes þikke, 68 þe goode hongeþ a-mong þe wikke,
 Vertu dype wiþ vices :

Truth is distorted by treason, and virtue is fallen in the way of vice (i.e. is treated like vice).
 Traitors tie
 love, faith, and sooth-fastness on the tree.

In foot and hand he bears bloody wounds.
 His head is full of thick thorns; the good man hangs along with the wicked.

VI.

- Tre vnkynde þou schalt be kud,
 Mi sone step-Moder I þe calle :
 72 Mi fruit was born wiþ beestes on bed,
 And be my flesch my flour gan falle,
 Wiþ my brestes my brid I fed ;
 Cros þou ȝeuest him Eysel and Galle !
 76 Mi white Rose Red is spred, þat fostred was in a fodderes stalle ;
 Feet and fayre hondes :
 þat nou ben croised I euste hem ofte, 80 I lulled hem I leid hem softe :
 Cros þou holdest hem hiȝe on lofte Bounden in bledyng bondes !

Unkind tree,
 my son's stepmother I call thee.
 My child was born along with beasts.
 With my breasts I fed
 him.
 My white rose is become red,
 even he that was fostered in a "fodder's stall."
 Feet and fair hands that now are crossed, oft have I kissed and lulled them, and laid them softly down.

VII.

I lulled aloft my love, and with cradle band I bound him.
On the Cross
he hangs; on thystairnaked and exposed to the wild wind.

I may well be sorrowful,
God's head
hath no rest, but leans on his shoulder-bone, and thorns pierce
his flesh.

Mi loue i-lolled vp in þe eyr,
Wip cradel bond I gan him bynde, 84
Cros he stikeþ nou on þi steir,
Naked a-3eyn þe wylde wynde :
Foules fourmen heor nestes in þe eyr,
Wolues in den reste þei fynde, 88
Bot Godes sone, in heuene heir,
His hed nou leoneþ on þornes tynde,
Of Mournyng I may mynne :
Godes hed haþ reste non, 92
But leoneþ on his scholder bon ;
þe þornes þorwh his flesch gon,
His wo I wyte hit sinne :

VIII.

So high thou holdest my son that his feet I cannot kiss.
I thrust out my lips, I outstretched my neck to kiss
his feet.
The Jews drove me from
the Cross,
and on me
made their mouths anisss,
their games
and their jokes.
O Cross, thou bearest my bird, beaten blue, along with fraudulent thieves.

Cros to slen hit is þi sleiht, 96
Mi fayre fruit þou berest fro blis ;
Cros þou holdest him so heih on heizþ,
Mi fruites feet I mai not kis ;
Mi mouþ I pulte, my sweore I streizt 100
To cusse his feet, soþ ping hit is :
þe Iewes from þe cros me keizt,
On me þei made heore mouwes amis, Heore games and heore gaudes : 104
þe Iewes wrouzten me ful wo : Cros I fynde þou art my fo,
þou berest my brid, beten blo,
A-mong þeose fooles fraudes : 108

 No red wine

comes until the grapes be set in the press.
I press wine for "knight and knave." Upon a bloody brink
I press a grape with stroke and strife.
In Samaria
God gave a woman that precious liquor to drink.

On Cross without edge of knife I cut fruit off God's treasure.

I was pillar, and bare a bridge.
God is the way, the true way.

None went to heaven until God died, and taught them how thither men should go when they die.

In the Mosaic law a white lamb is the type of a saviour—the greatest of all meats.

I was that chief bearer (of sins).
I bare flesh for the feast of folks.
Christ, roasted in the sun,
feeds both most and least.
On me lay the Lamb of Love.

 Wiþ blood· I· was bi-ronne :

I was the platter which bare his body, until feet and hands were rent asunder.

 Sour verjuice may gladden our souls, and cause the devil
 to tremble.

When ye eat Christ's flesh in God's house, stand stiffly by the staff of Christ's Cross,

 black, is betokened by Christ.

His body upon a board was bent; the blood illuminated his body, that shone red upon the Rood.
 Our pardon was written on his body from top to toe.

Our book was bound in blood.

XVI.

Adam
drowned his ghost in bitter gall; instead of this gall God gave us mead; with sweet mercy
the bitterness is quenched.
His body was the book, the Cross was the board, when Christ was clenched thereon.
Were a man ever so blessed a saint no prayer could get pardon for him, until book on board was spread,
dinted and driven with sharp nails, till feet and hands were riven.

Adam stod vp in stede, 200

To make vr gostes glad: 212

XVII.

[fol. 316,
col. 3.]

I was the first press to squeeze out the wine,
I bare a bridge to teach the way where seemly angels
sit and sing.
The Cross
was a tablet
of pardon.
In book it is billed (written).
When blood was written on Christ's body then was pardon
obtained for sinners.

 together.
 Like hard stones were
 the Jews.
 Softer than dew on the lilly-flower was Christ's body in bloody colours.

 defend us from the lion's paw."

Men might more easily creep through the stones of the wilderness than bore their way into heaven's bliss.
 But blood brake open the gate.

 O Cross, why wast thou so ready to rend
 my offspring?

[Cross replies:]

Lady, to make the devil
afraid, God shaped me as a shield against shame.
I am a chosen, choice relic that no

died.

Mankind was tied in hell until Christ
died and rose.
At noon the drove him with the dints

 all to draf.

 O Cross, thou reendest my

 Calvary the day Christ died, and said they were sorry and sore
 afraid.
 The first said :
 " On the Cross Christ's blood ran down the block.
 Through feet

 knocked.
 Then my

 to grow cold."

The second said:

"It was not that that so much as the setting up of

the Cross after he was nailed thereon.
Then the nails rent his hands and feet.

The hard hat

and a sword went through Mary's breast.
Out of the

 The Cross
 thus replies :
 " I did hear

 Gode ensaumple here schul 3e,
 4 Of noble Mater wrouzt it is,
 How Mary spak to þe rode tre, Whan her sone was in angvys;
 þe Cros answeyrd þat lady fre,
 8 Ful myldely sei3e clerkys wys, ¶ þat pis tale haue made coupe;
 þei haue expounded it by sizt,
 A good ensaumple and a bryzt;
 12 But Apocrifum þei holde it ri3t,
 For tre spak neuere wiþ mouþe.

[Royal MS.

 Listen to the controversy between Mary and the Cross.

This story is apocryphal.

II.

- ¶ Oure lady fre,
 To þe rode tre,
 16 Sche made her mone,
 And seyde, "on þee
 Is fruyt of me
 Full wo-bygone:
 20 With bloody ble
 My fruyt I gan see,

Maria.

Our Lady made her moan to the Rood.

* The numbers are those of the corresponding stanzas in the text, pp. 131-149, the order being somewhat different.

Among hys fone :
 Of Sorewe I see,
 Hys veynes fle 24
 Fro bloody bone :
 ¶ Tre, þou dost no treupe,
 On pilory my fruyt to pynne,
 He hap no spot of Adam synne, 28
 Flessche and veynes fle atwynne, Wherfore I rede of reupe.

She accused the "tree" of a want of truth in punishing her child

III.

¶ Cros, þi bondes schul be blamed,
 My gode fruyt þou hast bigyled ; 32
 Þe fruytes modir was neuer famed,
 My wombe is faire founde vnfyld :
 Child, why art þou noȝt aschamed
 On pilory to be I-pyled, 36
 As grete þeys þat were gramed, Þat deyeden þorouȝ her werkis wyld ?
 ¶ Blode from hede is hayled,
 All to-fowled is my faire fruyte, 40
 Þat neuer dyd treget ne truyte
 With þeys þat loue ryot vnryte ;
 Why schal my sone be nayled ?

"Cros, thy bonds are to be blamed for defiling my fair fruit,

that never did wrong.

IV.

¶ Þe grete þeys galowes were greyd, 44
 Þat euere to robbe ronnen ryfe ;
 Why schal my sone þer-on be leyde ?
 He noȝd neuer man ne wyfe.
 A drynk of deef sopely seyde, 48
 Cros, þou ȝeuyst¹ þe lord of lyfe :
 Hys veynes breke with þi breyde,
 My fruyte stont in stroke and stryfe :

He never did harm to any.

A deadly drink thou givest thy Lord.

- 52 ¶ The faire fruyte of my flessche,
 My leue childe with-oute lak,
 For Adam goddis biddynge brak;
 þe blood ran on my briddes bak, 56 Droppyng as dewe on ryssche.

[leaf 127.]

For Adam's sin the blood ran down my bird's back.

IV.

- ¶ The Iugement haue þei Ioyned
 To bere fooles full of synne :
 3it scholde my sone fro þee be soyned,
 60 And neuer hys blood on þe rynne ;
 But now is truþe with tresoun twyned,
 With a þeeft to henge fer in fenne ;
 With fele nayles hys feet be pynd,
 64 A careful modir men may me kenne, ¶ In balys I am bounde :
 þe brid þat was of a mayde borne,
 On þis tree is all for-torne ;
 68 A broche þorow hys breest was borne,
 Hys hert now hap a wounde.

Truth is now united to treason.
 With a thief my son is hanged.

V.

- ¶ Tre, þou art lokyd by lawe
 þat a þeeft and a traytour on þe schal deye, 72 Now is truþe with tresoun drawe,
 Vertu is falle by vicys weye ;
 Love and truþe and soþfast sawe,
 On a tre traytours do teye,
 76 Now is vertue with vyces slawe :
 Of all vertues cryst is keye, ¶ Vertue is swetter þan spyces,
 In foote and honde he bereþ blody prykke, 80 þe heed is full of þornes pikke, þe goode hangeþ among þe wikke,
 Vertue þus deiþ wip vyces.

O tree, thou art only made for traitors,

yet virtue is slain along with vice,

and the good hangeth among the wicked.

VI.

Thou, Cros, art my son's stepmother.

- ¶ Cros, vnkynde þou schalt be kyd,
My sonys stepmodir I þe calle : 84
My bridde was borne with beeste on bedde,
And by my Fleissche my fruyt gan fall[e],
And with my breestys my brid I fedde ;
Cros, þou ȝyuest hym eyseþ and galle ! 88
My white rose rede is spred, þat floryssched was in foddres stalle ;
¶ Feet and faire handes
þat now be croysed I kissed hem ofte, 92
I lulled hem and leyde hem softe :
And þou Cros haldes hym hiȝe alofte Bounde in bloody bandes !

The limbs that I have caressed now hang aloft.

VII.

[leaf 127 b.]

- ¶ My love I lulled vppe in hys leir, 96
With cradel-bande I gan hym bynde, Cros, he stikeþ vpon þi steir,
Naked in þe wylde wynde :
Fowles formen her nest in þe eyr, 100
Foxes in den rest þei fynde,
But goddys sone and heuenys eir,
Hys hede holdeþ on þornes tynde,
¶ Of moornyng I may mynne : 104
My sonys hed hap reste none,
But lenep on þe schuldre bone ;
þe þornes þorow þe panne is gone
Thys woo I wyte synne. 108

Naked he hangs in the wild wind.

He hath no rest, and the thorns pierce
his brain.

VIII.

So high, O Cros, thou
holdest him, that I cannot kiss his feet.

- ¶ Cros, to sle hym is þi sleipe,
My bloody brid þou berest fro blysse ;
Cros, þou holdest hym hiȝe on heiþe,
Hys faire feet I may not kysse ; 112

- My mouþe I putte, my swere I strecche Hys feet to kys ;
 Þe Iewes fro þe cros me kecche,
 116 And on me make her mowe amys,
 ¶ Her game and her gawdes ;
 Þe Iewes wrouȝt on me wo :
 Cros, I fynde þou art my fo,
 120 My brid þou berist beten blo ;
 Among þes folys frawdys."

The Jews
drive me from the Cross.

Cross, thou art my foe, thou hast beaten my bird blue."

IX.

- ¶ Cristys Cros þan ȝaf answe:—
 "Lady, to þe I owe honour, 124 Þi bryȝt palme now I bere ;
 My schynyng scheweþ of þi flour,
 Thy trye fruyt I to-tere ;
 Þi fruyt me florysschip in blood colour 128 Þe worlde to wynde as þou mayst here ;
 Þis blossom blomed in þi bour,
 ¶ Not all for þe alone,
 But forto wynde all þis werd ;
 132 Þat waltereþ vnder þe deueles swerd :
 Þorowe foote and honde god lete hym gerd,
 To amende mannys mone.

Sancta Crux.

Thy fruit flourishes in red blood ;

it bloomed
not alone for thee, but for all the world.

X.

- ¶ Adam dyd full grete harmes,
 136 He bote a fruyt vnder a bowe, Þerfore þi fruit spred hys armes,
 On tre þat is tized with tyndes towe ;
 Hys body is smyte ny þe þarmes,
 140 He swelt with a swemely swow ;
 Hys breest is bored with deepis armes,
 And with hys deep fro deep vs drowe

Thy fruit is spread out on the tree for Adam's sin.

[leaf 128.]

- ¶ And all hys goode freendys,
 As Isayas spak in propheye : 144
 He seyde 'þi sone, seynt Marye, Hys deþe slowe deþe in Caluarye,
 And leueþ with-oute endys'.

Thy son's death slew death on Calvary.

XII.

- ¶ Lady, love doþe þe alegge 148
 Fruite prikkyd with sperys orde :
 I Cros, with-oute knyues egge,
 I kerue fruit best of horde ;
 All is rede, Ribbe and rigge, 152
 Þe bak bledeþ azens þe borde ;
 I am a pyler and bere a brigge,
 God is þe weye, witnesse one worde ;
 ¶ God seiþ he is soþefast weye : 156
 Many folk slode to heft slider,
 To heuene noman cowde pider,
 Til god deiþed and tauþt whider
 Men drawe whan þei deye : 160

I cut the best of fruits.

Many folk went to hell ere Christ died for them.

XIII.

- ¶ And Moyses fourmed hys figour,
 A whyte lambe, and noon oper beest
 He sacred so oure sauour,
 To be mete of myztes meest, 164
 And chosen cheef in honour,
 I bare fleissche to folkys feest ;
 Iesu cryst oure creatour,
 Hys Flessche feded leste and mest, 168
 ¶ Rosted azens þe sonne ;
 On me lay þe lambe of love,
 I was plater, hys body above,
 Whan flessche and veynes all to-clove, 172
With blood I was bironne.

Christ is spoken of as a lamb in the Mosaic law.

I was a platter, and bore the lamb's flesh.

XIV.

- ¶ 3it Moyses þis resoun rad,
 'Ete 3oure lambe with soure vergeous'; 176 Sowre saws make þe sowle glad,
 Sorowe for synnes oures;
 þat vergeous makeþ þe fende a-drad,
 And fer fleþ fro goddis spous;
 180 And bere a staaf and stonde saddle,
 Whan flessche þe fedip in goddis hows, ¶ þis staf is crystis crouche;
 Stonde pou styf by þis stake, 184 Whan 3e fonge 3owre fleissche in take,
 þan may þe deuyt no maystryes make,
 3oure sowles to touche.

The paschal lamb was eaten with bitter herbs.

The eaters
 bore a staff,

The staff is Christ's Cross.

XV.

- ¶ Whan pardoun is schewed with a scryne, 188 With boke on bord with nayles smyte,
 With rede lettres wryten blyne,
 Blewe and blak among me pyte:
 My lorde I likne to þat signe, 192 þe body was bored and on borde bete,
 In bryt blode oure boke gan schyne;
 How woo he was no wigt may wyte, ¶ Ne rede in hys rode;
 196 3oure pardoun boke fro top to too,
 Wryten it was full wonder woo,
 Rede woundes and strokes bloo, 3oure boke was bounde in blode.

[leaf 128 b.] Pardon is written in red letters.

Christ's bleeding body denoted our pardon.

Our book was bound in blood.

XXIII.

- 200 ¶ In holy write þis tale I herde,
 How riche 3iftis god vs 3af;
 God seiþ hym-self a good scheperde,
 And euery herde byhoueþ a staf;

Every shepherd needs a staff.

The Cross is a shepherd's staff.

Pe cros I kalle þe heerdys 3erde, 204
Perwith þe deuyt a dent he 3af,
With þat 3erd þe wolfe he werid,
With dyntes drofe hym aȝ to draf."

¶ Pe Cros þis tale tolde, 208
 How he was þe staf in herdis hande, Whan scheep borsten oute of bande¹,
 Þe wolfe he wered oute of lande
 Þat deuouride crystis folde. 212

¹ MS. hande.

It drives the devil from Christ's fold.

XVIII.

[Mari]a.
Mary replies.

¶ Oure ladye seyde, "Cros, of þi werk Wonder naȝt þei I be wroþe, Þus seyde Poule, crystes clerk,
 To þe fikeȝ Iewes, with-oute ope, 216
 Iewes stone hard, with synnes merke,
 Þei bete a lambe with-oute loþe,
 Softer þan water vnder serk,
 Milk or mede melled boþe: 220

The Jews did
beat an innocent
lamb.

Stone-hearted Jews bruised
the soft body
of Jesus.

¶ Þe Iewes were þe hard stonys.
 Softer þan water or mylk lycour,
 Or dew þat lithe on lily-flour
 Was cristes body in blode colour, 224
 Þe Iewes brisseden hys bonys.

XX.

¶ Sipe mannys sone was so nedy,
 To be lad as a lamb so mylde,
 Why were gylours so gredy 228
 To fowle so my faire chylde?
 And Cros, why were þou so redy
 My fruite to foule fer in felde?"
 Þe cros seyde, "to make þe deuyȝ dredy, 232
 God schope me schelde schame to schelde,

Why were traitors so ready to defile
my child?

"To make the devil afraid," said
the Cross, Sancta Crux.
"God shaped me as a shield.

- ¶ Sipe lombe of love dyede,
 And on me ȝelde hys goost with voys ;
 236 Men chose me a relyk choys, Þe signe of Iesu Crystis Croys, Þer dar no deuyl abyede :

[leaf 129.]

I am a choice relic ; no devil can abide me.

XXI.

- ¶ Many folk, I defende fro her foos” :
 240 Cristes cros þis sawe he seyde :—
 “Heuene gate was keiped clos
 Til lambe of love now he deyede,
 It is write in tixt and glos :
 244 For Cristis deep prophetes preyde :
 Tiȝt lambe of love deyed and roos
 In heȝt pyne many folk was teyde :
 ¶ In þe houre of hiȝest noone,
 248 Þe lambe of love seide his þouȝt—
 ‘Aȝ is fulfilled þat weȝt was wrouȝt,
 Man is oute of bondys brouȝt
 And heuene dorys vndone’ :

The lamb of love opened the gate of heaven.

He brought man out of bonds, and undid heaven’s doors.

XXXIII.

- 252 ¶ And I was Cros and kepte þat ȝifte Þat ȝeue was of fadres graunt,
 I was loket I schulde vp-lifte
 Goddis sone and Maydenes faunt¹, 256 Noman had schelde of scrifte ;
 Þe deuyl stode as lyoun raumpaunt,
 Many folk he keighte to heȝt clifte,
 Tiȝt þe dyntes of þe cros gan hym adaunte ;
 260 ¶ My dede is founde and boket,
 Aȝ þe werke þat I haue wrouȝte
 It was in þe fadres forþouȝte, Louely lady, lak me nouȝte, 264 I dyd as I was loket.

I, Cross, was ordained to uplift God’s Son.

The dint of
 the Cross daunted the devil.

XXXIV.

- ¶ In water and blood cristenyng was wrouzt,
 Holy writ witnessip it weþ,
 And in þe weþ of worþi þouzt,
 Man is cristened to soule hele ; 268
 Þe blood þat all þe world haþ bouzt,
 A digne cristenyng he gan me dele ;
 Cryst in cristenynge forþat me nouzt,
 Hy[s] fressche blood whan I gan fele : 272
- ¶ Mayde modir and wyue !
 Crystis blood ȝaf me bapteme,
 Bystreke I was with rede streme, Whan Iesu bled vpon a beme, 276
 Of cipresse and Olyue.

Christ's blood
 christens man,
 and gives him
 soul's heal.

His blood baptized me with its red streams.

[leaf 129 b.]

XXXV.

- ¶ Iesu seyde to Nichodemus
 But a barn be twies born, Whan domesday schal blowe his bemys, 280
 He schulde lye as man lorn,
 First bore of wombe where rewþe remys,
 Sip with font synne is schorn :
 And I was cros to mannys quemys, 284
 I baar þe fruyt þou bere afor,
- ¶ For þi beryng alone ;
 But I had born hym efte,
 Fro riche rest man had be refte 288
 And in a lore logge lefte, Ay to grucche and grone.

A man must be born twice if he will be saved on doomsday.

Thy fruit had to be born twice, by thee
 and me.

XXXVI.

- ¶ Þou were crowned heuene queen,
 For þe birþen þat þou bere, 292
 þi garlund is of gracious greene,
 Of heþ Emperesse and heuene Emper :

On account of thy Son, thou wast crowned queen of heaven.

- I am þe relyk þat schyneþ schene, 296 Men wolde wyte where I were,
 At þe pleyñ parlement I schal been,
 At domesday prestly to pere ;
 ¶ Whan god schal seye riȝt þere,
 300 'Trewly on þee rode tre,
 Man, I dyed for loue of þe ;
 Man, what hast þou do for me
 To be my frendly fere ?'

I, a bright relic, shall appear at doomsday,

when God
 shall say,

'Man, I died for thee; what hast thou done for me?'

XXXVII.

- 304 ¶ At parlement I wil put pleynyng,
 How maydenes sone on me gan sterue,
 Spere and spounge and hard naylyng,
 Þe hard hede þe helme gan kerue:
 308 And I schal crye riȝtful kyng, Ilk man haue as þe serue,
 Þe riȝt schul ryse to ryche reynyng,
 Truyt and treget to helle schal terve:
 312 ¶ Mayde meke and mylde!
 God took in þe hy[s] flessch trewe,
 I bare þi fruyt lele and newe;
 It is riȝt þe rode to Eue helpe schewe 316 Man, woman, and chylde".

At doomsday will I make my complaint.

Each man shall then be rewarded according to his deserts."

XXXVIII.

- ¶ Þe queen þus acorded with þe Cros, Aȝens hym spak nomore speche;
 Þe lady ȝaf þe cros a cosse,
 320 Þe lady of love longe loue gan seche,

 324

[leaf 130.]
 Mary became reconciled to the Cross, and gave it a kiss.

Mary and the Cross bare Christ to deliver men from hell.

- ¶ Þe queen and þe cros acord :
 Þe queen bare first, þe cros aftirward,
 To fecche folk fro hellward,
 On holy steyres to styze vpward 328
 And reigne with oure lord.

XXXIX.

A clerk made this story of Mary's
sorrow.

- ¶ A clerk fourmed þis figour
 Of Maries sorwe to seiþe summe,
 As he had see in scharp schour, 332
 How cristes armes were rent and rune ;

But the Cross was ever deaf and dumb.

- Þe cros is a colde creatour
And euer ȝit was deaf and dum,
 Þis tale florissched with a faire flour, 336

This story is therefore apocryphal.

- ¶ Þis poynt I proue apocrifum ;
 Witnesse was neuer founden
 Þat euere crystis cros spak,
 Ne oure lady leyde hym no lak, 340
 But forto dryue þe deuyl a-bak,
 Men speke of Cristes wounden.

It is by no means a foolish story.
It may help man to seek mercy.

- ¶ A clerk fourmed þis fantasye,
 On cristes steruyng stok to stere ; 344
 Þat bare þe body aȝ blody, Whan depes dent gan hym dere, Þis Apocrifum is no foly :
 In swich a lay dar þe naȝt dere 348
 Þat doþe man to seke mercy, Wikked werkes away to were,

¹ ? clerk.

- ¶ In tixte ful weȝ is write :
 A lombe¹ haþ larged aȝ þis glose, 352
 Plenté speche þer-In to prose,
 Þe counseil of þe cros to vnclose
 Of Maryes woo to wite.

XL.

- 356 ¶ In flesshly wede
 God gan hym hede,
 Of mylde may
 Was born to blede,
- 360 As cristes crede Soþely to say;
 On stokky stede
 He roode, men rede,
- 364 In rede aray.
 Fro deuelis drede
 þat duk vs lede
 At domesday,
- 368 ¶ Whan pepil schal parte and passe
 To holy heuene and heff þe wode.
 Now Cristes crosse and crystes blode
 And Maries praier mylde and goode
- 372 Graunte vs þe lyfe of grace. Amen.
- God clothed himself in mortal garb.
 Of a virgin he was born.
- Herode in red array on a

FESTIVALS OF THE CHURCH.

¶ Deo nostro iocunda sit laudacio.

¶ Ioyeful preisyng to god oure lord þe sawter book bereþ record.

I.

The Lord is a householder ;
he feasts and clothes his folk.

The lord þat is a howsholder,
With faire festis folk he fat ; 4

ȝiueþ hem wedys hym self doþe were,

On bolstre bed her balys bat ;

Tonge gyueþ talke and stere

To preysen hym men taken gat ; 8

Oure lord to preise is no ler,

þe same help man he byhat,

With hym on bedde, man, þou sat

¶ On þe bolstre of heuene blisse. 12

With hys fleisshe he fedip þe, þou wost wel þis,

þi sowle schal be clad as hys

In lyfe þat neuermore lat.

It's no loss to praise our Lord.

He feedeth thee with his flesh.

II.

¶ Malachie witnesse haþ gunne 16
In hys rewle, as it is rad ;

He seip þat god is soopfast sunne,

And in þat same þi sowle is clad ;

¶ þi lordes wede þan hast þou wonne 20

And with hys fleisshe þi goost is fed ;

He let atame hys pyement tunne

Jesus is the true Sou of God.

Thou hast worn thy Lord's garments, and with his flesh thy body is fed.

- To make his gode gestis glad, 24 ¶ With a spere of grounden gad;
 þan was founde a fell fawset,
 In þe trie tunne it was sette,
 In cristes hert was piȝt and pette, 28 Hys brest was al be-blad.

Our Lord
 shed his blood as wine
 for his guests.

His breast was broached like a wine-tun.

III.

- ¶ I haue ioye forto gest
 Of þe lambe of love with-oute oþe;
 Hys flessche is oure faire feest,
 32 And curteisly he ȝeueþ vs cloþe.

The Lamb's flesh is our feast.

IV.

- ¶ Viij feestis oure lord gan dresse,
 And all be newe euery ȝere.
 Heuene quene and heil Emperesse, 36 A blisful blosum þi bosum bere!
 ¶ His fleissþ fedip more and lesse,
 And fendip vs from feendis fere;
 þe kirnell sprang at Cristemasse 40 þat now is crist in a cake clere, ¶ þe preest drynkeþ blessyd bere,
 Goddis blood in sacrament.
 Almyȝty god omnipotent, 44 Hys blessyd body haþ sent
 To fede hys freendys here.

[leaf 131.]
 Our Lord
 ordained eight feasts.

His flesh feeds all, and defends us from the devil.

At Christmas Christ
 appears in a clean cake,
 and the priest drinks
 "blessed beer."

V.

- ¶ Cristemasse first is founde,
 Whan god was borne with beest in bynne.
 48 At newe ȝere cryst þoled wounde
 And schadde hys blood for mannus¹ synne.
 þe Epiphanye is gret on grounde.
 On estre day welþes we wyne.

Christmas is the first feast.

¹ MS. mainus.

Epiphany is gret on earth.

On Whitsunday God did think of mankind.

The feast of the Trinity has most power.

On holy þursday god stiȝe þat stounde. 52
On witsoneday god gau mynne
¶ To þenke on mannys kynne,
He sent man þe holy goost.
þe Trinité feest haþ myȝtes moost. 56
In Corpus christi wel þou woost,
Is ioyned oure Ioye with gynne.

VI.

At Christmas
Mary's bird was born.

Angels sang a clear note in the sky, and proclaimed peace and salvation to man.

¶ At Cristemasse mayde Mary, þorowe helpe of þe holy goostis heste, 60 þi brid was born and lay þe by,
Aboute boþe bynne and beeste.
þe Aungels maden melody
For ioye of cristis feeste; 64
A clere note þei sang in þe sky,
Whan kyngis sone bare fleisschly creste.
¶ Schependes meest and leest,
"Ioye to god full of love," 68
Herden þei Aungels synge above,
"Pes to man, þe deuyh is drove Fro goddis trone in þe eest."

VII.

ysaias propheta, Isaiah prophesied of Mary's child.

[leaf 131,
back.]

Mary is the rod, Jesus is the flower.

¶ þan myȝt þe mylde may synge 72
Ysaye þe woord of þee;
þou seydest a ȝerd schulde sprynge Oute of þe rote of Ientiþ Iesse,
¶ And schulde floure with florisschyng, 76
With primeroses greet plenté;
In-to þe croppe schulde come a kyng,
þat is a lord of power and pyté,
¶ My swete sone I see. 80
I am þe ȝerde, þou art þe flour,
My brid is borne by beest in bourc,

- My primerose my paramour, 84 With love I lulle pee.

VIII.

- ¶ 3it myzt þe mylde may among
 Her cradel trille to and fro,
 And syng, Osys, þi song !—
 88 “Depe, my depe schal pee slo.”
 Þe depe of heft is full strong,
 Where spirites bren in blases blo ;
 Þe flesshe schal dye þat my sone gan fong
 92 And sle þat depe for euermo ;
 ¶ To helle my child schal go.
 As Osys bigan to speke,
 Þou schalt museff helle cheke 96 And heft barre þi hand schal breke,
 And fette frendes fro wo.

The maiden
 might sing Hosea's song :

Osys
 propheta,
 “ My son's
 flesh shall die,
 and slay death
 for ever.

Thou shalt muzzle hell's cheek.”

IX.

- ¶ Balaam tolde hys trewe entente,
 Of soopfastnesse he schewed a signe—
 100 Of Iacob schulde a token be glente,
 A sterre þat schulde schewe and schyne.

[Balaam.] Balaam
 prophesied of a Star that should rise out of Jacob.

X.

- ¶ Moyses full weft he spak
 Of þe lambe þat sprang of mayden elene, 104 A white lambe, with senn blak Spotty myzt he neuere bene ;
 ¶ He lyued with-oute lak,
 Tiff a spere hys loue gan spene,
 108 Whan lambes blood on breeste and bak,
 No boon was broke with Iewes kene ;
 ¶ Þe lambe schyned full schene,

[Moyes.] Moses spake
 of the spotless Lamb, not a bone of which should be broken,

May God grant that we may see the Lamb's face.

þat Mary lulled in louely place,
As sche was ful full of grace, 112
To loke in þe lambes face, þat siȝt god leue vs sene.

XI.

[leaf 132.]
St. John bade us live in charity, then would the Lamb of love
dwell with us.

¶ Seint Iohan wroot wiþ penne, ȝif þou lyuest in charyté, 116
þe lombe of loue lyueþ with þe,
And in god þi goost schal be,
In welþe heuene to wynne.

XII.

Make a cradle for Christ in thy heart.

Put a shirt and woollen garments upon a poor beggar.

Visit the prisoners, and give to the poor.

With this sail sail into the bliss of heaven.

¶ Make cristys cradell of þi herte, 120
In bonde of love bynde hym fast,
On a poure begger put a scherte,
And wollen wedys þat warm wil last,
To poure in prisoun þou schalt sterte, 124
And ȝeue þe wrecches of þe good þou hast.
¶ Þis seyle sette on þi mast
And seyle in-to þe blisse of heuene ;
At domesday god schal full euene 128
Monewe þe dedis of mersy seuene
To kaytyfes þat be cast.

XIII.

Rock thy cradle high and low ; be mindful of prosperity
and misfortune.

Wash thy soul as white as snow.

¶ Rokke þi cradell hiȝe and lowe,
Mirþe and Mischeef haue in mynde, 132
In heuene is ioyned ioye Inow,
In heff fyre and filþe þou schalt fynde ;
Whasshe þi sowle white as snowe,
And in þat bed þis barn schal þe bynde ; 136
In a cote, with-oute slow,
Oure lady lolled þi leue frende.
¶ Man haue þis in mynde,

- 140 Rokke þi cradell aboue þe skye, Þenk on þe Madenys melodye, Þenk on helle stynkyng stye,
 Where goostis bren in bynde.

 cradle above the sky.

Think of hell's stinking sty.

XIV.

- 144 ¶ In vitas patrum, a fader booke, Swiche a tale þer is tolde ;
 A sinfull womman crist forsooke,
 Putte in dispeir with deuelys bolde, 148 Sche was hent on hard hoke,
 For hete of feiþ kepte sche colde,
 Tilt a wyse preest with hyr woke
 And seyde, "for þe Iesu was solde."

Think of the woman of cold faith, who was

[leaf 132 b.]

caught upon the devil's hook.

XV.

- 152 ¶ Take ensaumple of a childe in towne,
 With myshap his croune is craked,
 With brode lippys he bereþ boune, þer is wepyng and deel awaked.
 156 ¶ þe Norys with þe childe doþe rounde,
 A rede Appil sche hap hym taked,
 And he forsakeþ hys sobbyng sounde,
 And mochel myrþe þere is maked.
 160 ¶ Now sette þi will styf stakede
 In fruyte swetter þan any mayde, þow þi synne haue hym affrayede, 3yue hym þi hert and he is apayede
 164 þat pere hys pees hap makede.

Take example of a child who has "cracked his crown," and roars out lustily.

The nurse soothes the child, and gives him a rosy apple, and he is quieted.

Set thy desire upon a fruit sweeter than any that exists.

Make thy peace with Christ.

XVI.

- ¶ Was neuer childe so sone stille
 With pere ne with appil swete,
 As Maydens sone þat dyed on hilt 168 And for þi loue blood gan swete ;

Was never a child so quiet with pear or apple as the Maiden's Son that died on Calvary.

His spirit he yielded up with "shrieks shrill,"
because he was unwilling to forgo thy love.
Our lady was dazed with grief for the death of her Son.

ȝif hym ȝi herte, witȝ good wiȝt,
He wiȝt neȝer grucche ne grete ;
Hys goost he ȝelde witȝ schrikes schrylle,
So loȝe he was ȝi love to lete. 172
¶ Oure lady her hede sche schette in a schete,
And ȝit lay stiȝ doted and dased,
As a womman mapped and mased,
Fro riȝtful resoun robbed and rased, 176
Tiȝ fele teres gan flete.

XVII.

God will be easily reconciled to thee.

¶ ȝe boke seiȝ god askeȝ lyte Witȝ ȝee to make a loveday ;
ȝi hert weȝeȝ not half a myte 180
Ageȝn ȝe lyf ȝat lastiȝ ay.
ȝif hym ȝat, he wiȝt not flyte,
But flemon aȝ ȝi foos away ;
He wil ȝe make chartre and skryte 184
In heuen haȝt to holde ȝi way.
¶ Vȝpon a bloody bay
A chartre of ȝees god made to a ȝef,
To aske mercy he was leef ; 188
God bad hym go witȝ-oute greȝf,
Into paradys forto play.

He will put to flight all thy foes, and by charter give thee heaven's hall.

[leaf 133.]

God once made a

At this feast
the Maiden
kissed Christ, and rocked
him to sleep.

¶ At neweȝere ȝe flour ful fressche,
In holy writte I vndirstode 196

- Was corve in hys tendre flessche,
 For mannys loue he bledde hys blode.
 ¶ Pe blood droppyd as dew on ryssche
 200 Fro þe mylde membre of þat swete fode ;
 Synne was harde, hys blood was nessche,
 To defende folk fro feendys wode.
 ¶ The Iewes aboute ȝode
 204 The olde lawe to fulfille ;
 Þe childe suffride and lay stille
 To bigge vs all, and þat was skille, Whyle þe olde lawe stode.

cut, and shed his blood for man's love.

Sin was hard,
 his blood was soft.

The child suffered, and the old law
 was fulfilled to redeem us all.

XX.

- 208 ¶ Þat day his first blood he bledde,
 Þat ȝaf man gripe grace to haue,
 With a scharp flynt hys blood was schedde ;
 Þat kyng was corve as a knaue,
 212 Þe briddes lymes were brode spradde.
 ¶ On schort membre þe child was schaue,
 In lowenes was þat brid lad to haue
 To kepe men fro helle cave, 216 Mannys sowle to save.
 ¶ Lownesse lay byneþe þe sterres,
 To bye hys chaffare þe child payed erres,
 Dropes rede as ripe cherrees,
 220 Þat fro his flesshe gan lave.

By this first blood man obtained grace.

His humility saved men from hell's cave.

Wounds and blood he paid for man.

XXI.

- ¶ God cam not to fordo þe lawe, Iȝ lawes fulfih he wolde ;
 Goddis sone was leyde ful lawe,
 224 Whan he was maydenys childe on molde.
 ¶ Holy writte seiþ þis sawe,
 For mannys goost he ȝaf no golde ;

God came not to destroy, but to fulfil the law.

For man's spirit he gave no gold.

He shed his
dear blood to help us to obtain heaven.

Hys dere blood was oute-drawe
To helpe vs to hys heuenes holde. 228

¶ Pe childe lay flat vnfolde, Pe riche prince was pere aprised,
He suffred to be circumcised ;
Euery man þat is well auised 232
Þis feest preyse he scholde.

This feast ought to be praised by all.

XXII.

The blood

Epiphania domini.

The kings that visited Christ
made their horses run ;
they had no time to stand still.

¶ The Epiphanye I preyse in prees, Whan þe kyngis clenly come,
Pei made her hors rennen in rees, 240
To stonde stille þei had no tome.

¶ With dromedaryes þei drone fro dees,
Many a hundred myle fro home,
To seche a childe þat choisly chees 244
In maydenes blode to blome.

Many a hundred miles from home they went to seek a choice child.

¶ Swych a rose roos neuere in Rome,
As þan was clad in flessfli cloke ;
Goddis sone a mayden soke, 248
Milk ran by þe childys choke, Swetter þan hony on gome.

A maiden gave suck to God's Son ;
the milk,
sweeter than honey, ran down the child's cheek.

XXIV.

[leaf 134.]

A threefold gift they brought the child—

rich gold, for a king ;

¶ Gold and myrre and frank ensens,
Pei brouzt to þe born brid, 252

Of riche gold one 3af hym pens,
For richest kyng he scholde be kyd,
Per clerkis synge her sequens.

frankincense,
for a priest.

Frank ensens per is sone hid, 256

Azens þe fende it is defens,
And dryueþ hym vnder daunger lyd.

It is a defence against the devil.

¶ And after it betyd

260 Þat god was grettest preest, þan was frank ensens hym nest,
And bitter mirre bote is brest,
To deþe Iewes him chyd.

264 ¶ At þe feest of Architriclyn þe lord þat bouzt vs oute of bonde, Turned water in-to wyn, þorowe blessing of hys holy honde ;
268 I hope þat blessing schal be myn, Whan I lete lyfe in londe ;
And gode man it schal be pine,
To folwe god fast 3if þou fonde.

At the marriage-feast Christ turned water into wine.

272 ¶ In writ I vndirstonde, Foure feestis faire and fre,
Epiphanye be set on þe.
Epiphanye blessing þou be,
276 Þou kepest man fro schonde !

Four feasts are set in Epiphany.

XXVI.

¶ Of fyue loves of barley greyn,
And ij fyssches in rwle is rad,
God made a feest faire and pleyn.
280 V M^t folk þer-with he fad,
With v lovys and fysshes tweyn, Greet company þer-with was glad ;
þes woordys myzt þou soþely seyn, 284 þe lord of plenté þe pepil fad ; ¶ Riche relef þei had,
Xij baskettis full of broke mete ;
To preyse god we are depe in dete,

God made a feast with five barley loaves and two small fishes.

Twelve baskets of fragments remained after the feast.

Forget not to praise God.

To preyse hym no man forȝete 288
With speches gode and glad.

XXVII.

¶ Foure festys in one be set,
By diuers dayes it fell;
But at þe feest of mesure met, 292
Wyn of water god wrouȝt weſſ, Neuer festour fedde better.
V M^t folk þan crist gan fede,
To flum Iordaṅ þe kyng gan fle, 296
And Iohan baped hym in þat stede.
¶ Iohan weissch his faire fell
And crystened crist in water colde, Whan crist was xxx wynter olde; 300
Thus iiij feestis to-gedir folde,
To stroye þe fende so fell.

PREFACE.

THE following very curious version of the Cross-legend is taken from the twelfth-century MS. Bodley 343. As the volume containing the hitherto unprinted homilies from this manuscript—they will be included in my edition of Old English Homilies in preparation for the Early English Text Society—may not appear for some little time, Dr. Furnivall has kindly allowed me to publish this legend separately, as being the only one in the MS. possessing any special interest for the student of medieval literature.

The two Latin versions and the one in Old French prose which will be found in the Appendix, are included on account of their close relationship to the English Rood-tree History.

I was also fortunate enough to find the Old French poem, still unpublished, which is the direct source of those portions of the Cursor Mundi which deal with the history of the Cross-wood and the Cross from the time of Moses, and I have printed extracts from it on p. 63 ff. A careful comparison of it with the Cursor Mundi will, no doubt, help to throw light on the text of the latter.

In the Introduction I have endeavoured to determine the relationship between the Rood-tree History and the versions allied to it, and also the relationship of this group to the important group of Cross-legends represented by Meyer's Latin Legend.

The Ormulum notes and the Middle English Compassio Marie, the latter an early specimen of the Cheshire dialect, have been included at Dr. Furnivall's suggestion. The former appeared, in a somewhat shorter form, in the Academy in 1890, and the latter is a translation, slightly added to, of an article published in Germany a year and a half ago.

As, in accordance with Dr. Furnivall's wish, I have accompanied my edition of the Rood-tree History with a translation, a glossary was unnecessary. It may, however, be well to call attention here to the following words, as being earlier instances than had hitherto been recorded: to die (cf. note to p. 14, l. 25), hoop (cf. note to p. 22, l. 9), root, p. 4, l. 26, to egg on (cf. note on page 71). Compare also the note on the etymology of gin on page 72.

In conclusion I wish to acknowledge my obligation to Messrs. Madan and Macray of the Bodleian Library for their help in determining the age of the MS., and to Mr. Bickley of the British Museum, to whose kindness I owe a transcript of the Harleian Latin Prose version. My best thanks are also due to Professor Paul Meyer of Paris, through whose mediation I was enabled to have a copy made of the Old French poem, a portion of which he was good enough to collate himself with the MS.

I wish also to thank my friend, Professor Zupitza, who kindly looked through a part of the proof sheets, and Professor Adolf Tobler, of Berlin, who readily gave me most valuable assistance in preparing the Old French portions for the press.

Many thanks are also due to Professor Suchier, of Halle, who having himself announced his intention of publishing a number of Latin versions of the Cross-legend, including the Harleian and Cambridge versions, and the Judas story, at once very kindly waived his prior claim in my favour.

A. S. NAPIER.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MANUSCRIPT. BIBLIOGRAPHY.

§ 1. The Manuscript.

MS. Bodley 343 (formerly NE. F. 4. 12), from which the History of the Rood-tree is published, is described by Wanley, p. 15. It is a folio MS. containing 205 leaves, and appears to have been written about the third quarter of the twelfth century. With the exception of some few pieces in Latin and one or two smaller pieces in English (cf. Anglia, v. 289 and xi. 6) its contents consist of English homilies, nearly all of which are copies of preconquest originals and most of which have already been printed, at any rate from other MSS. Fifty-one of them are to be found in Aelfric's Homilies (ed. Thorpe); three are, or will be, included in Aelfric's Lives of Saints (ed. Skeat); three are in Assmann's Angelsächsische Homilien, and nine in Wulfstan (ed. Napier); whilst Aelfric's Pastoral Epistle is printed in Ancient Laws and Institutes of England (ed. Thorpe). The remaining fourteen, which are still unprinted and of which the Rood-tree forms one, will be included in my collection of homilies to be published by the Early English Text Society.

CHAPTER II.

OTHER ALLIED VERSIONS OF THE CROSS-LEGEND.

I PROPOSE, in this chapter, to consider a number of versions of the Cross-legend which are nearly related to the History of the Rood-tree (R), and as a comparison with them serves to throw light on the probable development of the legend preserved in R, it may be well to give a brief sketch of their contents. The versions in question are: The Cambridge and Harleian Latin prose versions (Ca, H); The Andrius fragments (A); Dboec van den houte (Db) and the Low German translation; Cursor Mundi (CM); The Old French poem (F). These versions, together with R, constitute the Rood-tree group. Three of them (H, Db, CM) contain also the early history of the wood of the Cross, beginning with the sending of Seth to Paradise, but, as this part is wanting in R, and as there is good reason for believing that it was wanting in the original from which all the members of this group are ultimately derived, I only give an analysis of the portion of the history which begins with Moses.

¹ Some of the works mentioned under (α) also treat of this part of the subject.

§ 3. The Cambridge (Ca) and Harleian (H) Latin versions, and the Andrius fragments (A).

The Cambridge version, which will be found on page 41, is taken from a twelfth century MS. in the University Library. The last leaves of the MS., which breaks off near the end of § 15, are unfortunately lost, but there can be little doubt, as a comparison with A and R shows, that the lost portion was identical with §§ 16–18 of H.

The Harleian text, printed on p. 54, is evidently the work of a scribe who had at least two distinct versions of the Cross-legend before him, one of which was identical with *Ca*¹, whilst the other was closely related to Meyer's Latin Legend (cf. p. xxxi); from these two he borrowed, following sometimes the one, sometimes the other. Of the §§ 1–15 of H, §§ 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 11 are identical with the corresponding paragraphs of Ca, and to these may be added §§ 16–18 (see above). The contents of §§ 1^b, 3, 4, 10, 14, and 15², on the other hand, agree with Meyer's Latin Legend, although the wording is different. The only paragraph in H which has nothing answering to it either in Ca or the Legend, is § 8^b (the tree, growing in circumference,

¹ It cannot have been the Cambridge MS. itself, as in a number of cases H has preserved the better reading, e.g. p. 50, l. 6.

burst the rings, which fell into the cistern and being drawn out, were hung in the temple, etc.).

The fragmentary version of Andrius in Old French prose, which is printed on page 41, was published, in part, by Mussafia, pp. 202-6, from the only known MS. in the National Library at Paris, which dates from the end of the thirteenth century. Paul Meyer had previously called attention to it in the Revue Critique, i. pp. 222-3, where he also printed the Sebile episode. The author names himself in the MS. (fol. 380^a): Ceste estoire trouua Andrius li moines escrete en Latin tout mot a mot si come uous orres chi en Franchois. This is followed by the legend of Adam and Eve, translated from the Latin Vita Adæ et Evæ (cf. W. Meyer, Abhandlungen der k. bayer. Akad. der Wiss. I. Cl. vol. xiv. 1879, p. 245), after which, without any break, comes the portion of Andrius' work which I have published.

A comparison of the Old French text with Ca shows that the former is a faithful translation of the latter, and that Ca is the Latin original to which Andrius refers. The Cambridge MS. was not however the one actually used by Andrius, as is evident from the interpolated § 12 in Ca, of which we find no trace in A; but, unless we assume that on p. 50, l. 6 two scribes independently omitted the same line—and that is not impossible—the Cambridge MS. and Andrius' original must have been very nearly related. It has already been mentioned that the lost portion of Ca was, in all probability, identical with §§ 16-18 of II. We are further justified in assuming that in Andrius' original (also, very possibly, in the Cambridge MS., as well as in the one from which II was copied) these paragraphs were followed by another, the contents of which corresponded to § 19 of Andrius (short epitome of the Cross-tree history from Moses to Solomon, the betrayal by Judas, and the cock story). This can have been none other than the Latin Judas story, which is found independently in a number of MSS., and which is printed on page 68 (cf. also p. xlv). The scribe of the Harley MS. purposely left out the cock story and otherwise shortened (cf. p. 63, l. 2). That X (the original of the Rood-tree group) also contained this Judas story is rendered probable by the fact that we find it in F and CM, where it appears incorporated with the narrative.

The Latin MS. which Andrius translated, the MS. from which the Harleian scribe copied, and the existing Cambridge MS., are all three obviously derived (probably with intermediate links) from one MS. which I will denote by ka. With the exception of one or two unimportant points¹, ka can only have differed from the existing Ca in that it did not contain certain obvious interpolations (§ 12, which A shows to have been interpolated, and probably most of § 3 and § 10), but did contain the missing §§ 16-18, as in H. With these limitations we may regard the existing Ca + §§ 16-18 of H as representing ka, which probably also contained, as an independent appendix, the Judas story.

But ka was not only the parent manuscript of Ca, A, and H; there is good reason for assuming that it was also practically identical with the original version from which all the members of the Rood-tree group are ultimately derived. A discussion of this point is, however, reserved for § 9.

I append a brief account of the contents of Ca and A.

§ 1. Contains a short introductory exhortation.

§ 2. After crossing the Red Sea, Moses and the children of Israel came to the desert of Sur, where they wandered for three days without finding water. They pitched their tents on the plain, and next morning Moses saw three rods, of cypress, cedar, and pine, round his resting place. Awed by the sight he neither dared to touch them nor to remain there, so he hastened to Helim, where they found seventy palm-trees and twelve springs of water, near which they encamped. On the following morning the rods appeared again, and again Moses did not dare to move them, but prophesied that they signified the Trinity. Thence he came to Raphidim, whose waters were so bitter as to be undrinkable, whereat Moses and the host with him were in great tribulation. After sunset they betook themselves to rest, and next morning Moses beheld the rods for the third time¹. By divine inspiration he drew them out and placed them in the bitter waters, which at once became sweet.

§ 3². In the third month after leaving Egypt they came to the desert of Sinai. Having put the rods in water, Moses ascended the mount and remained there forty days fasting. When he returned, bearing the tables of stone, his face shone so that the children of Israel could not look upon it, but fell to the ground in terror, begging that Moses should speak to them, and not God, lest they should die. Veiling his face, therefore, he made known to them all that God had commanded him. Having made the tabernacle, Moses removed it outside the camp and went thither daily. The cloudy pillar descended and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the Lord talked with Moses. When the cloud was lifted from the tabernacle, they journeyed and, led by it, came to the wilderness of Pharan. The children of Israel cried out for flesh and were punished. When they came to Mount Or Aaron died, and Moses, travelling thence, entered the land of Moab, and having ascended Mount Nebo, died and was buried by God himself in a place known to no one.

§ 4. Before Moses' death he had put the rods in the ground, as God had commanded him. They remained there, neither increasing in size, nor losing their foliage, until the time of David. One night³ there appeared to him an angel who bade him cross the Jordan, on the further side of which the Lord would show him the three rods placed there by Moses, which signified the Trinity. David obeyed and encamped on the plain beyond Jordan, and next morning saw the three rods standing round his couch. He prayed to God to reveal to him whether these were the rods he had been sent to seek, and being informed that they were, he drew them up and took them with him rejoicing. On the way to Jerusalem many who were infirm were healed.

§ 5. Hearing of the sickness of a great man named Ioxilus, he hastened to him, and he was cured by the rods.

² The greater part of this paragraph ³ It was in the tenth year of his reign, as appears from p. 48, l. 10.

§ 6. Before David crossed the Jordan there met him four Ethiopians, who prostrated themselves before the rods. Forthwith their blackness and hideousness departed from them and they became white and fair.

§ 7. When the king had crossed the Jordan a leper who had lived in a mountain cave for 160 years, saw him and prophesied: 'To-day he shall come to me who shall heal me of this infirmity.' These words were scarcely uttered when David's horse stood still, the hand in which he was holding the rods was extended, and a flame issued from them which moved towards the leper's cave and burnt the leprosy from him. He arose healed and accompanied David.

§ 8. Arriving at Jerusalem in the evening, David placed the rods overnight in a spring near his garden, but by the morning they had taken root so firmly that they could not be pulled out. The king therefore had his garden enlarged and the spring enclosed within it. By the end of the first year the rods had grown together to one tree. Though the lower part of the tree was joined together forming one single trunk, in the upper part the three branches remained separate, each retaining its original nature (the one being cypress, the second cedar, and the third pine), and every year David had a silver ring fastened round the top, so as to make it grow together. Thus at the end of each year a new ring was added, higher than the one of the previous year, the old ring being, at the same time, enlarged so as to allow for the increase in circumference. This went on for thirty years, by which time the rods had become a mighty tree, higher than all the trees of Lebanon and of more noble foliage, and the king often went and prayed under its shade.

§ 9. When the tree began to bear fruit, David set about collecting the materials for a temple. But when they were collected, the Lord told him that not he, but his son Solomon was to be the builder.

§ 10. David therefore called an assembly of the people and informing them of God's will, addressed his son and gave him the pattern of the temple, the materials, &c. Then follows an account of the building of the temple. When¹ the work was near completion, the builders were in want of a beam, and though they searched everywhere, they could not find a suitable one; so they persuaded the king to have the tree which stood in his father's garden cut down. The thirty silver rings were hung, by Solomon's command, in the temple, in honour of his father and himself, and were afterwards given to Judas as the price of our Lord's betrayal.

§ 11. The tree when cut was two cubits longer than the other beams, but, when raised to its place, it measured two cubits less than the rest². When it was taken down again, it was again found to be two cubits longer. All efforts to fit it were fruitless, it grew longer and shorter alternately, for it had been, before the foundation of the world, predestined to form the cross of Christ. So, after repeated trials, it was left in the temple, where it remained until the time of our Lord's passion. The workmen sent to find another suitable tree met with one that same day.

§ 12³. contains an account of Solomon's wealth, &c., from the Bible. It is altogether wanting in Andrius.

§ 13. Many miracles were performed by the tree after Solomon's time. A certain priest named Ciritius (in Andrius he is named Orifeus) wishing to have it, sent 100 men to fetch it, and as they were unable to stir it, he went himself with a large multitude. But even then the tree could not be moved, so they tried to cut it into three pieces, when forthwith a large fire sprang up and burnt the priest and sixty (Andrius, forty) of his men with him.

§ 14. There was a certain woman named Sabilla (Andrius, Sebile) who, having entered the temple, seated herself inadvertently on the holy beam, when fire straightway rose from it, burning her garments behind. She cried out that Christ, the life and salvation of all, should be crucified on the tree—she herself not knowing what she said—and the fire vanished. The Jews, hearing her name Christ, beat her almost to death and cast her into prison ; but an angel came and comforted her, telling her not to fear for a crown of gladness was prepared for her, and henceforth she should be called, not Sabilla, but Susanna. The angel returned to heaven and the Jews put Susanna to death.

§ 15. Many years after, when the time of Christ's passion was at hand, the wretched Jews could find no tree whereon to hang the Saviour of the world. Caiphas therefore sent 300 men to fetch the tree from the temple, but they could not move it. Then Caiphas ordered them to go again and to cut off ten ells and to make the cross therewith. They did so, the cross was made, and carried out by Christ Himself, and Christ was crucified upon it¹.

§ 16. The remainder of the sacred beam lay in the temple until the time of the emperor Constantine. When the latter had attained to the imperial dignity, he sent his mother Helena to Jerusalem to seek for the holy cross. After she had found it, she entered the temple, where she saw the remaining part of the tree, and learning what it was and whence it had come, she prayed God to reveal to her what she should do with it. An angel, who appeared to her in her sleep, bade her have it cut into four parts, which were to be distributed to the four quarters of the earth. She did so, leaving one part in Jerusalem, and sending a second to Rome and a third to Alexandria, whilst the fourth she took with her to Constantinople. She also took half of the cross with her to Constantinople.

§ 17. After the cross had been found and identified by the raising to life of a dead man, the nails were also discovered ; and again an angel appeared to Helena in her sleep, telling her to make a bit of the nails and to fasten them to Constantine's bridle. She did so, and took the bit with her to Constantinople. Wherever the emperor went, he always put the bit on his horse, and there proceeded from its mouth, as it were, a flame of fire, and all who beheld the miracle were converted. Seeing this the emperor travelled about the whole country converting the people in this way and afterwards returned to Constantinople. After the completion of three years, on the injunction of an angel, he took the nails from the bridle, and fastened them to the wood of the cross, and there they are held in great honour.

§ 18. O, how great are the merits of St. Helena, who was permitted to find the holy and glorious cross, and was afterwards accounted worthy to discover the sacred nails! For, coming to her son Constantine, she gave him the bridle adorned with the sacred nails, and the emperor, whenever he rode out, always put the bridle on his horse. All who saw him riding were in terror, for a flame of fire and a shining light were seen, for more than a mile, issuing from his horse's mouth. O, happy emperor, to whom such a privilege was accorded! For within the space of three years many thousands were converted, and at the expiration of that time an angel appeared to him, telling him that he had now fulfilled the will of God and that his time was at hand, and bidding him return to Constantinople. He did so, and had the nails taken from the bridle and deposited with the cross, where they are still held in great veneration.

§ 19. The early history of the tree from the finding of the rods by Moses down to the building of the temple and the felling of the tree is very briefly epitomized. Then the author passes on to the betrayal of Christ by Judas, who receives the thirty silver rings as a reward. Returning home the latter tells his mother, and then follows the cock story.

§ 4. Dboec van den Houte (Db) and the Low German version.

Dboec van den houte is a Dutch poem of 780 lines preserved in MSS. of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, embracing the history of the wood of the cross from Adam to the Crucifixion. It was published by J. Tideman in the Werken uitgegeven door de vereenigting der bevordering der oude nederlandsche letterkunde. Leiden, 1844¹. In this edition Tideman also printed a short Dutch prose version derived from the poem. In the fourteenth or fifteenth century Dboec was translated, almost line for line, into Low German. This Low German poem has been printed several times; most recently by Carl Schroeder, Van deme holte des hälligen cruizes, Erlangen, 1869, and again in 1877, another MS. having meanwhile been found, in the Jahrbuch des Vereins für niederdeutsche Sprachforschung (Jahrgang 1876), p. 88. (On the relation of the various MSS. of translation and original, cf. Schroeder in the Jahrbuch, p. 110, and Meyer, p. 154.)

In 1483 Jan Veldener published in Culenberg a Dutch poem of sixty-four four-line stanzas, each stanza illustrated by a woodcut. This was reprinted in facsimile, together with the woodcuts, by Berjeau (London, 1863), and by J. Ashton, The Legendary History of the Cross (London, 1887). An edition, with only a few of the woodcuts, is to be found in Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, iii. 350. This version is apparently derived from Dboec, but it contains in addition the 'Invention and Exposition of the Cross,' borrowed, as it seems, from one of the ordinary versions.

Dboec begins with Seth's mission to Paradise. From the three pips placed by him under Adam's tongue there sprang three rods which remained green until the time of Moses.

§ 2¹. After leading the children of Israel across the Red Sea, Moses wandered with them through the desert, where they suffered thirst for three days. They pitched their tents in the vale of Ebron, Adam's burial place, and next morning Moses saw the three rods standing round his bed. He moved thence to Ellem, where there were seventy palm trees and twenty springs of water. Here they encamped, and next morning Moses again saw the rods, and prophesied that they betokened the Trinity. He left them there, not daring to touch them, and journeyed with the children of Israel to the land of Raphadyn, where they found the waters bitter. Moses retired to rest, and next morning [he saw the rods again, as he had done twice before²]. He knelt down and the known MSS. of Dboec, but it occurs in one of the MSS. of the Low German translation.

prayed, and then, by God's direction, pulled them up and put them into the waters, which were thereby rendered sweet.

§ 3. From thence he came to Mount Sinai, which he ascended, leaving the rods in a spring. After remaining on the mountain for forty days with God, he came down, bearing with him the ten commandments.

§ 4. Then he took the rods to the kingdom of Moab, where he planted them and never saw them again. There they remained for many a year, green both in winter and summer. In the tenth year¹ of his reign an angel appeared to David in his sleep, and bade him cross the Jordan and fetch the rods, which he should find growing there. He set out on his journey, and coming to a fair spot in the land of Moab, encamped, and next morning saw the three rods standing round his bed. He prayed God to reveal to him whether these were the ones he had come to seek, and being told by a voice that they were, he drew them out and took them with him. Whenever sick men were touched by them they were healed.

§ 5. This came to the ears of a great man named Bixillus², and he was cured by the touch of the rods.

§ 6. Before they reached the Jordan they met three Moors, whose black skin became white on being touched by the rods.

§ 7. When they had crossed the Jordan, they came to a mountain wherein had long dwelt a leper; he was 130 years old. That day he had prophesied, 'To-day will come one to me that shall heal me from my sickness.' When David drew near, a flame started from the rods towards the mountain and consumed all the man's disease, so that when they came up to him they found him healed.

§ 8. On David's arrival at Jerusalem in the evening, the rods were placed in a spring, and the next day they were found to be so firmly rooted that they could not be pulled out. They had, moreover, grown into one stem at the base, branching above into three boughs. The king had his garden enlarged so as to include the tree, and silver rings were put round it every year for thirty years, and these same rings, which many people called 'penninghe,' were afterwards given to Judas. David often sat under the tree and prayed there.

German translation it appears as Vexillus and Lixillus.

§ 9. As a man of war God would not permit David to build the temple. That was reserved for Solomon.

§§ 10-11. During the building the workmen, wanting a beam, sought everywhere for a suitable one, but finding none, they obtained from Solomon an unwilling assent to their proposal to cut down the holy tree. Proving at one time too short and at another too long, it was laid in the temple together with the silver rings, and the same day the builders found a tree which answered their purpose.

§ 14. A woman named Sibilla came and thoughtlessly sat down on the tree. Her clothes catching fire, she prophesied, and was thrown by the Jews into a deep dungeon. They illtreated her so that she died in the prison. The tree was then dragged out of the temple and laid as a bridge over a brook, in order that it might be trodden under foot.

§ 14^a. The queen of Saba came to Solomon to hear his wisdom, and when she arrived at the brook over which the holy tree was laid, she would not cross by it, but waded barefoot through the stream. Solomon questioned her as to the reason of this, and she replied that the hope of the world should hang on the tree. Thereupon the king had it taken with great honour to the temple and placed at one of the doors, all the other doors being walled up, so that everyone who entered the temple to pray, should do obeisance to the tree.

§ 14^b. After Solomon's death Roboam came to the throne, and after him Abia. The latter stripped the tree of the gold and precious stones with which it was adorned, and had it dragged out of the temple, and the Jews buried it twenty fathoms deep in the ground. It happened afterwards that a piscine was dug at the very spot where the tree lay buried, and it came floating up in the water. An angel descended daily into it and stirred the water, and whoever entered it first after the angel was healed.

§ 15. When Jesus was condemned to be crucified, one of the bystanders called out that the tree which was floating in the piscine would serve to make the cross of. It was fetched, a third part of it cut off and fashioned into the cross, which Christ Himself bore to Calvary. The poem ends with the crucifixion.

§ 5. The Cursor Mundi (CM) and the Old French Poem (F).

The Cursor Mundi was edited by R. Morris, Early English Text Society, 1874-77. In this poem the cross story is found incorporated with the rest of the narrative in the following passages: ll. 1237-1432 (Seth's mission to paradise); ll. 6301-6368, 6659-6666, 6937-6946 (Moses); ll. 7973-8978 (David and Solomon); l. 15,961 ff. (Judas and his mother); l. 16,543 ff. (Crucifixion); l. 16,861 ff. (the Jews bury the three crosses); l. 21,347 ff. (the finding of the cross). These passages relating to the cross legend are, in most cases, quite distinct from the rest of the story, although they are inserted in their chronological order. In all probability the author of CM had before him a legend dealing exclusively with the cross story, which he incorporated with his longer narrative, inserting the several parts in their proper places in his history. This legend, whence the author of CM borrowed the cross story, or rather those portions which deal with the history of the wood from Moses, down to the finding of the cross by St. Helen, I believe that I have been fortunate enough to find in the following Old French poem.

MS. Français 763 (formerly 7181. 3) of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris, contains, foll. 267-277, an Old French poem (F) of 1783 lines on the history of the cross wood from Moses to the Crucifixion and on the finding of the cross. This MS., which dates from the fourteenth century, is mentioned by Bonnard¹, p. 85, but he wrongly regards the poem on the cross as forming part of the longer poem, a metrical version of sacred history, which immediately precedes it in the MS. As the head librarian, Professor Delisle, to whom I applied for information, kindly informed me, the two are entirely distinct. I have since been able to procure a copy of the whole of the cross poem, of which I give an account below. That this poem¹ is the source of *CM*² is shown by the fact that not only is the narrative practically identical in both (cf. the following abstract), but that a large portion of the CM version corresponds almost line for line with F, as a glance at the specimens printed in the appendix³ will show. Moreover, in a not inconsiderable number of instances the author has actually retained unaltered the rhyme words of his original. Compare the following:—

the Red Sea, came to Elyn [Syria], where they suffered greatly from want of water. On the following morning Moses saw the three rods standing round the spot where he had slept, but did not dare to pull them up. During the day they went further seeking water, and on the second and third mornings, the rods again appeared to Moses. He then knew that they betokened the Trinity and pulled them up. The bitter waters at *Raphindin*¹ were made sweet by the rods being dipped into them. Wherever Moses went, he always bore the wands with him, and they ever remained in flower and leaf.

§ 3 (6361). When he went up Mount Sinai, he hid them, and when he fasted, he put them in the ground. (6659) A tabernacle was made and the rods put in it. (6913) Moses died and was buried in an unknown spot by God Himself.

§ 4 (6937). Before his death he planted the rods in a secret place, where they remained until David's time. (7973) When David had ruled for ten years [about twelve years], an angel appeared to him and told him to cross the Jordan and to proceed to the country where Moses lay buried. There he should find the three rods brought by Moses from the place where he had found them [called Helim]. David obeyed, and finding the rods, recognized them at once. All three were growing from one stem which, above, separated into three branches. David drew them up and returned.

§ 5 (8055). On the way David turned aside to see a rich man who had been sick for many a day. At the sight of the rods he wept and was healed.

§ 6 (8069). Proceeding further, they met four Saracens all black and misshapen. Their strange appearance is described at some length. Kissing the rods, they at once became white and shapely, and returned to the desert [Ethiopia].

§ 7 (8133). David then came to a *fountain*² [mountain] where dwelt a hermit who had been afflicted with leprosy and other

¹ Raphindin is not mentioned in CM, but I think it not impossible that in the original MS. line 6347 ran: Sipen þai fand in Raphindin.

² CM has the correct reading here. The other versions show that the reading fontaine in F is merely an error of the scribe's for montaine.

infirmities for forty [thirty] years. The night before he had dreamt that he was in paradise, and that David had moistened [washed] his body with a wand, and that he was healed by it. Soon after he awoke, David came near, and a flame, starting out of the rods, penetrated right into the hermitage. The leper, kissing the rods, was cured and accompanied David. They came to the Jordan and David took the rods in his hand. The waters parted aside, and all crossed over.

§ 8 (8191). Having arrived at Jerusalem, the king pitched his tent outside the town, and put the rods in the hard ground [in a cistern with lamps and men to guard them¹]. Next morning they were so firmly rooted that they could not be pulled out [and David, seeing this, exclaimed that all nations ought to fear the Lord. As God Himself had planted the rods, he would not have them moved]. The spot was enclosed and a garden made, and a silver ring was put round the tree to strengthen the stem and also to measure its growth, a fresh ring being fastened round it every year for thirty years, and the old one being each time removed. David often walked and prayed under it.

§ 9 (8263). One day, whilst sitting under the tree, it occurred to David that he would build a temple. He was told by an angel that this task was not for him, the man of war, but for his son Solomon, the man of peace. After consulting with his queen Bersabe, he determined to make Solomon his heir, and he was therefore educated accordingly. He, too, loved the sacred tree, and often sat under its shade, learning many things under it. He became king after his father. In a vision he was offered the choice between three gifts—strength, riches, or wisdom. He chose the last. He gave judgement between the two women.

§§ 10–11 (8757). At the time when the temple was being

¹ This is taken from Meyer's Latin Legend (cf. Chapter III): 'reposit illas in cisterna quadam . . . appositi sunt quidam custodes et luminaria.' In fact, for the whole of this passage (ll. 8206–8230), the author of CM has followed the Latin Legend as well as F. In accordance with the latter he has represented the rods as so firmly rooted that they could not be moved, whilst from the Legend he took the entirely different reason for their being left standing: viz. that it was because God Himself had planted them there. It was from the Legend too that he borrowed David's exclamation at the sight of the miracle.

built, the tree began to wither, and people said it was dying of old age. The workmen, who had been seeking far and wide for a suitable beam, asked leave to cut the tree down, and Solomon, seeing no other course open to him, gave his consent. But when hewn and lifted to its place, it would not fit, and after the workmen had tried in vain for three days, the tree was laid in the temple together with the thirty silver rings, which were afterwards given to Judas. The builders found a tree suitable to their purpose the same day.

§ 13 (8871). After Solomon's time there came a priest with 700 [500] men and tried to take the holy tree away, but it could not be moved. Then the priest endeavoured to cut it with an axe, but it burst into a blaze and destroyed them all. The priest's name was Arillus [Cirillus].

§ 14 (8890). A lady, Sebile [Maximilla] by name, came to the temple to pray, and sat down, unawares, on the holy tree. Her clothes caught fire and she prophesied, whereupon the Jews seized and beheaded her. An angel came and bore her soul to heaven, and said that she was called Christian¹. The tree remained in the temple. [The Jews thereupon threw the tree into a pool called 'piscina probatica,' but, in consequence of the miracles of healing performed there, they took it out again, and laid it as a bridge over the brook of Siloe, in order that the treading of sinful men's feet might destroy any virtue there was in it. After that, Sibile came from afar to hear Solomon's wisdom. She would not cross by the tree, but after kneeling down in honour of it, she waded through the stream. After discussing many things with the king, she went home, and the tree lay there for many a day, but at the time of Christ's passion it was in the temple.]

§ 19 (15961). After the betrayal of Christ by Judas, the latter went home to his mother and told her what he had done. She replied that he would be shent—'Christ will be slain, but will rise again.' 'He will no more rise again than this boiled cock,' answered Judas. Scarcely had he uttered the words, when

CM, following the Legend, adds that she was the first martyr.

the cock rose out of the pot, more beautifully plumaged than before, and crew. This was the same cock that crew when Peter denied his Lord.

§ 15 (16,543). When Christ had been condemned, the Jews went to the temple to fetch the holy tree, which was lying there, in order to make the cross. But 200 men sent by Caiphas could not stir it, so a portion was cut off and the cross made within the temple itself. But when ready, it could not be moved, and Christ was therefore brought thither, and Himself carried it out. (16,859) After the crucifixion the cross blossomed from noon until evening. Joseph of Arimathia took the body and buried it. He would fain have taken the cross too, but the Jews refused to let him have it, and themselves secretly buried it together with the crosses of the two robbers.

§ 16¹. When Constantine had received baptism [(21,347) In the night before a great battle a vision of the cross appeared to the emperor Constantine, on which was written: 'Herein shalt thou have victory.' He caused a similar cross to be made and borne before him in the battle, and thus gained the day. Then] he despatched two messengers, *Bensillas and Amphire*² [Benciras and Ansiers] to Jerusalem to his mother Helena. She had, at that time, a Christian goldsmith with her who owed money to a Jew. According to the terms of the agreement, the goldsmith was either to repay the money or to forfeit its weight of his own flesh. As he could not do the former, the Jew demanded the latter, and Constantine's messengers, who had now arrived in Jerusalem, were called upon to give judgement. Their decision was, as in other versions of the well-known story, that the Jew might take the money's weight of flesh, but must beware of spilling a single drop of blood. The Jew began to upbraid the messengers for

¹ This part of CM was also published separately, from the Fairfax MS., by Morris, in his Legends of the Holy Rood, p. 108.

² In F the second messenger's name is written Amphire, Anfire, in the nominative, as well as in the oblique case. The forms in CM are interesting as they preserve the Old French difference between the cases, which the English author must have taken over unaltered from his original. They are: 21413 Ansiers, nom. (messagers, plur.); 21443 Ansiers, nom. (ifers); 21475 Ausire, acc. (ire).

their decision, but judgement was given against him. He then offered to show Helena where Christ's cross was, if she would remit the penalty imposed upon him. She granted his request, and allowed him time for the necessary enquiries. The place where the three crosses were buried being revealed, they were dug up and carried to the city, where the raising of a dead man to life showed which of them was the Holy Rood. It was then borne to the temple, and there they found the remainder of the beam from which the cross had been made, and which had been lying in the temple ever since the time of Christ's passion. A sweet odour from it filled the temple, and a learned Jew informed the queen what it was. Then she prayed to God to reveal to her what she should do with the beam¹ [cross], and an angel appeared and told her to cut it into four parts, one of which was to remain in the temple, the second to be brought to Rome, the third to be sent to Alexandria, and the fourth to be taken to Constantinople. She did as she was directed and placed the fourth part in the church of St. Sophia. Then follows a description of the virtues and symbols of the cross, &c., which is considerably shortened in CM.

§§ 17-18 (21,777). Helena sought also for the nails, and when they were found, she had them fastened to [a 'work' made of them for] Constantine's bridle. Wherever he rode, his bridle emitted fire and flame [had the brightness of fire], and many that saw it were converted. Constantine used the bridle thus for *four*² [three] years, after which time, his end drawing near, he took the nails from the bridle and put them beside the cross, and many miracles have since been wrought by them in Constantinople and in France. One of the nails is now at St. Denis, together with the crown. 'I myself,' says the author, 'have seen and kissed them.' [Now

¹ As the other versions (R, A, H) show, it was the remainder of the tree, which was lying in the temple, and not the cross, that Helena was directed to divide into four pieces. CM is therefore quite wrong. But even F is not free from confusion: the word just (the word employed just before in speaking of the beam lying in the temple), is, it is true, used here (l. 1412), but a few lines further on (l. 1423) we read: La croiz prant, jiiii. pars en fit. The mistake was a very natural one for a careless scribe to make.

² CM has here preserved the correct reading: R, A, and H all have three years.

the crown, together with the nails, is at St. Denis. This is the story of the cross, but others tell it differently, and say that it was a man named Judas, who found the cross, and that he was afterwards made bishop and called Quiriacus. And when he had found it the devil threatened him with vengeance.]

CHAPTER III.

THE LATIN LEGEND AND THE VERSIONS DERIVED FROM IT.

§ 6. The Latin Legend.

IN his Geschichte des Kreuzholzes vor Christus Meyer gives a full account of the earlier and simpler forms of the cross story, tracing its development and growth through six chief stages. The first five of these I shall pass over, proceeding at once to his sixth stage, which is represented by the Latin prose version termed by Meyer the *Legende*¹, from which most of the later versions are derived. As this Latin Legend is also the source of most of the Middle English cross-poems (cf. § 7), and as, moreover, it is evidently related to R and the versions considered in chap. ii, I here give a brief account of its contents.

Adam, when weary of life, sent his son Seth to Paradise to ask for the promised oil of mercy. Instead of this, the angel gave

¹ In the following pages I shall refer to this simply as the Legend. It is printed in Meyer, p. 131; Suchier, p. 166; Horstmann, p. 465; and a portion of it in Mussafia, p. 197. On the two slightly different versions cf. Suchier, p. 526. Its popularity is attested by the considerable number of MSS. still existing, as well as by the numerous translations of it into most of the European languages which were made during the following centuries, and of which Meyer gives an account in his seventh and eighth groups. I subjoin a list of the MSS. of the Latin Legend so far as they are known to me; no doubt others exist. In London: MSS. Royal, S. E. 17 (13th cent.); S. D. 4 (14th cent.); MS. Arundel 326 (15th cent.); Sloane MS. 289 (15th cent.); MS. Harley, 495 (15th cent.). Oxford: MS. Laud, 471 (13th cent.); MS. Bodley, 636 (15th cent.); MS. Rawlinson, A. 423 (15th cent.); MS. Douce, 88 (14th cent.); Queen's Coll. MS., 213 (15th cent.). Munich: Lat. MSS., 3433 (15th cent.); 27,006 (15th cent.); 11,601 (an abridged version, 14th cent.). Vienna: MS. 4373 (15th cent.).

him three pips from the tree, of the fruit of which Adam had eaten, and told him to put them under the tongue of his father, who would die within three days after his return. Seth did so, and buried his father in the vale of Ebron; and from the three pips there sprang three rods, of cedar, cypress, and pine, each one ell in length. They remained in Adam's mouth until the time of Moses, never increasing in size or losing their greenness.

When Moses had led the Israelites from Egypt across the Red Sea, he came with them to the vale of Ebron, where they encamped. In the evening the three rods, which were standing in Adam's mouth, appeared to them, and Moses, taking them, cried out, 'Truly, these three wands signify the Trinity.' A sweet fragrance filled the whole host, and they believed themselves already in the land of promise. Moses wrapped the rods in a clean cloth, and always carried them with him during his forty years' wanderings in the desert. And when any in the host were bitten by snakes or other poisonous reptiles, they were healed on kissing the rods.

At Meribah Moses struck the rock, and the water gushed forth, but he was told by the Lord that, as he had not sanctified His name, he should not lead the children of Israel into the land of promise. Recognizing that his end was near, Moses went to the foot of Mount Thabor (var. lect., Oreb), and planted the rods. Excavating himself a sepulchre near them, he entered it and died.

A thousand years later David was exhorted by the Holy Spirit to go to mount Thabor (Oreb) in Arabia, to seek the rods which Moses had planted. David did so, the same sweet odour again manifesting itself when they were cut. On the return journey people afflicted with divers complaints were healed.

On his arrival in Jerusalem, David put the rods in a tank overnight, leaving lights and watchmen with them, but when he returned in the morning, he found that they had taken root and grown together. At the sight of this miracle, he exclaimed, 'Let all nations fear the Lord, for He is mighty in His works.' Unwilling to move what God Himself had planted, he surrounded the rods with a wall, and silver rings were put round the tree, one each year for thirty years, to measure its growth. Under the tree David repented of the great sin which he had committed. Beginning to build the temple in expiation of his sins, he was told that not he, but his son Solomon was to erect it. When the temple was being built, the workmen, not finding a suitable beam elsewhere, cut the holy tree down and shaped it to a beam. But when cut, it would not fit, so Solomon commanded that it should be placed in the temple (var. lect. before the doors of the temple), as an object of veneration to all entering.

A certain woman named Maximilla, entered the temple and incautiously sat down on the sacred beam, when her clothes caught fire, and she began to prophesy, as in the other versions. The Jews having dragged her out of the city, stoned her, and she was the first martyr who suffered death for Christ's name.

The beam was then thrown into the 'probatica piscina,' but, in consequence of the miracles performed there, the water being moved by an angel and the sick healed, they drew it out and placed it across the brook of Siloam (trans torrentem Syloaticum). There it lay until Sybilla, queen of the South, came to Jerusalem to hear Solomon's wisdom; she would not cross it, but drawing up her garments, waded the stream with naked feet and prophesied. The beam remained there until Christ's passion.

When Christ was condemned to death, one of the Jews suggested that they should take the royal tree, which lay outside the city. A third part of it was cut off, and the cross made from it, and when they had had the cross brought (*var. lect.*¹ had caused Simon, a Cyrenian, to bear the cross) to Calvary, Christ was crucified on it.

§ 7. Versions derived from the Legend.

The following English versions are directly derived from the Legend and preserve its characteristic features. They may therefore be regarded as forming a distinct group (the Legend group) as compared with the versions described in chapter ii.

(a) Story of the Holy Rood, printed in Morris' Legends, &c., p. 62, from MS. Harley 4196, beginning, 'When Adam oure form fader dere.' In this version, as also in the next (b), the author used the *Vita Adæ et Evæ*¹ as well as the Legend.

(b) Canticum de Creatione, edited from MS. Trinity Coll., Oxford, 57, by Horstmann, Anglia, i. 303, and reprinted in Altenglische Legenden, Heilbronn, 1878, p. 124. It begins, 'Jhesu Crist, hevene kyng.'

(c) A version in long lines contained in the South English Cycle of Legends, and edited by Morris, Legends, &c., p. 18 (from MSS. Ashmole 43, Harley 2277, and the Vernon MS.), and by Horstmann, in The Early South English Legendary, E. E. T. Soc., 1887, p. 1 (from MS. Laud 108). This version, which is to be found in a considerable number of MSS. (cf. the preface to Horstmann's edition) frequently differs in the arrangement of its various parts. Only the first 184 lines treat of the history of the wood previous to Christ, the remainder of the poem dealing with the Invention and Exposition of the Cross. Of these 184 lines the first 156 follow the Legend closely²; for the rest, 157-184, the author evidently borrowed from Jacobus de Voragine's *Legenda aurea*³.

Translations of the Legend in Old French prose and verse are numerous. Cf. P. Meyer, Revue critique, i. 222-3; Mussafia, p. 185; Meyer, p. 150 ff.; Berger, pp. 90, 182, 345, 353, 408, 425; P. Meyer, Romania, xv. 326; xvi. 252.

For the Provençal versions, cf. Meyer, pp. 131, 150; Suchier, p. 166; A. Graf, Giornale di filologia romanza, iv. 99.

Other versions, also derived from the Legend, in German, Swedish, Icelandic, Italian, and Cornish, are described by Meyer, p. 149 ff. To these may be added the Irish version, published by Schirmer, p. 7.

¹ Cf. Abhandlungen der k. bayer. Akad. d. Wiss. I. cl. xiv. Bd. 1879, p. 187.

² But cf. note, p. xxxvii.

³ Meyer, p. 151, further mentions a prose Lyff of Adam and Eve, printed by Horstmann, Altengl. Legenden, p. 220. This only deals with the Adam period, but, as Meyer points out, the author of it used the Legend as well as the Vita Adæ et Evæ.

We also find a distinct reminiscence of the Legend in the York Mystery Plays, ed. L. Toulmin Smith, p. 339, where the cross is made of the tree

'pat laye overe þe lake,
men called it þe kyngis tree.'

CHAPTER IV.

RELATION OF THE ROOD-TREE VERSIONS TO THE LEGEND AND TO EACH OTHER.

§ 8. Relation of the Rood-tree group to the Legend.

THE versions considered in the foregoing chapters obviously fall into two groups: the one comprising the Legend and the versions directly derived from it (cf. § 7); and the other, the Rood-tree group, consisting of R, Ca, A, F, and *CM*¹. The members of the latter group, whilst differing considerably amongst themselves, possess a number of features in common which distinguish them from the Legend, and justify us in assuming that they are ultimately derived from a common original, in which these distinguishing features already existed, and to which I shall, in future, refer as X. At the same time there are points of agreement between the two groups which show that the Legend and X are, in some way, connected with each other. In investigating this relationship the chief questions to which an answer must be sought, are: Is the Legend derived from X, or vice versa? Or do they both come from a common source? Meyer, p. 156, is of opinion that X, or rather, the members of the Rood-tree group then known to him², are a later development from the Legend; but I shall endeavour to show that neither of them is borrowed from the other, the features which the two groups possess in common being due to their common source.

The main points of agreement are the following:

- (1) The rods are found by Moses³, who always carries them about with him and performs miracles by their means.
- (2) David, commanded by God, goes in search of the rods and brings them to Jerusalem.

² R, Ca, and F were, of course, not known to Meyer. The other three members of the group, Db, A, CM, he regards as derived from the Legend.

³ In the earlier forms of the Cross-wood story, Meyer's first five stages, no mention at all is made of Moses.

(3) They are placed overnight in a spring or tank, and in the morning have taken root and are left there.

(4) They grow together, forming a single tree, round which silver rings are fastened every year for thirty years.

(5) The tree, when cut down, proving unsuitable for use in the temple building, is laid in the temple.

(6) The Sibylla-Maximilla episode.

(7) At the crucifixion a portion of the tree is cut off and the cross made therefrom.

The chief points which, on the other hand, distinguish the Rood-tree group from the Legend, are shown by the following table :—

Legend.

1. The cross-tree story is brought into connexion with the Adam legend.

2. Moses finds the rods in the vale of Hebron in the evening. They are standing in Adam's mouth. When they are drawn out by Moses, a sweet fragrance fills the whole place. He wraps them up in a clean cloth.

3. Those bitten by snakes are healed by the rods. Moses strikes the rock³ and water gushes forth.

4.

Rood-tree group.

The history begins with Moses (Db and CM borrow here from the Legend).

After crossing the Red Sea the Israelites suffer from want of water. The three rods appear to Moses, standing round his bed on three¹ successive mornings and in three different places (on the second occasion in Elim², on the third in Rephidim). Not until the third morning does Moses dare to pull them up.

The bitter waters at Rephidim⁴ are made sweet by the rods.

When Moses ascended Mount Sinai, he put the rods in water (Ca, Db), or hid them (CM, F).

with the Cross-story and is obviously taken from some other source.

⁴ Rephidim is confused with Marah (Exod. xv. 23).

¹ Reduced in R to two.

² Cf. note on p. 37.

³ In CM (l. 6391) the striking of the rock is mentioned, but it is not brought into any sort of connexion

5. A thousand years later, at the bidding of the Holy Spirit, David went to Arabia to Mount Oreb, where he found the rods. A fragrant odour again filled the place.

6. The miracles performed by the rods during David's homeward journey to Jerusalem are only briefly hinted at: regrediente David occurrerunt ei diversis morborum generibus oppressi qui virtute sancte crucis salvabantur.

7. The rods planted over night are not removed next day because God Himself had planted them, and had performed a miracle on them.

8. Under the tree David repented of the great sin which he had committed.

9. The holy tree, proving unfit for use as one of the beams of the temple, artifices perquisierunt trabem idoneam.

In the tenth year of his reign, an angel appeared to David, bidding him cross the Jordan to find the rods. In the morning he saw them standing round his couch. In answer to his prayer God revealed to him that these were the rods he had been sent to fetch (Ca, Db, shortened in F, CM).

The miracles are specified: (i) Roxilus (Ioxilus, &c.) is healed. (ii) A varying number¹ of black men are made white. (iii) A leper, dwelling in a mountain cave, prophesies David's coming, and is healed by a flame which, issuing from the rods on David's approach, consumes the leprosy².

The rods planted over night are not removed next day because they had taken such firm root that it was impossible to pull them out³.

The holy tree, proving unfit for use as one of the beams of the temple, the workmen find another one that very same day.

¹ Probably the original had 'four,' as in Ca, F, CM.

² The third miracle is very slightly altered in F, CM.

³ The version in the South English

Legendary (cf. § 7 c) agrees in this point with the Rood-tree versions, the other English members of the Legend group (§ 7 a and b) follow the Legend.

10.

The thirty silver rings are deposited in the temple and afterwards given to Judas.

11.

Cericius (Ciritius, Orifeus, &c.) tries to remove the beam from the temple, but is burnt (wanting in Db).

12. The Jews stone Maximilla to death. She is the first martyr.

The Jews torture Sibylla¹ and cast her into prison; an angel comes to comfort her and tells her that she shall henceforth be called Susanna. She is put to death (R, Ca, A). Db mentions only the prison, not the angel; whilst in CM and F there is no prison, but the angel comes and tells her that she shall be called 'Christian.'

13. The beam is thrown into the piscine. Removed thence on account of the miracles, it is used as a bridge, which Sibylla refuses to cross. It remains there until the time of Christ's passion.

The beam remains in the temple until the time of Christ's passion (altered in Db and CM).

14. Pergentes continuo Judei extra civitatem (where the beam was still lying over the brook) tertiam partem trabis sancte inciderunt et fecerunt inde crucem dominicam.

A large number (300 R, Ca, A, 200 F, CM) of Jews sent by Caiaphas to fetch the tree out of the temple, cannot move it. A third part is therefore cut off, the cross is made in the temple, and Christ Himself carries it out (altered in Db).

15.

The cross and nails are found by Helena, &c. (wanting in Db).

¹ The author of CM, following the Legend, has altered to Maximilla.

Of these differences between the two groups one of the most important is the fact that, in the Rood-tree group, the tree remained lying in the temple from the time of Sibylla's (= Maximilla's) death to that of Christ's passion, whilst in the Legend, it was thrown into the piscine and afterwards served as a bridge which Sibylla, queen of the South, refused to cross. That the Rood-tree group, in one respect at least, represents the original most faithfully, is evident. The two prophetesses of the Legend, the Maximilla, who sits on the tree, and the Sibylla, who will not cross the bridge, are really one and the same person; so that these two incidents in the Legend, although entirely differentiated in form, are in fact a repetition of what, in the original tradition, was but a single one: namely, that Sibylla, queen of Sheba¹, on seeing the tree, prophesied concerning it. This double introduction in the Legend of what was originally the same incident, is obviously the result of the amalgamation of at least two distinct versions of the story: in the one, the tree was seen by Sibylla in the temple and she prophesied there concerning it; and in the other it was used as a bridge, which Sibylla refused to cross². As both prophetesses had the same name, Sibylla, the author of the Legend, when he combined the two, altered it, in the first instance, to Maximilla in order to avoid repetition. The Rood-tree group, in which only one prophetess appears, has, in this respect, obviously preserved the older form of the tradition, and cannot therefore have been derived from the Legend.

In another point, too, the Rood-tree group seems to me to represent the original more faithfully: viz. in that, after the Sibylla-Maximilla episode, the wood remains in the temple, and is not thrown into the piscine. In a Greek version (fourteenth or fifteenth century) published by Gretser, De sancta Cruce (cf. Meyer, p. 156), the wood, after proving unsuitable for use as a beam, ¹ On the identification of the queen of Sheba with the Sibylla, and on her prophecy concerning the cross, cf. Hertz, p. 19 ff.

² As in the Rationale divinatorum officiorum of Johannes Beleth, the Legenda aurea of Jacobus de Voragine, &c., where the tree, proving unsuitable for use as a beam of the temple, was made to serve as a bridge, which the Queen of Sheba worshipped and would not cross.

is placed in the temple and serves as a seat. The queen of Sheba refuses to sit upon it, but full of the spirit of God, prophesies who should die thereon. Solomon has it set up facing the east, and it remains there until the time of Christ's passion. There is evidently a close relationship between this and the Sibylla-Maximilla episode, the beam being here used as a seat, which is not the case in any of Meyer's earlier groups. We have, in fact, in this Greek version, the Sibylla-Maximilla episode in an earlier stage of its development than in the Legend or the Rood-tree group: The prophetess is still the queen of Sheba¹, and has not yet become a simple lady, whilst her refusal to seat herself on the tree, which may be compared to the refusal to cross the bridge, is obviously older than the fire and the martyrdom in the latter. Meyer, it is true, thinks that the elements of the Greek version are borrowed from the Legend, but it seems to me that they are unquestionably earlier, and that the episode in the Legend and Rood-tree group is a later development from some such earlier form. We have no reason for supposing that this earlier form did not also agree with the Greek story in representing the tree as afterwards remaining in the temple, whence we may conclude that the Rood-tree group is here again more original, and cannot therefore be derived from the Legend, the author of which, in representing the beam as being thrown into the piscine, has followed some other source.

The absence of the Adam part of the story from the Rood-tree versions may be adduced as further confirmation of the view that they are not derived from the Legend. Against this it might be urged that the author of X, the original of the Rood-tree group, possibly found the Adam part in his source, but purposely cut it out. That is not impossible, but the circumstances attending the finding of the rods by Moses in the Rood-tree group, which have no connexion at all with Adam², seem to me to militate against such an assumption.

¹ As to this point I rely on Meyer's account (p. 156), as I have not access to the edition quoted.

² In the Legend they appear to Moses where they had remained since Adam's time, viz., standing in Adam's mouth.

Other evidence in the same direction is afforded by the relative age of the two. Whilst there is nothing to prove that the Legend was composed before the end of the twelfth or in the thirteenth century¹, the MS. in which R is preserved (MS. Bodl. 343), written about 1150-1175, separated as it is from X by at least one intermediate link (cf. § 9), shows that the original of the Rood-tree group cannot have been composed later than during the early part of the twelfth century². In fact it was probably written as early as the beginning of the eleventh century (cf. § 19).

That the Legend is a later development of X, the original of the Rood-tree group, is, on the other hand, very improbable. The fuller and more detailed character of the latter renders it very unlikely that it can have been the source of the Legend, which does not bear the stamp of having been condensed from a more detailed version.

As neither of the two is derived from the other, the Legend and X must have been borrowed from some common source. This source must have already possessed all those features which have been enumerated above as being common to the two groups. The history of the Cross-wood had been brought into connexion with Moses, but not with Adam. At God's command David went in search of the rods, &c. The Queen of Sheba, who, having come to hear the wisdom of Solomon, saw the tree in the temple, refused to sit upon it, and prophesied concerning it, had already become a simple lady, who, entering the temple to worship, inadvertently sat down on the tree, and when it suddenly burst into flames, prophesied and was put to death.

¹ The earliest known MS. belongs to the thirteenth century, to which period Meyer (p. 130) seems to assign its composition (diese Form der Sage muss vor dem Ende des XIII. Jahrhunderts entstanden sein), whilst Rohde (cf. Suchier, p. 621) takes the end of the twelfth century to be the earliest possible date of its production (frühestens am Ende des XII. Jahrhunderts).

² The Cambridge MS. also belongs to the twelfth century; and the Jesus

MS. of the Judas story, written before 1200, presupposes the existence of X. This important fact, that a fully developed Cross-legend, treating the history of the Cross-wood from Moses to Christ, existed in the first half of the twelfth century, perhaps early in the eleventh—in point of time, as early as, or earlier than, Meyer's first and simplest stages—will have to be taken into account by future reconstructors of the history and development of the Cross-wood legend.

That the history of the rods under Moses is entirely different in the two groups may be explained by assuming that, in the common source, no details were given as to how or where the rods were found, the authors of the Legend and X filling out the details independently. The former, who added the Adam part from some other source, naturally made the rods appear where they had originally sprung up, viz., in Adam's mouth, whilst the author of X, borrowing his background from the Bible narrative (Exod. xv. 22, 27, and 23-25, &c.), connected the finding of the rods with the search of the Israelites for water. The different circumstances of time and place attending the later finding of the rods by David, follow naturally from the different circumstances of their first appearance.

Most of the other points of divergence between the Rood-tree group and the Legend (cf. nos. 4, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, in the above list of differences) consist in additional incidents and details in the former which are not found in the Legend, and which, as has been already pointed out, serve to show that the Legend cannot well be a later development from X.

As that portion of the story which treats of the cross under Constantine, forms no part of the Legend, I have hitherto passed it over. Before, however, proceeding to the consideration of the relation of the various members of the Rood-tree group to each other, it will be well to point out briefly the characteristic features of this portion of the history in the Rood-tree group as compared with other versions of the St. Helena legend. Constantine's victory and the actual finding of the cross, round which elsewhere the chief interest centres, is passed over altogether (the account given in F and CM we must, for other reasons, regard as an interpolation), and instead of it we have a detailed account of what Helena did with the remainder of the tree which she found still lying in the temple. The use to which Constantine put the holy nails also seems peculiar to our group. Elsewhere their object was to secure victory, but the Rood-tree versions, taking a more monkish view of the matter, represent him as travelling about for three years converting people to Christianity by their help, at the end of which time he returned to Constantinople and deposited the nails by the side of the cross.

§ 9. Relation of the members of the Rood-tree group to each other.

With regard to the relation of the members of the Rood-tree group to each other, it has already been pointed out that A is translated from κa (cf. p. xiii), and CM from F (cf. p. xxiv); there only remain, therefore, R, κa, Db, and F. That R, although preserved in so old a MS., cannot have been the source of any of the others, is obvious, as a mere glance at its contents is sufficient to show. Nor is it necessary to give any detailed proof that neither of the two younger versions, F or Db, can be the source of the other. The only remaining possibility is that κa is the original from which one or more of the others are derived. This question has already been answered in the affirmative on page xiv, where the opinion has been expressed that κa is, to all intents and purposes, the source, not only of Ca, A, and II, but also of all the other members of the Rood-tree group, and is practically identical with *X*¹. It is, of course, not easy to give a definite proof of this, but the fact that all the essential features which an examination of the existing versions shows X to have possessed, are found in κa, whilst, on the other hand, nothing in κa militates against this assumption, is a strong argument in its favour.

The two younger versions, Db and F, which are quite independent of each other, have, whilst preserving the main outlines of X, undergone considerable alteration, incidents having been modified or omitted, portions of the story replaced by borrowings from entirely different sources, and the whole shortened.

¹ That is: X was a version identical, on the whole, word for word with κa. As however the manuscript κa (from which Ca, A, II came) was not identical with, but was itself a copy (probably with intermediate links) of the original manuscript, X, from which all the members of the group are ultimately derived, it may be assumed to have exhibited slight divergencies (omissions, &c.) from X, such as are usually found when any work passes through the hands of a number of scribes. Thus, for instance, in both R and F (CM), David crosses the Jordan without boats, and the agreement of these versions renders it probable that this incident, although wanting in κa, was contained in X.

Db took the Adam-Seth part from the Legend and prefixed it to the narrative of X; the scene of the first appearance of the rods he laid in the vale of Ebron, Adam's burial place, as in the Legend, but the manner of their appearance (they are found standing round Moses' bed) he borrowed from X. The incidents following Sibylla's martyrdom have been quite altered in Db, being evidently borrowed from some other version. As Meyer (p. 155) suggests, the author probably used the account of Jacobus de Voragine, in whose Golden Legend the incidents follow each other thus: the beam, proving unfit for use in the building of the temple, was placed as a bridge over a pool. The queen of Saba would not walk over it, but worshipped it. According to another account, says Jacobus de Voragine, the queen saw the tree in domo saltus. On her prophesying that one should be hung on it, through whose death the kingdom of the Jews would be destroyed, Solomon had it buried in the ground. The probatica piscina was afterwards made on this same spot, and at the time of Christ's passion the wood floated to the top and the cross was made of it.

The author of Db evidently followed this account, but amplified it by making Solomon place the tree as an object of veneration in the temple, where it remained until the reign of Abia, in whose days it was dragged thence and buried in the ground. This episode is apparently found nowhere else. At the end of his account, Jacobus de Voragine merely states that the Jews seeing the wood floating in the piscine, took it, and made the cross of it. The author of Db, returning to the version of X, says that a third part of the tree was cut off and made into a cross, and that Christ Himself afterwards bore it to Calvary. The finding of the cross is omitted.

The most important alterations in F, apart from the modification or omission of individual incidents and general shortening, are the following. The detailed description of the Ethiopians who were made white, has been inserted, no doubt, by the author of F. Additions have also been made to the Solomon part of the story. The Judas legend, which in X probably followed, as an independent appendix, at the end of the whole, has been inserted in its proper place. The blossoming of the cross after the crucifixion and the burial of Christ by Joseph of Arimathia is another addition. The introduction of the Shylock episode (Helena's goldsmith, his Jewish creditor, the judgement given by Constantine's messengers, and the finding of the cross by the Jew), which is found in no other version, is without doubt due to the author of F, as is also the description of the virtues and symbols of the cross, and the mention of St. Denis at the end.

It has already been pointed out (p. xxiv, note) that the author of CM, whilst following F as his source, was also acquainted with the Legend and occasionally used it. Thence he took the Adam-Seth episode, which he did not find in F. The incidents which follow the martyrdom of Sibylla (l. 8923 ff.), as well as the name Maximilla, he also borrowed from the Legend. Lines 8206-8230, too, of CM betray influence of the same source (cf. note to p. xxvii).

R, although in many of the details it follows X more closely than either Db or F (CM), has undergone more radical changes than any other member of the group. Scarcely a single incident has been left untouched, almost all of them having been greatly expanded, partly by the addition of further details and the introduction of new actors, and partly by the dialogues which have frequently taken the place of the concise, somewhat bare narrative of the original. Most of the episodes have, in consequence, grown to at least twice, in some instances four, even seven times their original length. Entirely new episodes have also been inserted, the most striking instance of which is the story of the interviews between Moses and David and the former's servant Robii¹, which

¹ The invention of this story may perhaps be accounted for by assuming that the author had a MS. before him in which the portion narrating the planting of the rods by Moses and the finding of them by David, was lost. Seeing the names of Moses and David as successive possessors of the rods in close juxtaposition, but without any hint as to how the latter passed from one owner to the other, he assumed them to have been contemporaries, and accordingly filled up the gap by making them meet at Robathii, and inventing the Robii episode. He elsewhere shows how scanty his knowledge of biblical history was: cf. p. 22¹⁵, where David's reign is made to last over 700 years, and p. 32²⁵, where only one robber is spoken of as having been crucified with Christ.

occupies nearly 150 lines and is, in great part, taken up by dialogues. Other instances are the account of David's visit to the Ethiopians' houses, and the continuation of the Sibylla episode.

The question here arises, To whom are all these amplifications and additions in R due? Are they the work of the English author, or did he find them in his Latin original (cf. § 20)? I think the latter: there seems good reason for assuming the existence of a Latin version intermediate between X and R, which already contained the characteristic peculiarities of R. In addressing the sick man, Roxilus (p. 14²²), Moses uses the Latin vocative Roxile, which may be reasonably taken as proof that the dialogue, which is peculiar to R, already existed in its Latin original, and that the English author, who elsewhere (p. 14¹⁴, 14²³) writes Roxilus, in translating Moses' speech, retained the Latin vocative form unaltered. But there is no reason for doubting that the same author who amplified the Roxilus episode by the introduction of the dialogue, at the same time added the other details which distinguish the episode in R. And what holds good of the Roxilus episode, may be taken to hold good for the rest. Hence it will not be too hazardous to assume that the additions and amplifications which are so characteristic of R, were not invented by the English author, but were found by him in his Latin original. Other isolated forms serve to confirm this: to Arabiam (p. 4²⁸) presupposes a Latin ad Arabiam, and must have been taken by the English author from his Latin original, which, we may infer, contained an account of Moses' journey to Arabia, an episode only found in R. It is only in R that Sibylla is described as having been a meretrix (p. 26¹²), and here again, the use of the unaltered Latin word, instead of the English myllestre, shows that this alteration had already been made in the Latin original.

It has already been mentioned (cf. p. xiii) that in X the story of the Cross was probably followed immediately by the Judas story, as in Andrius. As this did not form a part of the Cross-legend proper, but merely followed in the MS. as an independent story, it might easily happen that in some of the MSS. copied from X, it should be omitted. Hence we find no trace of it in R. In Db, which ends with the crucifixion, and in Ca, which is fragmentary, it is naturally wanting. The other Rood-tree versions, CM, F, H, either have it or show traces of it (cf. p. xiii). The Latin version¹ of the Judas story is found independently in a number of MSS. It was edited from a MS. belonging to Dr. Ginsburg, by Dr. E. Maunde Thompson, in the Journal of the British Archaeological Association, vol. xxxvii. (1881), p. 241. I have printed it (p. 68) from a late twelfth century MS. (MS. 4, Jesus Coll. Oxford) with variant readings from two other MSS.

In these MSS., as well as in Andrius, the interview between Judas and his mother is preceded by a brief abstract of the history of the Cross-wood, beginning with Moses, which is evidently epitomized from X.

Similar tales of a cock being brought to life again are met with elsewhere, though not in connexion with Judas. Cf. Mussafia, p. 206; R. Köhler and F. Wolf in Ebert's Jahrbuch für romanische und englische Literatur, iii. (1861), pp. 58 and 67; R. Köhler, Göttingische gelehrte Anzeigen (1869), p. 764; E. M. Thompson, l. c. p. 239.

CHAPTER V.

ON THE LANGUAGE OF THE HISTORY OF THE ROOD-TREE.

§ 10. The accented vowels.

OE. æ remains as a rule unaltered; occasionally it appears as e, the proportion being about fourteen æ's to one e. In a few instances OE. æ is represented by a; this is invariably the case with the word water 2¹, &c. (ten times), where the a is, no doubt, due to the influence of the initial *w*². In almihtiz 6¹⁹, &c. (seven times), besides ælmihltiz 6¹⁷, &c. (three times), the a is due to the influence

¹ An Irish translation of the Judas story occurs in the Leabhar Breac, Dublin, 1876, p. 222, col. 1, l. 36.

² In wæs, hwæt, cwæð, which are written with æ, the w has had no such influence. In the Ancren Riwe, in which OE. æ is ordinarily represented by e, we find a after w: þet, efter, &c., but hwæt, was, water.

of all. Hafst 8¹⁹, 14¹¹, besides hæfst 14³⁰, &c., owes its a to the dissyllabic form hafest 16³⁰, 28¹³ (OE. hafast). The other instances, mazenæ 20³² and togadere 22⁶, are perhaps mere scribal errors. In bead (for bæd) 10⁶, 20¹⁶, we find ea written.

OE. a (o) before nasals appears both as a and o. Leaving out of consideration and (conj. and prefix), which when written out, is always spelt with a, the o's predominate in a proportion somewhat exceeding five to four. Before n, nn, o is much more frequent than a (mon, which occurs twenty-six times, is always spelt with o). Before nd (with the exceptions mentioned), o slightly preponderates. Before ng the a's and o's are evenly balanced, whilst before nc, a predominates. Before m, a is more frequent: lichame (sixteen times) is regularly written with a, nome (OE. nama) and from are always spelt with o. In þeonon 2¹⁰, besides þonon, þanon, the root-vowel has been influenced by heonon. Note also ðænon 20¹⁵.

OE. e is generally represented by e. Sometimes æ is written for it: wæz 14¹⁹, halpen 14³¹, weras 18⁸, &c.

OE. i remains unaltered. In wunstræn 2¹⁰, wullæ 16²³, wullen 28², nuste 16⁸, nutenesse 16⁸, &c., the u (= ü) is due to the influence of the w.

OE. o remains unaltered. The forms marezen 2¹⁰, mærezen 22¹, &c., are from the OE. by-forms margen and mergen. Durstæ 26¹¹, &c., which has taken the place of the West Saxon dorste, owes its u to the pres. pl. durron.

OE. u is preserved unaltered.

OE. y (umlaut of u) appears both as y (rarely i) and as u (= ü). Instances of both are numerous: e. g. -cynnes 12¹⁰, cun 22⁸; bryne 26³², brune 12⁵, 26¹³; gylt 12⁷, agult 24²³; fyrht 12², furhte 10²⁰; wellsprynge 4¹⁰, welsprunges 2³; syngode 16⁸, sungode 12⁶; ifylled 4²⁵, fulden 4²⁶, &c. We also find this u, by the side of y, as the representative of OE. y from other sources: e. g. clypoden 4³, clupode 18²⁸ (OE. clipian, cliopian, clypian); mycel 8¹⁴ &c., mucel 4²⁰, &c.; sulle 10²⁰ (OE. sellan, syllan); dyde 8⁶, &c., duden 2¹⁶, &c.; styde 24³¹, stude 22³ (cf. note to 22³).

OE. ea is regularly preserved before ld: anwealdæ 6²², heald 14⁷, &c. Only in one instance do we find æ written: heldan 8¹⁰. It is also preserved before lf: dealf 2¹⁰, healfe 26⁵, &c. Before ll, on the other hand, it is generally represented by a: eall only occurs four times (24²³, 26², 26⁷, 28¹⁹) as compared with about fifty instances of all; further feallæn 8³⁴, fallen 12³⁰. Before r + consonant ea remains unaltered: gearwode 2¹⁴, wearð 4², &c. (forty-five times). Only in two instances is a written: swartnysse 16²⁷, sigelharwon 16¹⁷. Before h and x I have noted twenty-three instances of ea and seven of æ: iseah 2¹³, astreahle 20¹⁶; æhtæ 6¹, astræhte 12⁸, &c.

OE. eo has been preserved unaltered. In isih 10¹² (imperative, OE. geseoh) the change is due to the influence of the h. Hoefenum 14²⁹ is a mere slip of the scribe's.

OE. (West Saxon) ie, later y (umlaut of ea) generally appears as y: invariably so in gyrd (over forty times). Occasionally we find e: ferd 2¹³, &c. (six times), werne 18², &c., besides fyrd 4² (once), yldestan 22²¹, cwyldon 30⁶, &c.

OE. ie, y (umlaut of eo) appears as y (i): gyrnende 6²¹, &c., isihst 8²², &c.

OE. ā remains unaltered, there being no trace of the change to o. In æhte (=OE. āhte) 8⁴, ⁵, it appears as æ; cf. ahle 30³.

OE. ǣ (=Germanic ǣ) appears both as æ and e, the former predominating in about the proportion of three to two: spǣce 12²⁹, spece 8³³, &c.

OE. æ (=Germanic ai) is almost invariably written æ. Only a few isolated instances of e occur: nefræ 8⁶, arerde 10¹², mende 26¹⁹, del 34⁶. Cf. also deales 32¹, aleaden 12¹, and arest 32²⁷.

OE. ē is generally preserved; occasionally it is written æ: swætnesse 4¹⁹, sæcan 32⁹, &c.

OE. ī, ō, ū remain unaltered.

OE. ȳ (uml. of ū) appears both as y and u, both spellings occurring with equal frequency: e.g. fyrenne 'fiery' 12², furenne 10²⁶; untymdest 12²⁸, bitunon 22⁴; biclydde 26²³, biclysdon 28⁷; cyddon 24¹², cuddon 22³³, &c.

OE. (West Saxon) īe, later ȳ (umlaut of īa) occurs most frequently as y (i): ihyrde 10⁵, &c. Somewhat less frequently it is written e: īherde 16⁷, &c. Once it appears as u: ihurde 28²⁹.

OE. ē, later ȳ (umlaut of ēo): ansyne 4¹⁴, 6¹¹, 26², anseone 18¹⁰, onliht 14⁸.

OE. ēa and ēo are preserved unaltered. Note the isolated spelling ræd (OE. rēad) 2⁵, 12¹². The OE. lēoht 'a light' appears as liht 12²⁹, the ēo having been first shortened and then changed to i by the influence of the following h, as in isih (see above).

§ 11. The unaccented Vowels.

The OE. end-vowels have been partly preserved, partly weakened to æ, e, thus representing a transition stage between OE. and ME.

The OE. infinitival ending -an appears as -an, -æn, -on, and -en. I have noted fifty-five instances of -an, forty-six of -æn, twelve of -on, and sixty-five of -en.

The OE. adverbial ending -an is also represented by -an, -on, -æn, -en: wiðneoðan 22¹⁰, ðonen 2¹³, &c.

The ending -an of the oblique cases of substantives and adjectives of the n-declension occurs as -an, æn, -en, rarely -on, or, the final n being dropped, as a, æ, e.

The ending a (gen. plur. of all substantives and adjectives; nom. acc. plur. of fem. subst. of the ō-declension; gen. dat. sg. and nom. acc. pl. of subst. of u-decl.; nom. voc. masc. sg. of substantives and adjectives of the n-declension; imperative sg. of weak verbs of class 2; ending of adverbs such as sona, &c.) appears as a, æ, e, the second of these (æ) being by far the commonest.

The ending -as of the nom. acc. plur. of masculine substantives of the a-declension appears as -as, -æs, -es, forms in æs being the most frequent.

The ending -að (plural present indic. and imperative of all verbs; 3rd pers. sg. pres. indic. of weak verbs of class 2) generally appears as -æð, in a few cases as -eð.

The ending -ast (2nd pers. sg. pres. indic. of weak verbs of class 2) is written -ast and -æst.

The ending -on (pret. plur. of verbs) appears indifferently as -on, -en, rarely -an, -un.

The o in -ode, -od is, as a rule, preserved, but -æde is also common in the former case, and -æd is sometimes found in the latter.

The ending -um appears most frequently unaltered; there also occur forms in -on, -an, -æn, -en, -æ, and e.

For the representation of OE. -u in the nom. acc. plur. of neuter substantives, and in the u-declension, cf. § 13.

An OE. e in the end syllables generally appears as e, occasionally as æ.

§ 12. The Consonants.

The consonants exhibit but very slight deviations from the OE. usage, the following points being all that call for notice.

In a few instances nn is written for n: fyrenne (nom. plur.) 10²⁶, 12², forburnenne 12⁵, ðonne 26³². Conversely n appears instead of nn: ðine (acc. sg. masc.) 6²³, mine 12⁶, 28², seolfrene 22⁹, &c.

There is a tendency to drop the n in the n-declension of substantives and adjectives, cf. § 13. The final m of the ending -um has not unfrequently become n, and is sometimes dropped altogether. On the other hand, the final n of the infinitive, pret. plural, and past participle is always preserved. An n has been lost in mi 8³³, 12²⁹ and twege 18²². Note the form siðen 10¹⁴ for siðe (§ 13, a). On the dropping of r in the adj. decl. cf. § 14.

A final d sometimes appears as t; especially in ant (for and) 4²³, 30³¹, 12¹², &c., middaneart 14⁸, metmucele 32²⁵. The converse is the case in eard 14⁴, seald 28¹², unrodsiæn 6²¹.

There is a tendency to drop initial h before l and r: lude 4¹⁶, 10³¹, &c., laforde 8¹¹, rymen 26¹⁴. An initial h seems to have been lost in alsigan 10²³ (cf. the note). Final h has vanished in þur 6¹⁶.

An inorganic g has been added in mægð 28¹⁵.

§ 13. Declension of Substantives.

The dative plural of substantives of all genders and declensions ends most frequently in -um, the OE. ending being preserved unaltered. By the side of it we also not unfrequently find weakened forms in -on, -an, -æn, -en, and sometimes in æ, e: ðingum 22²⁹, gyrdon 10⁹, bedon 12²⁴, dagan 6²³, discæn 24⁶, honden 18¹⁷, fæðmæ 24¹⁷, nihte 28⁹.

In the genitive plural the old ending -a is sometimes found, but most frequently it appears weakened to æ, in a few instances as e: handa 12⁸, þinga 8¹⁸, cnihta 4³², þingæ 6³⁵, geare 20³³.

(a) Masculine a-declension.

The declension of the i-stems does not differ from that of the a-stems. The singular is declined as in OE., the gen. and dat. ending in -es, -e. On the forms drihten 14⁴ and dæge 34², cf. § 17. In writing siðen 10¹⁴ for siðe the scribe probably had the plural twam siðen in his mind.

The nom. acc. plur. ends occasionally in -as, but much more frequently in -æs, sometimes in -es: wæras 18⁸, nægslas 34¹⁰, englæs 28²⁴, cnihtæs 18²³, dages 4³⁰, dæles 32¹⁹, &c. Besides the ordinary gen. plur. in -æ (dagæ 4²⁸, &c.), the form dagene 6¹ occurs with the ending of the n-declension. On earmæs 10²⁷, wæras 18¹⁸, cf. § 17.

(b) Neuter a-declension.

The neuter a-declension differs from the masculine only in the nom. acc. plural, which is either without ending or ends in -u, -a (as in OE.) or in some weakened form of it: wif 18⁵, þing 8⁵, mild 34²⁰, word 8¹⁰, &c., and mægenu 16¹⁹, gebedu 12²², tintrega 26²⁵, wundræ 18¹⁹, scypæ 18²⁹, mægne 16⁶. We rarely find the endings of the n-declension: faten 4²⁶, scypæn 18²⁸.

(c) Feminine ō-declension.

The endings of the feminine jō- and i-stems agree with those of the ō-stems, except that, in the case of the i-declension, the acc. sg. is found without any ending: tīd 4⁷, 8²⁹, &c.

The most characteristic features of the declension are the tendency to add an inorganic e to the nom. sg., and to adopt the endings of the n-declension in the plural.

Examples of the former are: rode 2¹, tacnunge 2¹¹, bitternesse 4¹², stæfne 10¹⁷, wilnunge 12²⁶, spæce 12²⁹, 8³³, untrunnesse 16¹, sawle 26²⁷, foresceawunge 32¹⁰, &c., by the side of stæfn 14²⁹, &c. The nominative ending -nisse for -nis occurs in Late West Saxon, cf. Napier, Wulfstan (Dissertation), p. 65. In ME. the addition of such an -e to the nom. of fem. nouns became the rule; cf. Zupitza, Anzeiger für deutsches Alterthum, ii. 11.

The nom. acc. plur. ends in -a, -æ, -e, or else, with the endings of the weak or n-declension, in -an, -on, -æn, -en: mærdæ 16²⁹, benæ 14³, healfe 32¹⁹, gyrdan 8⁸, gyrdon 10¹⁶, gyrdæn 22¹⁵, gyrden 4¹⁰, roten 4²⁶ (Scandinavian loan word). On the gen. and dat. plur. see above. Note the weak gen. form æxene 26¹ besides æxæ 24³³.

(d) The u-declension.

(i) OE. sunu.

Sing., nom. voc. sune 20⁴, 30¹⁷; gen. sune 34¹¹; dat. sunæ 34²¹; acc. sune 2¹⁷, -æ 14²⁵, &c. Plural, nom. sunæ 18²¹.

(ii) OE. durū, hand.

Sing., nom. hand 20⁷; dat. duræ 20¹⁰, hondæ 20¹⁰; acc. hond 10²⁵. The plural endings are the same as those of the ō-declension: nom. acc. handæn 10²⁷, honden 6¹¹, hondæ 12⁴, honde 12¹⁶; gen. handæ 12⁸; dat. handan 8²⁵, honden 18¹⁷.

(e) The weak or n-declension.

The nom. sg. masc. generally ends in -æ, less frequently in -e. The old -a is only preserved once: willa 14¹. The nom. sg. fem. ends in -e. The other cases have -an, -æn, -en, rarely -on, or with the loss of the n, simply æ, e. In the oblique cases of the singular the n is generally dropped, the instances without n outnumbering those with n in the proportion of three to one. In the plural the n is in all cases preserved, but that is perhaps accidental, the instances being so few.

Sing., nom. heretogæ 26⁵, nome 18¹³; gen. dropæn 20²⁴; dat. sidan 2¹⁰, reoſtæn 20⁴, luſen 20²⁰, lichame 20¹⁴; acc. eorpan 12³, willen 6²³, timæ 22¹⁹, nome 30⁷.

Plural, nom. acc. sigelharwon 16¹⁷, anwliten 18¹⁹; dat. wurhtan 22¹⁹, eagen 6²⁶.

(f) Of the other declensions isolated forms occur, which agree with the OE.: fæder 24⁷ (gen. sg.), modra 18²⁴ (nom. plur.), nih̄t 2⁷, 4²¹ (acc. plur.), burh 4²⁹ (dat. sg., u = i), þruh 30¹² (dat. sg., u = ü), &c.

(g) The OE. genders are preserved, the only exception which I have noted being þæt ferd 2¹⁸, 2²⁰, 4³¹, 20⁹, besides the correct ðare ferde 4¹⁷, 20¹¹, and þeo fyrd 4² (cf. § 15, b).

§ 14. Declension of Adjectives.

(a) Strong adjectives.

The inflections of the strong adjectives agree with the OE., except for the not unfrequent weakening of the unaccented vowels.

One marked deviation is that in the dative sg. fem. the r of the ending is frequently dropped: e.g. lude 4¹⁶, ðine 8¹⁷, mycele 10³⁰, 12⁹, mine 16⁸, ece 26²⁷, nane 30²⁵, &c., &c., besides ludre 16², þinre 12¹⁶, &c. The same tendency to drop the r we also meet with in the gen. plur.: seolfren̄e 22¹³, agen̄e 4³², besides iudeiscr̄e 24²⁷, &c.

In the acc. sg. masc. n is sometimes written for nn: þine 30⁷. On nn for n in the nom. plur., cf. § 12.

The ending of the dat. plur. exhibits the same variations as in the case of the substantives (-um, -on, -an, -æ, e): diglum 8⁹, allon 30²⁸, þullican 18¹⁹, ealle 26², &c.

Isolated forms occur without any ending: ðin 10¹⁶ (acc. sg. fem.), incer 18³ (acc. plur.), mucel 22³⁰ (acc. sg. masc.). þine 12¹⁹ is miswritten for þin, and swiðne 28²⁶ (adverb) for swiðe.

(b) Weak adjectives.

The endings are the same as the corresponding endings of the substantives of the n-declension, except that for the gen. plur. the strong form is used: iudeiscr̄e 28²⁵, haligr̄e 18¹². The final n is frequently dropped both in the singular and in the plural.

A noticeable feature is that adjectives ending in -ig tend to drop the inflection: e.g. unselig 24⁷ (nom. sg. masc.), halig 34⁷ (nom.

sg. fem.), 24²⁴ (nom. sg. neut.), 24²⁰ (acc. sg. neut.), eadig 28¹² (acc. sg. masc.), &c. The form mycel 10²⁸ (acc. fem. sg.) is also without any ending.

§ 15. Pronouns.

(a) Personal pronouns.

The most noticeable feature is that in the pronoun of the 3rd person the dative has entirely replaced the accusative both in the feminine singular and in the plural of all genders, whilst in the case of the masculine singular, the accusative hine is still kept quite distinct from the dative him.

The forms in use are :—

Masc., nom. he, gen. his, dat. him, acc. hine.

Fem., nom. heo, gen., dat., acc. hire.

Neut., nom., acc. hit, gen. his 6²⁷, 26¹¹.

Plural, nom. heo, gen. heora (-æ, -e), dat., acc. heom.

The hī in the text, 32²⁹, ought to have been expanded to hine, not to him, cf. 32²⁸ upon ðene deaden. Similarly heō 32⁷ ought perhaps to be read heoræ, not heom, cf. 26¹¹.

(b) The definite article.

The OE. inflections are preserved, se, seo being replaced by þe, þeo. The old se only occurs three times: 12²³, 18¹⁴, 34²².

The uninflected þe is used once as acc. sg. masc. (4³⁰), and once as acc. sg. fem. (32⁹). The dat. sg. masc. þa 4²⁹ is merely a slip for þā, and þan 12²⁹ is miswritten for þa. The nom. fem. form þeo does duty once (32²⁷) for the acc. sg. fem. instead of the usual þa. The dat. sg. fem. is þare, rarely þære; the acc. sg. masc. þone (once written ðonne 26³²), rarely þene. The gen. plur. appears as þare, -æ.

The form þæt 4²⁵, which, on account of the of and the following watere, must be regarded as a dative, is, if not a mere scribal error, an early instance of the extension of the use of þæt to other cases than the nom. and acc. Similarly the three instances of þæt (nom. acc. sg.) in conjunction with the fem. subst. ferd (cf. § 13, g) are possibly early examples of the extension of the use of þæt to other genders.

(c) The demonstrative pronoun, ðes, ðeos, ðis.

The forms of this pronoun are the same as in OE., allowance, of course, being made for the occasional weakening of unaccented vowels (e.g. ðissan 20⁴, þissæn 30⁵, besides ðissum 10⁹; and ðisse (gen. plur.) 4¹⁹, &c.).

The points which call for special mention are the acc. sg. masc. þæsne 16⁴, 30⁵, by the side of þisne 12¹⁵, &c., and the acc. plural þæs 16²⁹, 26²⁵, 28¹³, by the side of þas 10¹⁶, &c.

§ 16. The Verb.

Except for the not unfrequent weakening of the unaccented vowels (cf. § 11) the verb exhibits scarcely any deviation from the OE. usage.

The following are the only points worthy of special mention. The pret. plural and past partic. of seon appear as isegen 18¹⁷, 26⁶, 10¹⁰, 10²², &c., forms which in the twelfth century had replaced the West Saxon sāwon, sewen in the South (cf. Anglia, x. 134).

Note also the forms durste 26¹¹, 28¹⁶, 32⁷, and am 6⁷, which have taken the place of the WS. dorste, eom. Both these forms are common in the early ME. of the South.

§ 17. The Prepositions.

With isolated exceptions the cases governed by the prepositions are the same as in OE. Such exceptions are:—

- (i) of þæt ylce watere 4²⁵.
- (ii) innan þam tempel 24²⁵ (cf. 32⁶, 32¹⁶).
- (iii) on ðone ilce dæge 34².
- (iv) from drihten 14⁴ (cf. 4⁷, &c.).
- (v) to *Moyse*s 10¹⁸ (cf. 6³¹, 10⁸).
- (vi) ðurh . . . mægne 18¹³.
- (vii) buton ða earmæs 10²⁷.
- (viii) to heoræ wærcæs 18¹⁸.

On (i) cf. § 15, b. The forms tempel (ii), drihten (iv), moyses (v) are perhaps mere slips for temple, drihtine, moyses. Mægne (vi) is probably not dat. sg., but acc. plur., as in 16⁶. In writing dæge (iii) the scribe was obviously hesitating between two constructions, for he uses both acc. and dat. after on, cf. 14¹¹, 14¹³ (dat.), and 4²², 24²³ (acc.). The last two instances (as perhaps also iv) are interesting as being early examples of the tendency to substitute the accusative for the dative as the case governed by prepositions, the result of which was the loss of the old dative plural in -e(n), its place being taken by the -es of the nominative and accusative¹.

§ 18. Dialect.

A glance at the preceding paragraphs will suffice to show that, with a few modifications due to the later date, the language of the Rood-tree is pure West Saxon. All the peculiarities of that dialect are to be found in it, whilst those of Kentish and Mercian are absent. Only to instance one or two points: the occurrence of ea before l + consonant, and before h, ht, x, as well as the absence of the u- (o-) umlaut of a preclude Mercian origin, whilst the æ for OE. (WS.) æ, ǣ, and the absence of any trace of e as the representative of WS. y, show that it was not written in Kent. The preponderance of y (i) as the umlaut of ea, ēa, eo, ēo speaks for the West Saxon district, as also do the frequently occurring forms—cniht, riht, six, miht, niht, weorc, &c. (never the Mercian spellings cneht, reht, sex, mæht, werc). The exclusive use of the form on as preposition, the form in only occurring as an adverb, furnishes additional confirmation of West Saxon as opposed to Mercian origin (cf. Anglia, x. 139, and also E. M. Brown, Language of the Rushworth Gloss to Matthew, Göttingen, 1892, p. 91). If further proof were needed, it is afforded by the use of u in place of OE. y as the umlaut of u, as well as in other cases (ihurde, &c.).

¹ Isolated instances of a similar nature occur in the twelfth century Kentish gospels (MSS. Royal 1 A. xiv, and Hatton 38): Matth. xxvi. 14 to þare sacerdra ealdres; Luke xi. 11, for fissces; Luke xii. 8, beforen godes ængles. Cf. also R. Maack, Die Flexion des engl. Substantivs von 1100 bis etwa 1250. Hamburg, 1889, pp. 13 ff.

That we sometimes find the Mercian e by the side of the W.S. y (as umlaut of ea, ēa) cannot be urged in disproof of this view, as forms with e are common in other southern writings of the twelfth and early thirteenth century. And the same holds good of forms like isegen, durstē, am, &c. (cf. § 16). In Late West Saxon a was, it is true, regularly written before nasals, but in Early ME. the o's began again to preponderate in southern writings; hence the frequent occurrence of o in the Rood-tree.

§ 19. Is the Rood-tree copied from an OE. original?

There still remains one point to be cleared up: is the existing version of the Rood-tree a twelfth century translation from the Latin source, or is it, like most, if not all, of the other homilies in MS. Bodl. 343, a copy of an eleventh century OE. version?

This question it is not easy to answer with certainty. The fact that most of the other pieces in the MS. are undoubtedly transcripts of OE. originals, might make one incline to the latter alternative; whilst on the other hand, the existence of such an OE. version in the first half of the eleventh century would presuppose a fully developed cross-legend as early as the beginning of that century—a very much earlier date than has hitherto been assumed.

In spite of this last consideration, I am inclined to think that the existing Rood-tree is a copy of an OE. version, written probably in the first half of the eleventh century. The language seems to me to be too archaic for a production of the twelfth century. A scribe of that period, however well practised in copying OE. MSS., could scarcely have reproduced the older language with such a degree of accuracy. Some slight modification of the vowel system and a partial weakening of the unaccented vowels has taken place, but the old forms are constantly recurring, and a very large proportion of the full vowels, which were certainly no longer pronounced in the middle of the twelfth century, are still preserved, and are almost invariably correctly used¹, which, I think, would have been absolutely impossible for a scribe of the twelfth century to have done. Moreover, if the existing Rood-tree were a product of the twelfth century, a comparison of it with those portions of the MS. which are certainly copied from OE. originals would inevitably reveal differences in the language between the two. But that is not the case. I have compared the Rood-tree with some other homilies in the MS., transcripts of existing OE. originals, and have failed to detect any difference whatever in the language. Hence I feel driven to the conclusion that the Rood-tree is a copy of an eleventh century English original.

That the Rood-tree, or rather the OE. version of which it is a copy, is a translation from a Latin original, is obvious. In § 9 I have already quoted some forms which show it. Other forms taken over unaltered from the Latin source, which serve as further proof, are: quinginta finicas 2⁶, 10⁴; montem oliueti 20²³; carcerem 26²²; constantinopolim 32²²; ciriacum 34¹; alexandriam 34⁴; iudas (nom.) 34⁷, iudam (acc.) 32³³. Note, too, that in the nominative and vocative the form helena is used (32⁸, 34¹⁰), whilst the dative is spelt helencæ 34⁸, -e 32³³.

¹ The few isolated exceptions: icwædon (past partic.) 16⁵, 28¹, iholpan 30²¹, iswungon 28⁵, are of no weight against this, as similar instances are found in parts of MS.

Bodley 343, which we know to be copied from OE. originals. Cf. Assmann, Angelsächsische Homilien, Kassel, 1889, p. 121, l. 129, icwædon for icweden, &c.

THE HOLY ROOD-TREE

MODERN RENDERING.

HERE begins to be told concerning the tree of which the rood was wrought on which our lord suffered for the salvation of all mankind, how it first began to grow. We heard it told by a certain wise man that Moses, when he went from Egypt over the Red Sea with the Israelitish people, when he delivered them from the captivity under Pharoah, came to the place which is named Quinquaginta Finicas, and there rested for two nights. During the first night he rested there, on the selfsame spot on which he lay, there grew three rods; the one was at his head, a second at his right side, a third at his left. In the morning when he arose 10 thence, he wondered what the signification of the rods might be. The second night he did not dare to rest there on account of the marvel which he had seen there, but he moved from thence above a mile, and prepared his restingplace there, and rested during the night there. In the morning when he awoke, the same rods were 15 standing round him just as they had done in the first night. When he saw that, he prophesied and said, 'Of a truth these rods betoken the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost.' Then he sent all the host away, and himself remained there until the ninth hour of the day, and dug up the rods. And he himself took them 20 away; and all the host that was with him proceeded on their way for a day and a night without finding water. On the next evening after this, they came to the place which is named Delemia. There they found thirty springs, the bitterness of which was so great that neither man nor beast could drink the water. That night when they came to the camp, the host that was with him [Moses] was sorely afflicted with thirst, so that they all cried out to him with one voice, and said that they must entirely perish, unless he would assuage their thirst for them; or else [i.e. if he would not] that he should die by their hands. Then he answered them and bade them wait for a short time, until he had prayed to his lord that He, for His mercy's sake, would assuage their thirst that night. Then it came suddenly into his thought that he would take the three rods and place them in the springs; and he said 10 'in his thought that, if it were true that the rods had been sent by God, through their power the bitterness of the water would be changed that night to sweetness. As soon as he had put them therein, he took the water and washed his face with it and put some in his mouth. As soon as he tasted the sweetness of the 15 water, he became exceedingly joyful in his mind, and with a loud voice called to the host, and thus spoke: 'Come hither to me, and assuage your thirst with this holy water which our Lord, by the power of these rods, hath this night changed from bitterness to sweetness.' When they heard that, they were greatly rejoiced, 20 and eagerly hurried thither, and remained there three days and three nights. Then on the fourth day, when they wished to move on from thence, Moses went to the spring in which he had placed the rods, and drew them up, and took them with him. He had a vessel made for that purpose alone, and it was filled with the 25 same water; and the rods were put in it, because he would not that the roots should be dried up. Then they filled all the vessels that they had with them on their journey, with the water, and took them away with them. They had then still a three days' journey before they came to Arabia. Then on the fourth day they 30 came thither into the town which is named Droh, and dwelt there two days. On the third day Moses went from the town, and left the host there, and took with him three hundred of his own men, and proceeded forth on his way until he came to the place which is called Robathi, in which king Nebucadnezzar was born; and 35 there he [Moses] would remain until David came to him. David had an eight days' journey from Jerusalem to the place in which Moses was. When they came together, they remained together for six days. In the seventh night God's angel came to him [David] and greeted him, and named him thrice by his name, and spoke thus, 'David, David, David.' Then David answered him and spoke thus, 'Who art thou, dear Sir, that calledst me at this time?' Then answered him the angel and said, 'I am God's angel, and I am come to announce to thee what my lord ordered me.' Then David answered him and said, 'May my lord's will and thine be fulfilled.' Then said the angel to him, 'Arise in the early morning, and wash thy hands and thy face, and go to Moses where he is resting, and greet him with words, and speak thus: 'Be of good cheer, dear father Moses.' Then he did as the angel bade him. Then Moses answered him, 'Lo, David, what is thy so great desire that thou hast come thus early?' Then answered him David and spoke: 'Lo, Moses, if it be God's will in the first place, and thine afterwards, by the friendship that exists between us I would desire of thee a boon. For the love of almighty God, do not make me sad.' Then said Moses, 'By the almighty lord, on whom we believe, and for the friendship that exists between us, if I have any of the gifts which thou desirest, I will not make thee sad; and if I have it not in my power, I will not hesitate, either for gold or for silver, to perform thy will.' Then answered him David and said, 'Lo, father Moses, I desire neither gold nor silver, but I would fain, if it were God's will and I were worthy of it, be permitted to see with my eyes that which I would ask of thee. Now I beg thee by almighty God, that thou grant me this.' Then answered him Moses and said, 'Thy will be accomplished.' Eight days after that, they desired to go from the place in which they were, and they made themselves ready for so doing, and David went to Moses and they conversed together. Then said Moses to David, 'Lo, David, methinks thou art much saddened on account of the request which thou didst intend to ask of me.' Then said David, 'Lo, father Moses, my Lord knoweth the gift that I would ask of thee, for to me it is as yet unknown what thing it is.' When he had spoken this word, Moses called to him one of his servants, who was named Robii. He was so very dear and faithful to him that he had power over all the things he possessed. And he ordered him to call David to him, and to show him all the things and the treasures that Moses possessed. But by no means was he ever to show him the rods. 5 Then the servant did as Moses had commanded him. When he [David] had seen it all, he said that he desired none of those things which he saw there. Then the servant spoke to David with secret words and said thus: 'If I knew, Sir, that thou wouldest keep [secret] my words, and wouldest not betray me 10 to my master, I would further show thee something which he strictly forbade me to show thee.' Then said David that he would never betray him, but that it would be a great joy to him if he might be permitted to see it. Then the servant answered him and said, 'I know, Sir, that ye have much love of God, and great 15 friendship between you. Nevertheless, for the fear of God, and on account of thy worshipfulness, I do not dare to refrain from showing and telling it you.' Then said David, 'What thing may this be of such great excellence, which thou hast promised to show me, now that I have already seen all the glorious things that were 20 under thy guardianship? Yet I did not see in the multitude [of them] that which I desired to be allowed to see.' Then said the servant, 'If thou seest that which I before promised thee, it will please thee above all the things which thou didst see before.' Then said David, 'Do not sadden me further, but by the almighty 25 God, I beg thee to show it me now.' Then the servant took him by his hands and kissed them, and thus spoke: 'Lo, father David, be thou mindful of me.' And they both went in, and he showed them [the rods] to him very secretly.' As soon as they looked on the rods, it came upon them suddenly where they stood, during 30 one hour of the day, that neither of them could utter a word. When that had passed over, David said to the servant, 'How came upon thee so great a silence at this time that thou spakest no word to me?' Then answered him the servant and said, 'Lo, father David, it seemed to me that my power of speech fell away 35 from me during that time.' Then said David that it had seemed to him even so. When it had passed over, he said, 'I pray thee now by the almighty Lord, that thou tell me in what place Moses was when he first found the rods.' Then he answered him and said, 'In the place which is called Quinquaginta Finicas, there we found them.' As soon as David heard that, he fell on his knees 5 and prayed to his Lord, and spoke thus: 'Lord, who didst make heaven and earth and all the things that are in them, reveal to me concerning the request which the angel bade me to desire of Moses, whether it be this sight which I have here seen in these rods. If it be that, send me some revelation through them.' When 10 he had thus prayed, God's angel came to him and raised him up, and thus spoke: 'Arise and behold this marvel which has been wrought on these rods.' When he rose up, he saw the three rods burning as though three tapers were burning there. Then he fell a second time on his knees, and cried to his Lord and spoke 15 thus: 'Lord, of thy mercy reveal to me whether I may get these rods.' Then there came to him a voice from heaven, and spoke to him thus, 'Arise, David, and go to Moses and ask for these rods, for, truly, thy Lord gives them thee.' Then David did as the voice commanded him, and went to Moses, and said to him, 'Dear 20 father Moses, I desire that thou give me that which I saw to-day, where thou wast within.' Then Moses was silent, and thought in his mind that he had seen the rods. He ordered the servant to be called to him to whom he had entrusted the rods, and commanded him to take the rods and convey them secretly from 25 thence. The servant did as he bade him. As he was about to take them in his hands, they suddenly became all fiery so that the servant's hands were entirely burnt except his arms. Then he went hastily to them [Moses and David], where they were within, and showed them the great punishment which God had 30 sent upon him through the rods. As soon as they looked thereon, they were moved with a great fear and with great sadness, and they all cried with a loud voice to their Lord and begged for his mercy. Then Moses called to the servant and asked him [or adjured him to tell him] how this had happened to him. Then 35 he answered him and said, 'Lo, father Moses, just as I was about to grasp the rods and take them away, as thou didst command me, they suddenly became all fiery, and there came upon me so great a fear on account of the awful sight which I saw there, that I fell on the ground and could see nothing. When I rose up again, both my hands were burnt by the fire which I saw 5 there. Then was Moses greatly troubled, and thus spoke: 'Of a truth, I sinned greatly against my Lord by the command which I gave thee, and it is through my guilt that thou art deprived of thy hands.' Then Moses prostrated himself on the ground, and with much contrition prayed to his Lord and thus spoke: 'Lord, 10 beloved father of me and of all mankind, thou that didst send me to the land of Egypt—and I led thy people for forty years as thou didst will it—thou that didst cause the Red Sea to dry up when we were to pass over it, to the end that thou wouldest preserve us, thou, beloved Lord, didst on that journey send to me 15 the three rods, as was thy will, and I ever carried them with me until this day; and now, beloved Lord, my servant's hands have been burnt up by them. Now, dear Lord, for thy great mercy, reveal to me whether thou wilt grant them to me longer; if thou wilt not grant them to me longer, thy will be done.' Then came 20 to him God's [angel] and said, 'Lo, Moses, that which thou desirest the Lord will no longer grant thee, for the reason that from the beginning when thou didst first see . . . God's angel came to Jerusalem to make them [the rods] known to David, and by his prayers thy servant shall be healed.' And the angel departed 25 from him. And David very fervently continued in his prayers, and prayed thus to his Lord and said, 'Dear Lord, thou glorious king, thou that didst send to Jerusalem to make known to me by thy holy angel what the request was that I should ask of Moses, and didst, of thy mercy, open the servant's heart that he secretly 30 showed me the rods, and I at that time saw a great light [proceeding] therefrom, and my power of speech was taken from me at that hour, as was thy will. Now, beloved Lord, of thy mercy reveal to me whether I may be worthy of them. And if it be thy gracious will, send health to the servant.' Then there came to him a voice from heaven, and called him by his name and spoke thus: 'David, David, arise! thy weeping and thy prayers have been heard by the Lord; and all the things are granted thee which thou didst ask of 5 him. And go now to Moses and beg for his blessing, and then take the rods and bear them away with thee with God's blessing, and guard them with great honour, because by them all the world shall be illumined.' Then David did as the voice commanded him, and proceeded on his way, praising God with great joy, and 10 thus saying, 'Glory be to thee, Lord, for the joy which thou hast bestowed upon me!' And he then journeyed for six days; then on the seventh day he came to the town in which he himself was born, which is called Animeni, and there remained for eight days. Then on the ninth day Roxilus sent his messengers to him from the 15 city which is called Iobel, and ordered them to make known to him that he was very ill, and to beg him to visit him on account of his illness. Then David did as he [Roxilus] had bade them ask him, and quickly went to him and visited him. When he came to him, he saw how sorely he was afflicted with the swelling, so that 20 he could see nothing, but his body was all distended. Then David was moved with much weeping, and greeted him with words and thus spoke, 'Lo, dear father Roxilus, be not thou too sorely grieved on account of this sickness, but rejoice in thy Lord.' Then answered Roxilus and said, 'Lo, thou dear friend, I entreat thee by God 25 himself to take charge of my son and the possessions which I leave him, because I shall now die, and on account of this sickness can no longer be a help to him.' Then David at once sent his three servants to seek whether they could hear of some man who could heal him. Whilst he was about doing this, there came to him a 30 voice from heaven thus saying, 'David, there is no need for thee to trouble about this, thou hast that with thee with which thou canst help him; take water from the same pit from which he previously drank, when he was made ill by the drink, and put the rods therein and let him afterwards drink it and he will soon be whole.' 35 Then David did as the voice bade him, washed the rods therein, and he [Roxilus] drank it, and the sickness all passed away. When David saw that, he praised his Lord with a loud voice and thus spoke, 'Glory be to thee, O Lord, and praise, that thou by thy mercy and the power of these rods hast healed this man.' When he had thus spoken, the voice again spoke to him, 'Lo, David, 5 evilly didst thou speak in ascribing the holy power to the rods.' When he heard that he was much afraid and spoke thus, 'Lo, beloved Lord, I sinned greatly in that, on account of my ignorance, I did not know but that it was as I had seen. I know however that by them [i.e. the rods] many wonders have been wrought. 10 But for thy great mercy reveal to me what they betoken.' Then the voice came to him again and said, 'David, they betoken the Holy Trinity. The cypress signifies the Father. The Cedar signifies the Son. The pine signifies the Holy Ghost.' When David heard that, he was greatly rejoiced, and with much joy and glad- 15 ness betook himself homewards. And on the morrow after this he would fain go to Jerusalem. When he was mid way, there met him two Ethiopians. As soon as they approached him and looked on the rods, they cried out and spoke thus, 'Great are the powers which thou bearest with thee. In God's name we entreat thee to 20 allow us to touch them and pray to them.' Then David cried out and said, 'It is not befitting for me to allow you that; but if the merciful God will permit it, and ye are worthy of it, his will be done.' As soon as he had said that, his arm was so powerfully drawn out towards them that he by no means could draw it [back] 25 to himself; and they hastened towards it and touched the holy rods and prayed to them. When they had risen up again, all their blackness was turned to whiteness. Then all the multitude that was with him cried out and thus spoke, 'Lo, O Lord, great are the wonders and the marvels which thou hast shown to men through 30 these rods.' And they [the Ethiopians] wondered between themselves that it had so befallen them that neither of them could recognize the other. Then they begged David, for the love of God, to go with them to their houses, and remain with them for the night. David said, 'It is not befitting for me to deny you that which you ask of me, because of the wonder which I have seen, which God Almighty has wrought in consequence of your prayer.' And he then proceeded forth with them. When they came to their houses and went in, their wives came out to meet them and 5 wondered what the company was that had come thither. Then they cried out thus and said, 'Who are ye, or whence do ye come?' Their own husbands answered them and thus spoke, 'How, do ye not know who we are?' Their wives answered them and said that they ought to know their voices, but that they could not at all 10 recognize their faces. Then they answered and spoke thus, 'We have brought hither [the man] through whom and through the power of the holy rods which he has with him, God Almighty has thus changed our faces, whose name is David. He, for God's love, will remain with us for the night. Then may ye see and truly 15 believe that we are the same whom ye knew formerly. When it was evening and David came thither, when he went in and bore in the rods in his hands, when the women saw that, they said to their husbands, 'Why do ye not now make known to us the wonders which changed your faces to such [as they are now].' Then David 20 showed them the rods. When they looked thereon they hastened towards them, and their two sons, and would fain ask for the same [boon], and they prayed to them. When they turned away from them again the two youths became of as fair complexion as their fathers, and the mothers were as black as they had been before. 25 Then they cried out and said, 'Now it is manifest who erewhile wrought God's will.' And he then dwelt the night there, and on the morrow went to the river Jordan. When they came thither they had no ships to cross in. Then David called to his company and bade them alight from horseback, and wait until ships came to 30 them in which they might cross. And they all did so except David alone. He could by no means do so. Then there came to him a voice from heaven and said to him, 'David, there is no need for thee to wait here for a means of crossing, but thou mayest without doubting cross over with thy company whithersoever thy desire 35 is.' And he then with great joy crossed over the river. When he was in the middle of the river, there beheld him a leper who had been dwelling in a cave on the mountain for a hundred and sixty years. Then he prophesied and thus spoke, 'Now to-day there cometh to me he that will heal me of this leprosy, that is, the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost.' When he [David] had 5 passed over the river, he wished to continue on his journey to Jerusalem, but the horse on which he was riding would by no means go along the right road, but the hand with which he was holding the rods, was stretched out towards the cave. Then David went to the cave, and all the company that was with him. When he was 10 nearly at the door of the cave, the rods, which he was holding in his hand, emitted such great flames that, in the sight of all the company, they penetrated into the cave; and then the fire took hold, first, of the leper's feet, and so on, over his whole body, so that the leprosy which he had in his body was burnt up before them all, and 15 he arose as whole and sound as though he had never had any infirmity. And he went out from thence with joy, and prostrated himself before the rods, and prayed fervently to them. When he had risen up, he called to David and said thus, 'I entreat thee in the name of God Almighty, that thou wilt allow me, together with 20 thee, to accompany the holy power which, through God's help, has healed me. And he [David] for the love of God ordered [a horse] to be found for him on which he might travel. And they then went from thence and came in the evening to Jerusalem. Now David had a garden which was midway between Gethsemane and 25 mount Olivet. There was there, outside the garden, a waterpit which was so bitter that no one could taste a drop of it. Then David cried out, and said that he wished the rods to be placed in the pit for the night, and that he would put them in his garden on the morrow. When the leper who had been healed heard that he 30 intended to do that, he ran towards them [the rods] and received the rods from David, and placed them in the pit, and prayed at that time and said, 'Lord, Thou merciful God, if it is Thy will, make known Thy might and Thy wonders through these holy powers in this place as Thou didst within the cave, where I lay for 35 many years lame on my couch, that men may believe that the wonders have truly been manifested by Thee.' And they then departed from thence. On the morrow, when they again came thither and would have taken the rods, no man could move them from the spot. When David perceived that they would by no means [be moved] from the spot, he ordered the pit to be enclosed within his garden. Twelve months later, on that very day, they had grown together, and had grown one ell in length and another in thickness, and above they had grown into three separate [branches], as it were, three finger lengths, each after its kind. When David saw that, he had a silver hoop, of thirty pounds, made and forged round the tree beneath where it separated into three [branches]. And thus it grew for thirty years, each year one ell in length and another in thickness, and above it was always divided as we said before, and as many years as it was growing there, so many silver hoops he put round it, and each of them was of thirty pounds. David lived seven hundred winters from the day on which he had the rods placed in the well. After his death, Solomon succeeded to the kingdom, and he then, during a space of forty years, caused the great temple to be built which has ever since been called Solomon's temple. When it was time to put up the beams [into their places], the workmen who were engaged on the work were in want of a beam, and they could not find one that was suitable in all his kingdom. Then the oldest craftsmen went into the garden which was David's, to the holy tree which he had placed in the well, and took their measure with them and measured the tree. When they came to the temple they applied the measure to the other beams, and it was one fathom longer than the others. Then they went in to the king, and told him that in all his kingdom they could find no such tree as would be fitting, unless they were allowed to take that. Then said Solomon that he would by no means consent, for the reason that his father had had it placed there, and he himself felt great awe and affection for it. 'But try still further whether ye can find it [a suitable tree] in any other place.' And they did so, and were seven days in the search, but they could not find it. Then they came again to the king, and made known to him that they could find it nowhere else, unless they were allowed to take that one [in David's garden]. Then he bade them go and cut it down, and bring him the silver with which it was encircled. They did so, cut down the tree to the ground and hewed it on the same spot, and bore it into the temple, and brought him the silver. And he took the thirty silver hoops, and had them made into thirty 5 plates, and hung in the temple for his father's soul. That was the same silver for which the wretched Judas betrayed our Lord to death. When the tree had been brought into the temple, the same [workmen] went to it that had formerly measured it, and applied the same measure to it. When it was laid down there, it was two 10 fathoms longer than the measure was. Then they were sorely afraid, and made it known to the king. And the king went thither in haste, wishing to know what of it [i. e. of their report] was true. When he saw it, he was stirred with exceeding wrath, and said that they were worthy of death for having, by their lying, brought him to 15 this. Then he ordered it to be raised to the place where it was to go. When it was put there, it was two fathoms shorter than the others. When he saw that, he was much afraid, and ordered them to bring it down and lay it in the temple, and he sorely repented having sinned so greatly with respect to the holy tree. He bade them 20 then go out again, and try whether God Almighty would send them any other. And they did so. On the same day they soon found all that they wanted, and brought it to him, and they then took it where it was to be placed, and the holy tree lay always within the temple until the time came when our Lord would suffer. 25 And many miracles were wrought therein by the holy tree. It happened on a time that a hundred Jewish men went thither, and wished to take the tree and to bear it to the priest's house, whose name was Cericus. He was at that time much occupied with his building, and had resolved to use that same tree for it. But 30 none of them could move it from the spot; then he grew angry with them, and said that it was their lying, and himself went thither and bade them bring with him as many axes as they could get, and he himself took hold of it [the tree], and they tried to lift it out of the temple. But none of them could move it. Then he bade them go to it with their axes, and cut it into three pieces. Then it became as hard as though it were of steel, and the strokes of the axes turned against the faces of those who were to cut it. Then 5 suddenly, whilst they were all looking on, fire started out on three sides of the tree, and burnt sixty of the men who were trying to cut it, and the priest with them, who was their leader. The others, for the great terror which they beheld there, ran out. When they came out from thence, they and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem 10 saw that the fire which went up from the temple was at least forty fathoms high; and all that were in the city, in Jerusalem, fled with great fear, on account of the great terror which they beheld there. From that day there was no man so daring that he durst touch it. Thither came once a certain meretrix, and seated herself thought- 15 lessly upon it. Suddenly she was all on fire behind, both the garment she had on, and her body all behind. Then she sprang up, and with a loud voice cried out, and thus prophesied and said, 'Lo, thou blessed tree, on which the Saviour of all the world shall hang!' When the Jewish priests heard that, they took her and beat 20 her sorely, and tortured her with extreme torture, and they wished to learn from her what she meant by naming Christ. She answered and said that she could not tell, and that she knew nothing but that these words had come to her mouth. They then took her and put her into prison, and shut her in there and departed. In the night 25 God's angel came to her, and called her by her name, and thus spoke to her, 'Sibilla, be thou comforted, and dread not these tortures, for they are prepared for thee [as a means] to great bliss; and because they have beaten and tortured thy body, thy soul shall come to everlasting rest. On the morrow when they again came 30 to the prison and led her out, they called to her and said thus: 'Thou harlot, tell us what that word signifies, or who it was led thee thus exultingly to cry out.' Then she answered and thus spoke: 'I tell you no more now than I told you before, but that I know of a truth that whilst I was suffering the burning therein [i. e. in the temple] for my sins, as it was God's will, as soon as I had spoken that word, my body was healed. Now inflict on my body what tortures ye please, for all that ye cannot touch my soul.' Then 5 they took her and beat her with sharper strokes, until her body was so severely beaten as though it had been cut with knives. Thus they beat her with severe scourging daily for six days, and then in the evening shut her in the prison; and in the morning, when they led her out from thence, she went out whole and sound. Five nights 10 after this, God's angel came to her a second time and spoke to her, 'Sibilla, thou wast formerly a meretrix in this world, but now thou art a chosen one of God; thou wert formerly called Sibilla, thou art now named Susanna. Now on this day thou shalt receive the blessed crown of glory which thou hast merited by these tortures; 15 and whatsoever thou askest of God, thou shalt receive.' Then she answered the angel and thus spoke: 'One boon, Sir, I would fain ask,—if I be worthy to dare to ask it—that our Lord should grant me, if it be his merciful will: [namely] that when the time shall come when he shall suffer, I might be allowed to look upon the 20 holy rood.' Then the angel answered her and said thus: 'It shall be as thou askest.' And the angel then departed from her. Soon, at dawn of day, there came to her the same that had tortured her, and led her out of the prison. As soon as she came out, she cried and said thus: 'Now is it the time that ye must straightway end your 25 tortures.' As soon as she had spoken that word, God's angels came and took her soul from her body, and bore it with them. One of the Jewish men hastened up to her and struck off her head with his sword; and then they kindled there a very large fire, and intended to take the body and burn it to dust. Now there was 30 amongst the crowd of people a very wealthy lady. As soon as she heard that they purposed doing that, she approached with all the people she had with her, and took the body from them by force, and had it borne away with her, and buried honourably in a stone coffin within her own house. The Jews then held a great meeting 35 amongst themselves, and determined that they would burn down the lady's house. Three days afterwards, they all came to the lady's house, and threateningly demanded that they should give up the body. Unless she did so, [they threatened] that they would burn her and all that she had. When the lady heard that, she went in secret and prayed to the Lord and thus said: 'Dear Lord, 5 Thou didst permit these wretched ones sorely to torture and burn this body whilst she lived, on account of one word, [namely] that she foretold Thy holy name. If Thou wilt permit them to illtreat this body still longer, Thy will be done. But if it be not Thy will, for Thy mercy's sake make known this day Thy glory on them.' 10 As soon as she had thus prayed, whilst all were looking on, the building in which the holy corpse was buried took fire within from the coffin in which she lay, and the fire started out on every side, so that they believed nought else, but that they would all be consumed by the fire, and they fled from thence greatly terrified. 15 As soon as they had departed, the fire was quenched. The lady then went in at once, and called her son to her, and thus spoke to him: 'Lo, my son, great are the wonders that have been wrought here to-day! Now I beg thee that thou never become heedless of that which thou hast seen [lit. of this sight], but hold it fast in thy 20 memory, for the reason that this miracle has been performed by the holy tree which was brought into Solomon's temple; and by it all the world shall be helped.' And she ordered a church to be erected over the coffin in which the body rested. Sixty years after this had happened, our Lord suffered, when He was thirty years old. When 25 the time had come that the wicked Jews wished to crucify Him, they could in no place find such a tree as they would fain crucify Him on. Then one of them cried out and said that in Solomon's temple there was a tree which he thought would be suitable thereto. Then Caiaphas called out over them all, and chose from them all 30 three hundred men, and commanded them that they should go thither and fetch him the tree. When they came thither, none of them could move it. Then some of them went back to him, and made this known to him. He ordered them to go and cut it into three pieces, but they could by no means do so. Then they agreed 35 among themselves that they would measure ten ells of the tree and cut that [length] off, and they did so. The [remaining] two parts they could not by any means cut. The ten ells they cut into two pieces and, in that same temple, hewed it all [i. e. the ten ells] into shape, and made the cross of it, and our Lord himself afterwards bore it out of the temple. This was all done on the same Friday 5 on which he suffered. The [remaining] two parts of the holy tree remained always within the temple, and no man dared to touch them. Then, 330 years after, Saint Helena came to Jerusalem and sought for the holy rood. When she had found the holy rood, as it was Almighty God's providence, she went into the temple and saw 10 the tree. Then she asked what it was and whence it came. They told her that it was left from the holy rood [i. e. that it was the portion left after the wood for the holy rood had been cut off], and she then earnestly meditated what she ought to do with it. In the same night when she was on her couch, there came to her a 15 voice in such wise that it seemed to her to be God's angel, and it named her by her name, and it seemed to her that she was inside the temple; and then the angel bade her cut the holy tree into four parts, and measure the four parts so that each should be ten ells long, and he bade her send the four parts to the four quarters 20 of this earth. On the morrow she did as the angel commanded her, and ordered the holy tree to be carried with her thence to Constantinople with great honour, and the holy rood as well. As soon as she came within the city of Constantinople, a dead man was borne towards her. Then she bade the people wait for a short time 25 —for she had also the other cross on which the robber was crucified —then she meditated in her mind on which of the two Christ was crucified. Then she first took the cross on which the robber had hung, and laid it upon the dead man; and he still lay [dead] as he did before. Then she ordered the other to be taken and placed 30 upon him; as soon as it approached the dead man, he straightway arose. When she saw that, she was greatly rejoiced, and went in to the king, Constantine, and made known to him the marvellous things that she had brought with her. Six days after this, Silvester, the pope, baptized Judas, who had shown Saint Helena the 35

rood, and named him by name Ciriacus, and the same day hallowed him archbishop. And the next morning he went to Jerusalem, and she gave him the two parts [to take] thence with him : the one part he was to take to Jerusalem, the other [he was to send] to Alexandria, and the third part the pope, Silvester, had with him thence to Rome, 5 the fourth part she had with her in Constantinople. Three days after the holy rood was found, Judas gave St. Helena the five nails with which our Lord was nailed. In the same night God's angel came to her when she was on her couch, and named her by her name and spoke thus : ' Helena, arise and take the nails, and order 10 the bit of Constantine's, thy son's bridle to be wrought thereof; and there is no one that will be able to withstand him afterwards, and many shall believe on God on account of the wonders that will be performed by the bridle. Then she asked him whether she should take the nails with her, or have them wrought there. Then 15 answered her the angel and spoke thus : 'Thou canst not take them from this place before they are wrought, but thou shalt order them to be wrought here, and afterwards take the bridle with thee.' And she then did as the angel bade her, and ordered the bit nails to be wrought, and she herself was present. And in the time in 20 which she sang the holy prayer, that is, the paternoster, thrice, the bit was wrought, and she took it to Constantine, her son. And when he was on riding expeditions, there issued from his horse's mouth a flame which could be seen for over a mile; and all those who beheld the marvel were sorely afraid, and in consequence of it 25 received Christianity. And he was thus travelling about for three years. Wherever he took it [the bridle] with him, people were willing to receive Christianity. When the three years were fulfilled, God's angel came to him and said : 'Constantine, it is now the time when, with God's blessing, thou shalt hasten back to the holy city, 30 Constantinople, because thou hast entirely fulfilled God's will and His command.' Then he straightway did as the angel bade him; as soon as he came thither, he ordered the bridle to be taken, and the holy pieces of iron to be removed and to be hung up with great honour, together with the holy rood, where they have been pre- 35 served until this present day. Amen. Amen.

NOTES.

2⁶. quinguinta finicas. A comparison of the various members of the Rood-tree group shows that, in the original from which they are all ultimately derived, both Elim, with its twelve springs of fresh water and its seventy palm trees, and Rephidim, with the bitter water, which was made sweet by the rods, were mentioned¹. In the original of R the seventy palm trees had been reduced to fifty, and the Latin palmae, to which the other versions point, had been replaced by the Greek φοίνικες, of course, in a Latinized form; the result being the quinguinta finicas of the text. This being unintelligible to the author of R was regarded by him as a place name, which he took over unaltered in form and applied to the place where the rods first appeared. But this was not the only confusion: out of Elim, with its twelve springs of fresh water, and Rephidim, with the bitter water, he made Elem—Delemia I take to have arisen from de Elem—with thirty springs of bitter water.

4³⁵. Robathi. If we spell this word backwards, disregarding the final i, and treating th as one letter, we get thabor, which is, no doubt, the place meant. According to the Legend Moses planted the rods at the foot of Mount Thabor (some MSS. have Oreb), where they were afterwards found by David.

6¹⁶. þur for þurh.

6¹⁹. bilyfæð, cf. 34¹³ bilyfæn. These are somewhat earlier instances of the verb to believe (with the prefix be-) than any recorded in the NED. O.E. geliefan.

6²⁹. Ða ðæs binnon æhta dagan, 'Eight days afterwards.' Binnon is similarly used 22⁵, 28⁸, 28³⁴, 30²³, 32⁷, 32³², 34⁶.

8¹¹. sum ðare ðingæ, literally 'some one of those things.' Cf. l. 8, næn þare ðingæ.

8⁶. tweonan. I have here retained the reading of the MS., although the scribe probably meant to write betweonan. Cf. 6¹⁷, 6²¹, 6³¹, 16³¹.

8³³. Ought we not to supply me before idūht? Cf. 32¹⁵ ðæs ðe hire idūht wæs ƿ hit, etc. We must either translate: 'As it seemed to me my power of speech,' etc., or, 'thus it seemed to me that my,' etc.

10⁵. cneowū beilū is obviously miswritten for cneowbeilū. Cf. 10¹⁵.

¹ Both places are mentioned in Ca II, A, Db, and F. They were the scenes of the second and third appearance of the rods.

Marah (Exod. xv. 23) has been confused with Rephidim.

10²¹. ðær ðu inne wære. Ought we not to read ðær ic inne wæs?

10²³. alsiȝan stands probably for halsiȝan. For instances of the loss of h, cf. grammatical notes. It might possibly be miswritten for ahsiȝan.

12¹⁰. on egyptæ lande. Does this refer to the sending of Moses from Midian to Egypt? Or ought we to read of egyptæ lande? The latter seems more probable; it suits the context better, moreover in the former case one would expect to have land (accusative).

12²¹. This line is corrupt. We ought perhaps to supply ðe after ðingum, cf. note to 30¹⁹. After arest isceȝe some words have probably been lost.

12²¹. him ... bæd. Cf. 12⁹, 20¹⁶, 20²⁰ (hine ... bæd).

14¹⁴. boden may be either sing. or plural.

14²⁵. deȝen, 'to die.' This is an earlier instance of the occurrence of the verb to die than has hitherto been recorded. It is met with in Ormulum, Lazamon, Ancren Riwe, St. Katherine, etc. Owing to the fact that deȝen is not found in OE., other words, such as sweltan, steorfan, etc., being used, it has been assumed that it is of Scandinavian origin. But seeing that the word was in common use in the South West of England from the middle of the twelfth century onwards, and that it is found in the other West Germanic dialects: in Old Frisian, Old Saxon, and Old High German; and seeing, moreover, that Orm.'s deȝenn cannot be derived from the Old Norse (Danish) døyya, which would have given deȝenn (cf. Brate¹, Paul und Braune's Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur, 10. 38), it is surely not unreasonable to suppose the word to be a genuine English one. The form in which it occurs presents no difficulty: daujan* would appear in West Saxon as dēgan, in Mercian as dēgan (cf. W. Sax. cēgan, Merc. cēgan, from kaujan*), and, as in the Rood-tree both e and y occur as representatives of W.S. ie, y, Merc. e (umlaut of éa), the vowel is here quite regular.

14³¹. þ̅ ðu him mid hælpen miht, cf. note to 24⁷.

16²⁴. David's arm, in which he was holding the rods, was miraculously extended towards the Ethiopians, and he himself had no power to draw it back.

18⁴. husæ may be either singular or plural. I take it here as plural on account of husæn, 16³³.

18²⁹. anride, 'that on which one rides, horseback, a mount.' I only know of one other instance of anrid, onrid (which is formed like anbid from onbidan): cf. Stevenson & Napier, Oxford Charters, p. 23 ælcon hiredmen his onrid þe he alæned hæfde.

20¹¹. literally: 'was (or became) on so great fire.'

20¹³. alle must be connected with the foregoing heom. 'All the leprosy' would be al þe r.

22³. stude. Cf. 24³¹ styde, besides stede 22⁴. On the OE. style cf. Sievers, P. B. B. 10. 197; 16. 233. The form stude is common in the South-Western dialect in early Middle English.

¹ In spite of this Brate believes Orm.'s deȝenn to be of Scandinavian origin. To get over the difficulty he assumes that it belongs to a later stratum of borrowed words (durfte einer späteren Schicht der Lehnwörter angehören), after the Old Danish þy had been monophthonged to ö.

22⁷. grate, cf. grete 22¹², 'greatness, thickness.' Old West Saxon grieto, Late W. S. grjto. The dictionaries record but one instance of this word from the Epistola Alexandri ad Aristotelem (Anglia 4. p. 146, and Cockayne, Narratiunculæ Anglice conscriptæ, p. 8) þæt treowcyn ungemetlicre gryto and micelnysse.

22⁸. fingermel. 'fingermeasure, fingerlength.'

22⁹. hop, 'a hoop'; again 22¹⁴ and 24⁶. These are earlier instances of the word hoop than have hitherto been recorded. An OE. hóp has not yet been met with.

24¹. ðæt ylca seolfer ꝥ þe unsælig iulas ure drihten to deaþe fore bileawede. Cf. 26¹⁵ ðu caðliȝ treow ꝥ alles middaneardes hæleud on hangian sceal, 30¹¹ þ hus ꝥ þe halȝa lichame inne biburized wæs. Cf. also 14³⁰ þu hæfst mid þe sylfum ꝥ ðu him mið hælpen miht. The relative pronoun þæt, which was originally only used for the nom. and acc. singular of the neuter, does duty, in the above instances, as a dative, being governed by the following preposition. The historically correct þe occurs 24² and 20⁶. In the following century þat was employed as a relative in all cases of all genders both in the singular and plural, but in the Rood-tree we see its use still restricted to the neuter singular. In the masc. and fem. sing. as well as in the plural of all genders þe is still invariably used; cf. 10²¹, 14³¹, 20⁷, 30¹², 30²², 32²¹, 32²⁷, 34⁸, etc.

24¹³. It would perhaps be better to alter soðes into soð, and to read: hwæt his soð wære.

26¹⁹. Literally: 'what she meant by the word that she should name Christ.' Cf. 30⁶.

26²¹. Literally: 'but as it had come into her mouth.'

26²². carcerē must, no doubt, be expanded carcerem. The author of the English version has evidently taken the word over unaltered from his Latin original.

26³²—28¹. This sentence is awkwardly expressed; what she intends to say is: 'I know of a truth that, as soon as I had spoken that word, my body was healed from the pain of the burning which I was suffering for my sins.'

28³. Literally, 'ye cannot any the more [the sooner] by doing so [i.e. by torturing my body] reach my soul.'

28¹⁵. mæȝð I take to be miswritten for mæð, 'one's due proportion, one's deserts, what one deserves.'

28²⁹. to sæles I take to mean, 'immediately, at once.' Cf. Aelfric's Lives of Saints, ed. Skeat, i. p. 494¹¹⁵, ac gehwá to sæles móste cliþian. Skeat translates, 'in due time,' but the context requires, 'forthwith, there and then.' Instances of similar formations are given by Sievers, AgS. Gramm. § 320. Cf. also to gifes 'gratis,' Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, 9. 478.

30¹⁹. for þam ðingum [þe]. I have here supplied þe; cf. 22²⁹ and 34²⁸; also 12²¹.

32². toslæfion. The verb tósláfan, 'to cut in pieces,' is not recorded in the dictionaries. It is the causative of the strong verb (to)slifun.

32¹⁵. ðæs ðe hire iðuht wæs ꝥ, etc. Cf. note to 8³³.

32¹⁸. The author has forgotten that the tree originally measured only thirty ells, and that one-third, i. e. ten ells, had already been cut off. A quarter of the remainder would only measure five ells.

32²²⁻²⁴. A more correct translation would be : ' As soon as she came within the city Constantinople, as they were carrying towards her a dead man, she bade the people,' etc. The ða in line 23 is relative, the þu in l. 24 demonstrative.

32²⁶. ahón[gen]. The MS. has ahón-, which stands at the end of a line. If it were not for the short stroke in the MS. after ahón, which indicates that only part of the word has been written, the reading ahón might have been allowed to stand unaltered. The form ahón occurs as past participle in early Southern Middle English : cf. Bülbring, Ablaut der starken Zeitwörter, im Südenglischen, p. 106.

34¹¹. myld (cf. mild 34²⁰ and mildnæȝlas 34¹⁵) = O.E. midl.

34¹². Nis æniȝ þ him syððan wiðstanden mæȝe. Cf. 26¹¹ Næs nan mon swa durstiȝ þ his ætrinan durste. In these two instances the þ is rather a conjunction than a relative pronoun. In the latter case we can supply he after þ, and in the first instance the construction seems similar : ' There is no one [so powerful] that [he] can,' etc.

34¹³. þurð. Cf. note to line 19 of the Compassio Mariae.

34²⁰. bed, O. E. gebed.

This Latin version (=Ca) is printed from the twelfth century MS. Mm. 5. 29, in the Cambridge Univ. Library, fol. 157^b. It is divided into paragraphs for convenience of comparison with the version in MS. Harley 3185 (=H). In the case of those paragraphs in which H agrees with Ca, the variants from the former are added here. An account of those portions of H which differ, will be found on p. 54. Contractions are expanded. Square brackets denote that the letters enclosed are wanting in the MS.

The Old French version of Andrius (=A) is printed from MS. 95 (Bibl. Nat. Paris), fol. 386^o.

Unde admodum admirans, et quid ageret, prorsus ignorans, clamauit ad dominum pro amaritudine aquarum; qui etiam exaudiuit eum, talem sibi inspirando cogitatum, ut erueret uirgulas et poneret eas in aquarum fonticulis. filiis Israel de Raphidim castrametati sunt in regione montis Synai; ibique dominus manna cibavit eos .xl. annis. Moyses igitur, repositis in aqua uirgulis, ascendit montis summitatem, fuitque ibi .xl. diebus et .xl. noctibus nichil manducans neque bibens; unde et hoc sacro quadragenario ieiunio legem domini meruit ab ipso 5 accipere domino. Cumque de monte Sinai descendisset Moyses portans duas tabulas lapideas digito dei scriptas, ita ex uisione dei resplenduit facies eius, ut filii Israel non possent respicere eius uultus claritatem. . . . Here follows a short account of the doings of the Israelites in the desert, consisting of quotations from Exodus, 10 Numbers, Deuteronomy, and Psalms. No allusion whatever is made to the rods. After the death of Aaron the Israelites came to the land of Moab, and Moses, at God's command, ascended mount Nebo, ibique mortuus est iuxta preceptum domini, et ipse dominus propriis manibus sepeliuit eum, et propterea eius sepulchrum 15 omnibus hominibus manet incognitum usque in presentem diem.

§ 4. Ille siquidem Moyses, dum regionem Moab intrauit, mox in terra posuit, sicut ei dominus mandauit, illas supradictas tres sanctas uirgulas quas in diuersis repperit locis circa se ortas per tres continuas noctes, sicut supra diximus; et in eodem loco, 20 nemine sciente, ualde multis steterunt annis, idem usque ad tempora sancti Dauid regis, nichil crescentes neque tenera folia perdentes, sed per omnia ita erant in terra consistentes, sicut idem Moyses sanctus posuit eas. Postquam igitur imperium sumpsit Dauid, rex gloriosus, in nocturna uisione apparuit ei angelus domini 25 ita dicens: 'O Dauid, dei dilecte, iam nunc expergiscere et, exorta luce, ultra Iordanem proficiscere. Ibi enim dominus tibi est ostensurus illas tres uirgulas sanctas quas olim Moyses in illis posuit locis. Habent sane significationem sancte trinitatis et per eas totus illuminandus est mundus. Hec autem dixit domini 30 angelus, et postea reuolauit ad celos. Facto igitur mane surrexit Dauid sanctus et magno cum comitatu iter arripiens, tertia die transiuit flumen Iordanis. castrametatus est in planitiis cum magna multitudine plebis. Cumque mane surrexisset a sompnis, ecce circa se uidit tres exortas uirgulas, unam uidelicet ad caput suum, et in dextera lateris parte aliam, atque in sinistra terciam. Moxque in terra se
 5 prosteruens magno cum gemitu orabat dicens: 'Domine deus creator omnium, ostende mihi per ineffabilem clementiam tuam, si iste sint ille sancte uirgule de quibus ab angelo sancto in nocturnali audiui requie.' Hoc igitur dum orauit, de supernis audire meruit: 'Iste sunt ille sancte uirgule, et ideo eas summo cum 10 gaudio tolle et tecum illas porta cum maximo honore, quia sacris mysteriis sunt plene, et per eas redimendus est orbis terre.' Tunc Dauid, omni dubitatione et timore sublato, extraxit sanctas uirgulas de loco illo et secum portauit magno cum gaudio, multique infirmi receperunt sanitatem per sanctam illarum uirtutem, ante-15 quam uenirent ad ciuitatem sanctam Ierusalem.

§ 5. Nam quidam uir prepotens, nomine Ioxilus, ita erat omnibus menbris infirmatus, ut in eo uix remaneret alitus. Cumque Dauid eius audisset infirmitatem, properanter cum sanctis uirgulis uenit ad eum. Moxque infirmus recepit sanitatem per illarum presentiam 20 uirgularum, et sanissimus exurgens, benedicebat auctorem sue salutis.

§ 6. Post hæc igitur sanctus Dauid profectus est uiam suam gaudens, et ecce antequam transiret flumen Iordanis obuiam ei ueniebant quatuor Ethiopes; moxque ut sanctas uiderunt uirgulas, 25 exclamauerunt dicentes: 'Magna enim sunt et admiranda in his sacris uirgulis misteria, necnon et omnis terra per eas est illuminanda.' Et accedentes propius, prostrati adorabant eas. Moxque abscessit de illorum corporibus omnis nigredo et deformitas; et facti sunt ualde albi et spetiosi, qui paulo ante fuerunt nigri et 30 horridi. Cumque hoc uidisset populus, ualde fuit letificatus, quia in conspectu eorum tam stupendum factum est miraculum per sanctarum uirgularum uirtutem.

§ 7. Cum ergo Dauid transisset flumen Iordanis, ecce asperit eum quidam leprosus, qui erat in illo monte habitans centum et sexaginta annis. Moxque prophetauit dicens: 'Hodie igitur ad me ueniet, qui me de hac infirmitate saluabit.' Ita enim leprosus dixit, et statim equus substitit, in quo sanctus Dauid sedebat, 5 et extensa est manus sua, cum qua uirgas tenuit. Et ardens flamma de illis uirgulis ascendit, et uersa est ad speluncam in qua supradictus leprosus erat. Moxque illuc perrexit populus, cunctisque illis uidentibus, flamma illa consumpsit lepram illius hominis, et protinus surrexit sanissimus atque comes factus est 10 regis Dauid.

§ 8. Dauid autem inde rex progrediens uenit in Ierusalem in uesperis; moxque tres sanctas uirgulas in illo fonte posuit qui iuxta suum ortulum fuit. Facto itaque mane uoluit illas extrahere et in hortulo suo ponere; sed ita erant in illa nocte radicate, ut 15 nullus posset eas euellere. Et iccirco iussit rex suum dilatare et ampliare hortulum, fortem ponendo sepem circa illum fontem. Erant sancte uirgule ibi iugiter stantes et ita crescentes, ut in triginta annorum curriculis efficerentur arbor grandis. Erant etiam primo anno simul conglutinate et unite, sed tamen semper in 20 summitate fuerunt penitus disiuncte, quapropter et ipse Dauid iussit unum argenteum facere circulum et cum eo circumcingere illius arboris summitatem, ut sic constricta in unum esset conglutinata. Sic ergo cypressus radicata cum cedro et pino, cedrus etiam et pinus cum cypresso, argenteo adunate cum circulo, arbor 25 una sunt effecte; licet semper in summitate in tres fuissent partes diuise ob significacionem sancte trinitatis, uel ad demonstrationem cuius essent generis. Cum ergo unus transisset annus, eundem circulum dilatauit rex gloriosus, ut arbor inde grossior esset; aliumque circulum superius innexuit, ut excelsior fieret. Sic ergo rex gloriosus per triginta faciens annos, et argenteos dilatauit, 5 ut arbor dilataretur, eosque adauxit, ut illa extenderetur. Concreuerunt ergo in latum et in longum simul in una radice et in una arboris commixtione: cypressus, cedrus, et pinus, facte sunt arbor mire magnitudinis, frondifera, fructifera, salutifera, omnibus lignisque Libani excelsior, fronde, flore, et germine nobilior. Dauid 10 autem rex .xl. annis super Israel regnavit et .x. regiminis sui anno istud salutare lignum in Ierusalem plantauit, et .xxx. residuis annis creuit, et rex frequenter illuc perrexit, ibique diu extensis manibus in oratione perstitit.

Post hec igitur dedit Dauid filio suo Salomoni descriptionem porticus et templi et cellariorum, etc. etc. Then follows an account (consisting of quotations from the Bible) of the materials collected, and of the building of the temple. Then it goes on: Perfecta est igitur domus domini septem annis in omnibus utensilibus suis, et .xi. trabes posite sunt in domo domini per circuitum forinsecus, ut non hererent templi muris. Experti sunt operarii unam defuisse trabem, moxque totam illam circumibant regionem, inquirentes aliam, sed minime tantam inuenientes arbor¹⁰ rem, reuersi sunt uacui ad regem. Cumque rex super hoc maximam haberet tristitiam, suaserunt eum magistri operum, ut salutiferam succideret arborem in ortulo Dauid, patris sui, stantem, eo quod non haberet aliam. Tunc iussit rex arborem illam succidere, et ad necessitatem operis facere, atque .xxx. argenteos precepit de illa¹⁵ sancta arbore tollere et in templo domini suspendere, patri suo ad memoriam et ad honorem sibique. signum, per quod salutis sumpsimus sacramentum et confractis tartari claustris, aperta est nobis ianua regni celestis. Ipsa enim felix et beata Helena post inuencionem sancte crucis meruit inuenire sanctos clauos, cum quibus dominicum confixum erat corpus; fecitque eos saliuare, et posuit eos in freno equi regis, 5 sicut supradiximus. Ueniens autem beata Helena ad suum filium Constantinum, dedit ei frenum sanctis clauorum magnaliis adornatum; et rex ipse quocienscumque equitabat, semper illud sanctum frenum in equo suo ponebat, sicut ab angelo sancto ei preceptum fuerat. Maximum uero habebant timorem et stuporem 10 omnes qui uidebant regem equitantem, quia plus quam per unum miliarium quaua uersum uidebatur flamma et coruscacio, que procedebat de ore illius equi. O uere felicem et beatum imperatorem, qui tantam sortitus est prerogatiuam, ut nullus meruit ante eum nec post tam sanctum habere frenum. Nam 15 in spacio trium annorum multa milia hominum conuersi sunt ad dominum per sacrum illius freni fulgorem atque coruscacionem. Expletis igitur trium curriculis annorum, angelus domini ad eundem dixit imperatorem, 'Nunc ergo habes expletam uoluntatem dei, iamque prope est tempus tuum. Quapropter rediens 20 uenire debes ad Constantinopolim.' Audiens igitur hec imperator Constantinus fecit sicut ab angelo est ammonitus, iussit clauos § 19 (MS. Harl. f. 67^b–68^b). Hec ergo, fratres karissimi, ideo repetere curauimus, ut magis nota essent omnibus audientibus.

- 5 Mirabiliter cepit oriri arbor sancta, de qua facta est crux Christi adoranda; et mirabilius aparuit Moysi, famulo dei, per .iii. noctes continuas. Atque adhuc mirabilius in terra stetit usque ad tempus Dauid regis nichil crescens neque uiriditatem uel foliorum teneritudinem perdens, set per omnia sic permansit, sicut Moisy primo 10 aparuit, donec Dauid sanctus meruit illam de loco suo transferre et in ortulo suo reponere. Ibi enim erat crescens ita ut in .xxx. annis efficeretur arbor grandis. Dauid autem illam plantauit, et Salomon filius eius eam succidit, eo quod unam non haberet trabem, dum construeret gloriosum Christi templum. Illa siquidem arbor 15 sancta, dum fuisset succisa, nullo modo potuit ad opus decretum aptari, quia prefinita est ad crucem Christi ante constitutionem mundi, sicut superius audistis, fratres karissimi. Ista ergo leccio iam nunc sit ita terminata, ne forte audientibus uideatur esse fastidiosa; et nunc in hac leccionis clausula magna ad dominum clamemus instancia omnique diligencia et perseuerancia, ut dignetur nos purgare sua consueta clemencia ab omni peccatorum inmundicia, 5 et cuncta ministrare sancta et prospera, et nunc et per omnia seculorum secula. Iudas ala as princes des prouoires et lor demanda combien il lui donroient s'il lor liuroit Ihesum. Et lor dist itant, 'Que me donries uous,' fist soi Iudas, 'se iou le uous liuroie?' Et li Iuis lui 10 establirent son loier, et ce fu les .xxx. cercles d'argent qui pendoient au temple, car il estoient de la comunance. Lors uint Iudas li malaentureus et prist ces .xxx. cercles d'argent et lor liura Ihesum. Et puis si s'en ala en sa maison et raconta a sa mere tout isi come il auoit ouure et coment il auoit uendut Ihesum. 15 Quant la mere Iudas oi coment il comencha a crier et a braire et a faire mout grant duel et dist tout en plorant, 'Ha lasse chaitiue! que ferai? pour quoi conchui onques icest fil, icest ceitif?' THE LATIN JUDAS STORY¹.

Mirabiliter cepit oriri arbor sancta de tribus uirgulis composita : prima erat cipressina, atque alia cedrina, et pini speciem habebat tertia. Cipressus itaque patris significationem habet. Cedrus uero significat unigenitum dei filium. Pinus etiam portendit paraclitum spiritum sanctum. De quibus facta est crux Christi adoranda. Et mirabilius stetit in terra usque ad tempus Dauid regis, nichil crescens, neque uiriditatem uel foliorum teneritudinem perdens ; sed per omnia sic permansit, sicut primum Moysi apparuit, donec Dauid sanctus meruit illam de loco suo transferre et in ortulo suo reponere. Ibi enim erat ita crescens, ut .xxx. annis efficeretur arbor grandis. Hec inter omnes arbor una nobilis de illis tribus excreuit uirgulis, quas dei amicus Moyses, a sompno excitatus, circa se repperit exortas per tres continuas noctes, quas et deo dilectus Dauid ad Ierusalem detulit ; ibi enim in uiridario suo collocatas per annos .xxx. coluit, et in unoquoque anno in illarum summitate unum argenteum circulum innexuit, et reliquos inferius innexos dilatauit, ut arbor dilataretur in grossum et extenderetur in longum. Ille siquidem uirgule, continuatam habentes uiriditatem, in unam simul concreuerunt arborem. Que scilicet arbor, mire suauitatis habens odorem, estate et hyeme inmarcescibiles protulit frondium flores. Peracto siquidem tempore prefinito, eadem laudabilis arbor, omnibus cedris Libani sublimior, iussu regis Salomonis succiditur.

Dum in edificio templi domini nullo modo ualuisset coequari, in crucifixione tamen corporis Christi digna fuit coaptari, in qua uita mundi pependit, in qua Iesus triumphauit, et mors mortem superauit. Nam et triginta argenteos circulos in templo domini suspensos uesani acceperunt Iudei et tradiderunt infelici Iude pro 5 traditione domini nostri Iesu Christi, ut esset ueraciter adimpletum quod ita dictum est per prophetam: 'Apprehenderunt mercedem meam .xxx. argenteis, quos appreciatus sum ab eis.' Et in passione domini secundum Mathei positionem de eodem infelici Iuda scriptum est, quod iret ad principes sacerdotum et inquireret ab 10 eis precium de tradicionem nostri saluatoris, ita inquit: 'Quid uultis mihi dare, et ego uobis eum tradam?' At illi constituerunt ei .xxx. argenteos, illos scilicet predictos .xxx. circulos, qui in templo domini pendebant, quosque communiter possidebant.

Tunc infelix Iudas accepit .xxx. argenteos pro uenditione 15 domini nostri Iesu Christi, et, uendito illo, rediit ad domum suam et retulit matri sue per ordinem quomodo tradidisset dominum Iesum Christum. Audiens igitur mater eius, quod ab eo traditus esset dominus Iesus Christus, conuersa est in furore et lacrimis, ita dicens: 'Heu me miseram, que te celorum genui filium! Quid 20 tibi et iusto illi? Quare, infelix, sanctum et iustum tradere uoluisti? Nunc ergo absque ulla dubitatione omnes maledictiones implebuntur in te, que per prophetam ita sunt scripte: "Fiant filii eius orphani, et uxor eius uidua," et cetera que secuntur. Non

NOTES

ON

THE ORTHOGRAPHY OF THE ORMULUM¹.

FOR the guttural and palatal spirants Orm retains the Old English γ (in the former case adding an h), while for the guttural stopped consonant, as in god, he employs a sign which is represented in the printed editions by g. But in the printed editions the sign g is not restricted to the guttural stopped consonant: it is used also in words like egge (=Modern English 'edge'), where the gg had the *dz*h sound. In other words, the printed editions of the Ormulum make no difference between egge (= 'edge') and *eggenn*² (= 'egg on'), though the pronunciation of the consonants in the two words was, in Orm's time, the same as now, i.e. *dz*h in the former case and a stopped g in the latter. But on examining the MS. I found that, though the editors make no difference, Orm did. The letter with which he always denoted the guttural stop (as in god, gladd, eggenn, &c.) is perfectly distinct from the sign which he used to express the *dz*h sound (as in egge 'edge,' seggen 'to say,' &c.). The latter, which in the following remarks, as well as in the transcript of the facsimile, is denoted by g, has the form of the continental g —: cf. biggenn in the facsimile, lines 2, 16, 18, 20, 41, 47, and seggenn, line 6. The former, which I shall denote by ȝ, may be described as a sort of compromise between the Old English γ and the continental g: it has, in common with this latter, the closed upper part, thus differing from the Old English ȝ; but it has, in common with the Old English ȝ, the straight horizontal top stroke, which projects to the left as well as to the right of the letter —: cf. ȝodd, lines 4, 9, 10, 12, 38, &c., biginnen, line 13, &c. This straight horizontal top, especially that part of it which projects to the left, is its most characteristic feature, and serves to distinguish it from the g, from the round top of which a short sloping stroke extends to the right, there being no stroke whatever to the left. The absence of any stroke to the left of the top of the g at once distinguishes it from the ȝ. Except for the one or two isolated instances mentioned on page 4, Orm never confuses the two signs, but always uses them correctly, ȝ denoting the guttural stopped consonant, and g the *dz*h sound. I give a few instances—the pronunciation, g or *dz*h, is added in brackets, the number which follows denotes the number of times I have met with the word in question in the Ormulum MS.: egge ‘edge’ (*dz*h-4) is in each case written with ȝȝ; eggenn ‘to egg on’ (g-5), egginnȝ (g-1) are in every instance spelt with ȝȝ. The verb biggenn ‘to buy’ (*dz*h-18) is always written with ȝȝ, being thus invariably distinguished from biggenn ‘to dwell’ (g-20). The verbs leggenn ‘to lay’ (*dz*h-2), and seggenn ‘to say’ (*dz*h-33) are in every instance written with ȝȝ, while the Scandinavian trigg ‘faithful’ (g-3), kaggerrlegg ‘love’ (g-2) are spelt with ȝȝ.

² The earliest quotation for this word given in the New English

If any proof is needed that Orm’s seggenn, &c. really had the *dz*h sound, it is afforded by the use of the sign g in the Romance word gyn (Ormulum, ed. Holt, I. 245, þurrrh snoterr gyn, ‘through wise art’). This gyn or gin appears in other early Middle English writings, meaning, as here, ‘skill, art,’ or ‘a mechanical contrivance, a machine.’ It also got to be used in a bad sense, ‘cunning,’ and ‘a snare,’ surviving in the latter meaning in the Modern English ‘gin.’ It comes from the Latin ingenium, through the medium of the Old French engin. Some writers have, it is true, regarded it as Scandinavian, and brought it into connexion with the Old Norse ginna, ‘to deceive.’ But the pronunciation of the Modern English word entirely precludes the possibility of a Scandinavian origin. Moreover, the various Middle English meanings are more easily and naturally explained from the Romance engin than from the Norse ginna.

The Romance origin of gyn then being admitted, its initial consonant must, in Orm's time, have had the dzh sound; thence, as we have every reason for supposing that Orm did not use this sign for more than one sound, we may assume that, wherever it occurs, it had the value of dzh. The fact that in words, whether proper names or not, borrowed from Latin Orm always uses g before back vowels and g before front vowels, serves as a further confirmation of this. He writes quapprigan, galile, and augustuss, but egippte and magy (= magi).

The later language shows that, when ng was originally followed by i or j, the g underwent the same assibilation as the gg; instances are 'hinge,' 'singe,' &c., so that one would expect to find Orm in such cases writing ng and not ngj. Now, wherever ng is preceded in native English words by e, an i or j must have originally followed the ng (to this there are very few exceptions—the preterite heng 'hung' is one), so that wherever the combination eng occurs, we should expect to find it written eng, unless the g was immediately followed by some consonant which protected it from assibilation, as in enngliss, lenngre, or in the case of Scandinavian words. Accordingly we find bilenge 'belonging to' (l. 2230) written with g. The other words in question are (heh)enngelt, 'angel'; henngedd, &c., from henngenn, 'to hang, crucify'; þrenngdenn, 'thronged': wengess, 'wings'; strengenn, 'to strengthen'; genge, 'a company'; gengenn, 'to avail, assist'—but they are always written with g, never with g. In the case of (heh)enngelt, the explanation is simple enough. In all the cases except the nominative and accusative singular the g was protected from assibilation by l (ennless), and the influence of these forms protected the g in the nominative and accusative singular; but, in the case of the other six words, no similar explanation is possible, so that, unless we are prepared to adopt the unlikely assumption that in Orm's dialect assibilation only took place in the case of gg, but not in the case of ng, we are driven to the conclusion that all the six words are of Scandinavian origin.

In his article on the Scandinavian loan-words in the Ormulum (Paul and Braune's Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur, x. 1) Brate comes to the conclusion, on quite other grounds, that henngedd, brennydenn, and wengess, are Scandinavian; but the remaining three he regards as native English, because of the lengthening of the root vowel before ng. But, if we suppose strengenn, genge, gengenn to belong to an older stratum of loan-words borrowed previously to the lengthening of e before ng, that objection would lose its force.

The following is a list of the words in which I have found the sign g used¹: biggenn 'to buy', abiggenn 'to atone for', bilenge, egge 'edge', Egippte, gym, leggenn, Magy, seggenn, *wippsleggenn*².

That in a few isolated cases Orm should have let the wrong sign slip through his fingers, writing g for ȝ and conversely, is but natural. Amongst the hundreds of instances of the word ȝodd which I examined, I only found a single example of the misspelling godd (line 2161). Line 3995 the MS. has gluterrnesse for ȝluterrnesse. Conversely in l. 8772 egippte is written instead of the usual egippte, of which I have noted twelve instances.

A glance at line 10 of the facsimile will shew that Sweet's statement (History of Engl. Sounds, p. 160) that the Ormulum only has ȝ, requires modification. A list of some of the words in which ȝ is found, is given by Holt, I. p. lxxx.

It will be also noticed that the o of the combination eo has generally been erased, and that in most cases the o has been again added by another hand.

¹ The words with ȝ in the Latin portion of the MS. (i. e. the portion between the Dedication and the Preface, which contains Latin texts) are, of course, left out of consideration, as Orm does not use the sign ȝ at all in this Latin part of the MS., employing the continental ȝ in all cases.

² Orm regularly writes ȝerrusalem with an initial ȝ. In three instances (ll. 8439, 9182, 9188) the ȝ has been altered to g.

A MIDDLE ENGLISH COMPASSIO MARIÆ¹.

THE following fragment of a Middle English Compassio Mariæ is printed from the Bodleian MS. Tanner 169* (= New Catalogue 9995), formerly Auct. D. 3. 16, and to judge from the character of the handwriting, must have been written soon after the middle of the thirteenth century. The main body of the MS., which consists of a Latin psalter and massbook preceded by a calendar, dates from the twelfth century. From notices entered on the margins of the calendar it appears that, in the fourteenth century, the MS. was in the possession of the Benedictine monastery of St. Werburgh in Chester, in which city the MS. was probably written. It does not, however, follow from this that our fragment also came from Chester, as the leaf on which it is written did not originally form part of the MS., but has evidently been detached from some old binding² and bound up with MS. Tanner 169*. Still its present position renders it likely that the binding out of which it was taken, was that of MS. Tanner 169* itself, in which case the fragment must have belonged to the library of the Chester monastery and is probably a remnant of some manuscript written there.

² The first and last leaves of the MS. have also been taken out of an old binding; they contain fragments, in handwriting of the fourteenth century, of two Latin hymns: the one beginning Laudes crucis attolamus (cf. Daniel, Thesaurus hymnologicus ii. 78, and Migne, Patrol. 196, p. 1484), and the other being part of a hymn in honour of St. Oswald.

The Latin original, of which the English fragment is a translation, I found in a sequence edited for the first time by Dreves, in his Analecta hymnica medii ævi, vol. 8 (1890), p. 55¹. As that work is perhaps not generally accessible, I have, for convenience of comparison, printed the Latin original side by side with the English text. The first line of the English fragment obviously formed part of the last line of a stanza, which would seem to have corresponded rather with the first or second stanza of the original than with the third or fourth. The remainder of the English poem corresponds stanza for stanza to the Latin hymn. The translation does not closely follow the original; indeed the choice of the same metrical form necessitated considerable freedom in the translation. The fondness of the English poet for alliteration need not surprise us, if, as I shall endeavour to show, his home was in the West Midland district.

In a monograph which appeared in Berlin in 1890 under the title 'Vier mittelenenglische geistliche Gedichte aus dem 13. Jahrhundert,' the author, M. Jacoby, published a Middle English poem (p. 42), which in its contents exhibits some similarity with our fragment. The differences between the two are, however, too considerable to admit of the possibility of their being derived from a common source. Still the resemblance between Jacoby, p. 43, lines 31-42 (Nu is time . . . quite and fre) and stanzas VI and VII of the Latin hymn deserve notice. Compare too, Jacoby, p. 42, line 4 Pe sone heng, þe moder stud with Ista stabat, hic pendebat.

In the MS. the poem is not divided into lines and stanzas, but is written as prose and furnished with musical notes. I have also modernised the manuscript punctuation. For the w-sound the scribe employs both the letter w and the old runic sign ƿ; for the latter I have, in my text, substituted an italic w.

¹ The oldest MSS. of the Latin hymn used by Dreves do not go back further than the fourteenth century; but the English thirteenth century translation shows that the Latin original must have been composed, at the latest, at the beginning of the thirteenth century, probably still earlier.

DE BEATA MARIA VIRGINE.

I.

Stabat iuxta Christi crucem,
 Stabat videns vitæ ducem Vitæ valefacere,
 Stabat mater nec iam mater
 Et, quid sit eventus ater, Novo novit funere.

NOTES.

2. spald is the representative of the Anglian spāld, cf. Kluge, Kuhn's Zeit-schrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung, xxvi. 97; Sievers, Paul und Braune's Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur, ix. 220; x. 485). The ordinary Middle English form, spōtel, comes from the West Saxon spātl.

3. The d in wīd stands for þ; similarly in dead 17, ded 28, the d, t, in þurd 19, þurt 35, 37 is meant to denote the same sound.

6. eche, 'increase,' 'All that contributed to the increase of thy sorrow,' 'increased thy sorrow.' Cf. Schorham [Percy Society, vol. 28 (1849)], p. 10, 'Witheoute wane and eche.'

8. buirde, 'birth,' O. E. gebyrd.

9. wommone wirde, 'the common lot of women' is the law of nature, to which all other women are subject, viz. that they suffer pain in giving birth. This law of nature was violated ('wrong was wrought to the lot of women') in the painless birth of Christ. Cf. Dreves, vi. 46, Et in partu doloris nescia Contra iura . . . ; Dreves, ix. 73, Tuum partum lex naturae stupet suo fracto iure, Dum parit virginitas.

14-15. Cf. Bøddeker, Altenglische Dichtungen des Ms. Harley 2253, p. 207. Moder, nou þou miht wel leren, Whet sorewe haveþ þat children beren.

16. þrehes = þrāwes, OE. ðrāwu by the side of ðrēa. Epinal Gl. 53 thrauu (cf. Sievers, Paul und Braune's Beiträge, x. 480).

19. þurd, cf. þurt 35, 37. Both the d and t stand for þ; cf. wīd 3. The spelling þurþ for þurh occurs already in OE.: cf. Tessmann, Aelfrics altenglische Bearbeitung der Interrogationes Sigewulfs presb. in Genesin, Berlin, 1891, p. 8: þurd þa diglan æddran þyssere eorðan (MS. Harley 3271, XI. century). Cf. also History of the Holy Rood-tree, 34¹³. In Middle English this spelling is by no means rare: it occurs e.g. in the Digby MS. of the Moral Ode (cf. Zupitza, Anglia, i. 19, note) and in the Old English Homilies, First Series (Morris, E. E. T. Soc.—Lambeth MS.), p. 117, etc. With regard to the use of þ for h cf. Jacoby, p. 15; Förster, Anglia (Anzeiger), vii. 65; Schröer, Die Winteney-Version der Regula S. Benedicti, p. xix; Cohn, Die Sprache in der mittlengl. Predigtsammlung der Hs. Lambeth 487, p. 27; Sweet, History of English Sounds, § 727; Luick, Deutsche Literaturzeitung, May 17th, 1890. p. 745, &c. Further instances of þ for h from the Old Engl. period are Hpt. Gl. (=the Aldhelm Glosses in vol. ix. of the Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum), 489 offþryðt for offþryht; 415 dolðdrenc for dolh-, &c.; Saxon Chronicle, anno 1137, þoþwethere. On initial þw for hw cf. note to þwen 29.

22. Cf. St. Katherine (ed. Eiminkel, E. E. T. Soc.), l. 104, þeos lufsume lefdi mid lastelese lates; and OE. Hom. (ed. Morris, E. E. T. Soc.), 1st Series, p. 269, lastelese lates.

24. louk. Cf. Stratmann-Bradley, p. 396, under hleuke, and Mätzner, ii. p. 223, leuk. lew, cf. Stratm.-Bradley, p. 396, hlewe, and Mätzner, ii. p. 225, lew.

26-7. Cf. Böddeker, p. 207:

*When he ros, þo fel hire sorewe,
Hire blisse sprong þe þridde morewe.*

And Jacoby, p. 43, l. 46:

*þi sorwen wenten al to blisse, þo þi sone al mid iwisse
aros hupon þe tridde day.*

29. þwen, the same spelling occurs line 40. I am inclined to think that the þ is here not a mere scribal error for h, although I cannot point out any other certain examples of the replacement of initial hw by þw. Possibly, however, a þwarle knot, which occurs in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, l. 194, is a case in point: it is obviously identical with the wharlnot cited by Morris in his glossary as still usual in Lancashire (cf. also Halliwell, Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial Words). The converse, viz. that þw is represented by hw is not at all unfrequent: cf. gehwærlæcan (= geþwærl-), Hpt. Gl. 407; Aelfric's Grammar, ed. by Zupitza, 11⁶ (MSS. T.U.); gehwære, Hpt. Gl. 411; ungehwærnes, Hpt. Gl. 495, 522; Schröer, Bened. Regel, 106¹: cf. too ungewærnes (= ungehw- for ungeþw-), Gospel of St. John, vii. 43 (MSS. H and R); gehwærende, Hpt. Gl. 527; hwirlicere (for þwyrlicere), Hpt. Gl. 434; hwurlice (= hwyrlic- for þwyrlic-), Hpt. Gl. 470; hwurum (for þwyrum), Hpt. Gl. 471; hwearum (obviously miswritten or misread for hwurum = þwyrum), Hpt. Gl. 434; cf. also Dietrich, Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, xi. 439. The same change may be observed at later periods: OE. þwitan, 'to cut,' and ME. þwitel 'knife,' still survive in modern dialects as to thwite and thwittle. The literary language only recognizes whittle, in Yorkshire the verb to white is also used. By the side of NE. thong (dialectally thwang), OE. þwang, we find widely spread in modern dialects the form whang. For thwaite (from Old Norse þveit, þveite) the form whate is said to be used in Cumberland, cf. W. Dickinson, Cumberland Glossary, p. 103. In whack by the side of thwack we have the same interchange of wh and þw.

33. birdinge, 'birth,' is not recorded in Stratmann, Mätzner, or in the New English Dictionary.

35. 'For just as the gleam glides through the glass, so he was born of thy body.' This comparison of the birth of Christ with the sunbeam passing through glass, which we do not find in the Latin original, was a very favourite one in the Middle Ages. Cf. W. Grimm, Konrad von Würzburg, Goldene Schmiede, p. xxxi. Cf. also Mone, Lat. Hymnen des Mittelalters, i. 63 :

*Ut vitrum non lœditur Sole penetrante,
Sic illæsa creditur
Virgo post et ante*¹.

Cf. also Œuvres poétiques d'Adam de Saint-Victor, ed. Gautier (1858), i. p. 40, ll. 16-22, and the note on p. 45. Mätzner, Altenglische Sprachproben, i. 262, has two examples from William of Schorham :

*Therfore of hyre ybore he was,
As the sonne passeȝt thorg the glas,
Wythouten on openynge.* [Percy Soc. 28, p. 121.]
*Ase the sonne taketh hyre pas Withoute breche thorgout that glas, Thy maydenhod onwemmed hyt was
For bere of thyne chylde.* [Percy Soc. 28, p. 133.]

Jacoby, p. 47, cites an instance from T. Wright, Songs and Carols, Percy Soc. 23 (1847), p. 53 :

*As the sune schynnyth in the glas,
So Jhesu of hys moder borne was.*

To these instances may be added the following :

*Right als þou seis þe sune beme
Gais thoru þe glas and cums again
Withuten brest, right sua all plain,
Bot flescheliker he com and yede, Saufand his moder hir maidenkede.*

As dude þe sonne þorow þe glas,
And so þow weȝ wiþ chylde.'*

¹ This is the well-known hymn beginning, Dies est lætitia, of which there is a modern English translation by the Rev. J. M. Neale. Cf. Helmore and Neale, Carols for Christmas-tide, No. 9. The passage in question runs :

As the sunbeam through the glass Passeth, but not staineth; Thus the Virgin, as she was Virgin still remaineth.

The same comparison occurs in a modern carol by the Rev. H. R. Bramley, beginning,

Listen, lordings, unto me, a tale I will you tell, which is still sung at Magdalen College, Oxford. The second verse is :

*In the inn they found no room; a scanty bed
they made:
Soon a babe from Mary's womb was in the manger laid.
Forth he came as light through glass: He came to save us all.
In the stable ox and ass before their Maker fall.*

In the poems of the Franciscan monk, Jacobus Ryman, composed in 1492, and edited, for the first time, by Zupitza, in the Archiv für das Studium der neueren Sprachen, vol. 89, I have noted no less than twelve instances of this comparison of Christ's birth to the passing of light through glass. I will only quote two :

*Seint Anselme seith : 'So Criste did pas Thurgh Marie myelde, as his wille was,
As the sonne beame goth thurgh the glas.* [p. 186.]

*As the sonne beame goth thurgh the glas, Thurgh this roose that lilly did pas
To save mankynde, as his wille was.* [p. 187.]

The other instances occur on the following pages : 176, 181, 207, 208, 212, 273, 279, 294, 296, 324. Cf. also Malory's Morte Darthur, ed. Sommer, p. 703, and wente oute thurgh a glas wyndowe, etc.

37. 'Through the whole (i.e. unhurt, unbroken, unopened) sepulchre he glided.' Cf. Jacoby, p. 43, l. 51, Fur þe hole ston þe (= he) glod. Hoale = OE. hāl; þurck = OE. þrūk, 'sepulchre, tomb, coffin.' Forms with metathesis occur both in OE. and ME.: Wright-Wülker, Vocabularies, 335, 41 ðurk, sarcophagum; Wars of Alexander (ed. Skeat), l. 4452, thurghis.

40. rise, miswritten probably for risen.

42. sich, 'sighing.'

As regards the dialect of the poem the forms of the verb point to the northern part of the West Midland district. The plural of the present indicative has the Midland ending e: bere (rhyming with the infinitive lere) 15. The 3rd person singular of the present indicative, which does not occur in any rhyme, ends in s: haves 13, glidis 35; and this points to the West of England. The 2nd pers. singular of the strong preterite has no ending: þu was 7, þu loch 11, þu wep (rhyming with slep) 11, com þou 39, the only exception is gulde 17. Instances of the 2nd person singular of the weak preterite are þu moostes 14, þu schulde 18.

Compare with these the corresponding forms of the preterite in the West Midland Alliterative Poems and Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, which will be found in Schwahn's Die Konjugation in Sir Gawain, &c., pp. 8-9; þou gef, Gawain 2349; þou woldeȝ, Gawain 84; þou schulde, Cleanness 1110, &c. The regular retention of the n in the ending of the past participle of the strong verbs points to the northern half of England: comen 26, 27, waken 12, driven 28, risen 29, born 36. The form rise 40 forms the only exception, and is probably merely a scribal error for risen.

The phonology of the poem agrees with this localisation. OE. y (umlaut of u) appears both as ui and i: buirde 8, kuinde 10, kuindeliche 19, wirde 9, birdinge 33, sinne 42. The occurrence of forms with ui and u side by side with i-forms is characteristic of the West Midland district: cf. Knigge, Die Sprache des Dichters von Sir Gawain, pp. 29-30, and 47 (huyde, kuy, þurled, &c. by the side of synne, &c.); Schüddekopf, Sprache und Dialekt des mittelenglischen Dichters W. of Palerne, pp. 18 and 27; and Kron, W. Langleys Buch von P. dem Pflüger, p. 57 (huyre, gult, by the side of kin, &c.). Cf.

also Carstens, *Zur Dialektbestimmung des mittellengl. Sir Firumbras*¹, pp. 16, 17, and 27.

It might be urged that the retention of the diphthongic éo in leor 2, 24 (cf. also heau 23 = OE. héow) beside devel 28, leueli 2; and of éa, éd, ea in dead 17, schead 34 (beside ded 28), and in bearnes 8 (beside barnes 15) were proofs of a Southern origin. But I believe that that is owing to the greater age of the poem as compared with the other West Midland writings that have come down to us. The u in luve 32 (= OE. léofa) is an indication of West English origin: cf. Robert of Gloucester's Chronicle, l. 752, hulde (= OE. héoldon), Laxamon, 3461 dure (= déore), 4205 buh (= béod), etc. Sir Firumbras, 4093 luvere (= léofra), &c., Piers Plowm., buþ (= béoþ); cf. lud (= OE. léod), in W. of Palerne, Sir Gawain, &c.

OE. æ is generally represented in the poem by a: þat (8 times), at 21, glas 35, was 6, 7, 26, 33. It appears as e only in wes 12, 29 (rhyming with peas), 40 (rhyming with endeles), and as ea in neas 25 (rhyming with lasteles). From the fact that in the three last-named instances the rhymes show the author to have pronounced wes and nes in these cases, one is by no means justified in assuming that in his dialect e was the regular representative of OE. æ, nor even in altering the rhyme glas: was 35 to gles: wes, since, as is well known, the form wes was frequently used, side by side with *was*², by Middle English authors (by North Midland and Northern as well as by others), who otherwise only use a as the representative of OE. æ (cf. Kölbing, Sir Tristrem, pp. lxi–lxii; Amis und Amiloun, p. xxv, &c.). As regards the OE. á, we find it represented eight times by a, eight times by oa, and four times by o: spald 2, þa 16, ta 16, swa 25, sari 25, twa 34, wa 12, 41—woa 7, loates (ON. lát) 22, hoale 37, gload 37, oa 38, þoa 39, swoa 42 (cf. skoarn 5); wo 15, 17, 21, so 35. Here belongs also schead (rhyming with gload) 34, and þrehes (rhyming with lahes) 16. The fact that the scribe has written sometimes a, sometimes oa and o, as the representative of OE. á, points to the conclusion that the existing copy of our poem was written during the period when the change was taking place. From the rhyme þrehes (= OE. þrāwu): lahes (= OE. lāgu) we may infer, with some degree of probability, that the poet still pronounced the a-sound (but cf. Knigge, p. 33, and the Neuphilol. Beiträge herausgeg. vom Verein f. neuere Sprachen in Hannover, 1886, pp. 53–4; Brandl, Anzeiger für deutsches Alterthum, 13, 95–6). Taking into consideration the age of our poem, one might be inclined, on account of the comparatively large number of instances of o, oa, to assign it, or at any rate the existing copy, to a more southern district. But if we bear in mind that the rounding of ā to ō, which began in the South, spread thence rapidly through the Midlands towards the North, and that before the end of the thirteenth century we meet with o even in Northern writings (cf. Kölbing, Sir Tristrem, p. lxxi), the occurrence of oa and o, by the side of the older a, does not stand

² In Barbour's Bruc (ed. Skeat), ii. 584–6, we find the two forms used in two successive couplets:

*That to the ladyis profyt was Mar then Iamys of Douglas;
And the king oft confortyt wes Throw his wyt, and his besynes.*

in the way of the assumption that the poem itself, as well as the existing copy, may have been written in Cheshire, perhaps in Chester itself, to whose monastic library the fragment once probably belonged¹. The form ho, 'she,' in line 1, is important for the fixing of the dialect, as it is characteristic of the West Midland area, and has remained, down to the present day, the usual form of the pronoun in Cheshire. The form späld, l. 2, points to the Anglian district².

There now only remains the question of age. As has already been mentioned, palæographical considerations point to the third quarter of the thirteenth century. And the language of the fragment agrees on the whole with this. We should not expect to find oa, o for OE. ā in the Northern portion of the West Midland district before the second half of the century. The representation of OE. u by o (comen 26, 27, sonc 29, 32, 40), and of OE. ū by ou (out 4, 41, nou four times, doun 28, toun 32, pou 39, compared with þu seven times, ure 30, purch 37. In the case of us 41, shortening had probably already taken place, cf. Orm's uss). It is true that o for u is met with occasionally before the end of the twelfth century: e.g. in the Lambeth MS. of the Moral Ode (cf. Lewin, Das mittelenenglische Poema Morale, Halle, 1881, p. 16), in the Homily MS. B. 14, 52, of Trinity Coll., Cambridge (written about 1200, ed. Morris, Old Engl. Hom. 2nd Series. Cf. Krüger, Sprache und Dialekt der mittelenengl. Homilien in der Hs. B. 14, 52, Trin. Coll., Camb., Erlangen, 1885, p. 17). In the Digby MS. of the Moral Ode (cf. Lewin, p. 16), as well as in the older Lagamon MS. o is by no means rare. Still in all these cases the o-forms are in a small minority as compared with the forms in which u is still written, and many MSS. of the first half of the thirteenth century only have u: e.g. Ormulum, St. Katherine, Hali Meidenhad, Cuckoo Song (circa 1240), Proclamation of Henry III, 18th Oct. 1258, &c. MS. Jesus Coll., Oxford, No. 29 (written about 1250, containing Owl and Nightingale, Moral Ode, &c.) has only a few isolated instances of o. One is therefore justified in asserting that the comparatively frequent occurrence of o (for u) in our short poem points to the second half of the century³. The same holds good of the spelling ou for OE. ū, a spelling which was introduced somewhat later than o for u: as some MSS. which already have o for u, afford no instances at all of ou for ū. The MS. Lambeth 487 (containing homilies and the Moral Ode, edited by Morris, OE. Homilies, 1st Series) has invariably u for OE. ū (cf. Cohn, Die Sprache in der mittelenengl. Predigtsammlung der Hs. Lambeth 487, pp. 16 and 18, and Lewin, p. 16). The Trinity Coll. MS. (OE. Homilies, 2nd Series) has isolated instances of ou (nou 219, 3), and the spelling ou occurs sometimes in the older Lagamon MS. (oure, nou, bouren, out, coupe, &c.), but most of the MSS. of the first half of the thirteenth century only have u for OE. ū: so, e.g. the Digby MS. of the Moral Ode (which already has instances of o for ū), St. Katherine, Hali Meidenhad, Anceren Riwele (MS. Nero, A. 14), Ormulum, Cuckoo Song, &c. Even in a number of MSS. of the latter half of the thirteenth century we

² Cf. p. 80.

³ It is of course possible that the spelling o, ou (for OE. u, ū) spread more rapidly in the West than in the East. The frequent use of both o and ou in Lagamon as compared with other contemporary MSS. might be urged in proof of this. But is the Lagamon MS. as early as is generally assumed?

only find u written: so, for instance, Henry III's Proclamation (1258), MS. Cambridge, Gg. 4, 27. 2 (containing Floris and Blanchefur, King Horn, cf. Hausknecht's edition of Fl. and Bl., Berlin, 1885, pp. 115 and 130). MS. Jesus Coll., Oxf., No. 29 (Owl and Nightingale, &c.) appears only to have u, and MS. Corp. Christi Coll., Cambr. 444 (Genesis and Exodus), which was written about 1300, has 'nur in einigen seltenen Fällen ou' (cf. Anzeiger zur Anglia viii. 111, and Anglia v. 67).

The above remarks on the age of our fragment apply, of course, only to the existing copy: the oa, o for ā, the o for u, and the ou for ū, may have been introduced by the scribe. From the retention of the diphthongic spelling in bearnes, dead, shead, and leor one might infer that the original was probably written in the first half of the century (but cf. the diphthongs in the Proclamation of 1258). The use of the runic p by the side of w proves nothing with regard to the age of poem or copy, as this sign occurs in still later MSS., e.g. in Havelok, the existing MS. of which (MS. Laud Misc. 108) dates from the early part of the fourteenth century (cf. Anglia xiii. 192, and Athenæum, Feb. 23, 1889, p. 245).
